SENATE FACES LONG FIGHT ON REVENUE BILL

Adjournment Date Now Uncertain.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 21.—[Special.]—The tariff issue, like the Old Man of the Sea, still rode the senate today, while the billion dollar tax bill waited.

Both sides stuck stubbornly to their positions. Each sought to place the blame for delay on the other. There were predictions that adjournment would not come for weeks and that congress might be forced to continue through the conventions.

It was gloomily agreed that if the tax bill was not approved by the close of the fiscal year on June 30, the results would be serious: the United States might be pushed off the gold standard.

Both Sides Refuse to Yield.

But neither side showed a sign of yielding.

The log-rolling alliance of Republicans and Democrats, who jammed the oil and coal tariffs into the revenue bill last night, were insistent that tariffs on lumber and copper also must go in.

Equally determined, the anti-tariff faction composed of regular Democrats and a sizable handful of Republicans declared they were ready to stay on the firing line until their last round was expended.

Senator James E. Watson of Indiana, Republican leader, believed that adjournment was "way over the horizon."

Senators George H. Moses [Rep., N. H.] and David A. Reed [Rep., Pa.] declared congress must sit through both conventions if necessary. Both are right hand Hoover men; both are delegates to the Republican convention. Senator Moses was chairman of the 1928 convention. Senator Reed is the probable choice for chairman of the resolutions committee in the coming convention. In the present tariff fight, Senator Moses has been anti-tariff and Senator Reed a tariff supporter.

Roosevelt Will Need Delegates.

Their joint statement, announcing that they would stay in Washington until the adoption of the "program which the country not only requires but demands," was taken at face value by some. By others, it was regarded as nothing but another strategic, political move.

Many of the anti-tariff Democrats are Roosevelt delegates and will be needed at the Democratic convention if Roosevelt is to win. With Hoover's nomination taken for granted, the Republican senator-delegates, on the other hand, are in a better position to stay in Washington.

But the Democrats, too, have their way of looking at a continuous session. The Republican convention comes first; some Republicans would be bound to slip away. And a well timed vote might knock the tariffs out of the tax bill again.

Hoover Won't Intervene: Watson.

From Senator Watson, in addition to his prediction that adjournment was a long way off, came an assertion that President Hoover would refuse the demands that have been made on him to call off administration senators who have been insisting that the tariffs go into the bill.

"The President will not intervene," Senator Watson said. "It is the senate's affair and not the President's."

Though the President might refuse to commit himself by direct action, there were signs that the White House was laying plans to bring indirect pressure on congress by stirring up public sentiment for the revenue bill's early passage.

That passage was not furthered by today's session. The senate sat for two hours, talked and took no action, then adjourned, with attendance at a barbecue given by a Washington newspapermen's club in prospect for many members.

What Senate Must Overcome.

Before the passage of the tax bill can be accomplished, the senate must hurdle the following obstacles:

Five hundred amendments to various tariff schedules, which were offered yesterday following adoption of the oil tariff by Senator Millard E. Tydings [Dem., Md.], most active of the anti-tariff group.

An amendment by Senator George W. Norris [radical Rep., Neb.], to attach as a rider to the revenue bill the export debenture plan of farm relief.

An amendment by Senator Park Trammell [Dem., Fla.] for a duty of 8 cents a pound on imports of phosphates.

An amendment by Senator Cordell

WARNERS' SALE OF OWN STOCK NETS 9 MILLIONS

Profit Wiped Out by Later Decline.

Washington, D. C., May 21.—[Special.]—Evidence placed before the senate short selling inquiry committee today disclosed that the three Warner brothers controlling Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., cleaned up between 7 million and $9,251,000 through the sale and repurchase of their own securities during the first nine months of 1930.

Compared to the intricate and involving financial operations which have been spread on the committee record during the investigation of other stock exchange transactions, the account of the Warner Brothers deal was exceedingly simple. The three brothers, Harry M., Albert, and J. L., simply sold several hundred thousand shares of Warner Brothers Pictures stock at an average price of 54½ while the market was going up during the first six months of 1930.

Profits Later Wiped Out.

Then when the stock began to tumble in August and September as the public became acquainted with the fact that Warners Brothers' earnings were slipping, the brothers stepped back in and repurchased their stock at an average of 23⅛, realizing a profit of more than 23 points a share.

Inasmuch as the stock in which they had made a killing continued to tumble until today it stands at just over a dollar a share, senator members of the committee were of the opinion tonight that the profits of the 1930 engineered by the Warner brothers had been wiped out in the general collapse of security values.

Losses May Exceed Profits.

As the three brothers also invested almost half their profits in debentures of their own corporation which have dropped from 93 to 16, the possibility existed that their subsequent losses have been greater than their 1930 profits.

According to William A. Gray, counsel for the committee and on many occasions apparently its principal witness, glowing accounts of the fine condition of the motion picture company were appearing in the newspapers while the three brothers, operating as a unit, and selling through dummy brokerage accounts, were disposing of virtually all their holdings in Warner Brothers Pictures. Then, according to Gray's account, when the three brothers began to repurchase their stocks, their operations were accompanied by widespread publicity, depreciating the value of the corporation.

Considerable divergence developed during the session regarding the exact amount of stock sold and purchased by the three brothers as well as their exact profits.

Harry M. Warner, appearing before the committee as today's witness, admitted under examination that he and his two brothers had sold 231,055 shares of Warner Brothers stock from February on to July, 1930, for the sum of $12,850,540. During July and August the three brothers purchased 340,400 shares of stock for $5,918,382. Their profit out of the transaction, including the value of the increase in their stock holdings during the juggling of the stocks, was $7,394,539, Warner said.

Total Profit Is $9,251,454.

According to the account given the committee by Attorney Gray, the three brothers cleaned up a total profit of $9,251,454 during the summer operations. He produced records from one brokerage house which showed that the three brothers operating as a unit had sold 305,350 shares of Warner Brothers common stock through Schatzain & Co., stock brokers, during the spring and early summer of 1930. This transaction was followed during the next few months, he said, by the purchase of 326,505 shares. Thus at the end of their operations, according to Gray, the firm had 21,155 more shares than when they started.

"The three brothers," Mr. Gray said, "sold their shares on a rising market at an average price of 54½. They bought them back at 23⅛. Thus it is easy to see that their profits were $9,251,454 on the transactions I have enumerated."

Operated Through Dummies.

It was further brought out by Attorney Gray and agreed to by the witness that the Warner brothers made their killing while operating through "dummy" accounts so that other brokers and the general public would not know what they were doing. Mr. Warner contended, however, that the

One of eight youths who intruded upon a private party at 1434 South Kostner avenue, causing a free for all fight, was shot and killed late last night by a brother of the party hostess.

The party, attended by fifteen members of the Parodies Sportsmen's club and an equal number of girls, was given by Miss Susie Lieberman, 21 years old, in the third floor apartment of her sister, Mrs. Anita Smollen. Miss Lieberman lives on the first floor with her married brother, Isaac Lieberman.

Suddenly the uninvited guests, all strangers, appeared. A fight started, continuing to the second floor. There an unwitting victim, Albert Bertini, 19, of 220 North Keystone avenue, a special delivery carrier, was beaten up as he was delivering a letter to Samuel Witzel. The fighters went to the first floor and kicked in a panel in the door of Isaac Lieberman. He was roughly handled by the hoodlum strangers.

As they ran into the street Lieberman poked a rifle through the front window and fired four times. He hit one youth in the neck and in the right eye, killing him almost instantly. The youth, about 25 years old, was not identified. Lieberman was held.

Bandit Left in the Dark Shoots Grocer in Hands

House Leader Turns Wet to Aid Economy

Lafayette, Ind., May 21.—[Special.]—Representative Will R. Wood of the Tenth Indiana district in congress informed Lafayette constituents today that he had been converted to the wet side of the liquor question and would vote for the O'Connor beer revenue bill when it came up Monday in the house. Representative Wood is chairman of the Republican congressional campaign committee and ranking member of the appropriations committee.

"The O'Connor bill can, if for no other reason, be justified upon the ground of raising additional revenue," Wood said in his statement. "It is estimated that it will produce 500 million dollars annually. The country is facing a deficit of two billion dollars and it is increasing at the rate of seven millions daily."

Influenced by Farmers.

"The farmers of the country seem to be largely in favor of the bill. The materials to be used in the beer and ale of 2.75 per cent alcoholic content, as provided in the bill, are to be solely of home production. It provides that the beer or ale authorized shall not be sold in any dry state.

"The government gets three cents for each pint sold and the Supreme court has ruled that congress has the right to define what beverages are not intoxicating. This bill provides that 2.75 per cent beer or ale is not intoxicating."

Justifies His Change.

Washington, D. C., May 21.—[Special.]—Representative Will R. Wood [Rep., Ind.], one of the most consistent drys in congress, tonight said:

"I have made something of a record for economy at this session," said Mr. Wood. "I have voted for every measure that would reduce expenditures and for every measure that would add revenue to the treasury. The O'Connor-Hull bill will raise 500 million dollars through a modification of the Volstead act to permit the manufacture and sale of 2.75 per cent beer, which is nonintoxicating. I believe I will be consistent in voting for such a proposal."

BRIDE MISSES DAYLIGHT TIME SCHEDULE LINER

New York, May 21.—Miss Gertrude C. Shriver, Los Angeles debutante, today missed the liner Lafayette by twenty minutes because she was unaware that shipping schedules here are on daylight saving time.

She had planned to sail on the ship today to be married in Paris to Louis Gaanier, a motion picture director employed by an American company in France.

BISHOP REFUSES TO CURB RADIO TALKS OF FATHER COUGHLIN

Detroit, Mich., May 21.—(AP)—The Rt. Rev. Michael J. Gallagher, bishop of the Catholic diocese of Detroit, announced today that he had "no intention of interfering" with the radio activities of the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin.

Remarks made recently by Cardinal O'Connell of Boston were accepted as a criticism of the activities of the Detroit priest.

Bishop Gallagher said that Father Coughlin in discussing in his radio sermons the use and abuse of wealth and the rights and powers of labor has "said nothing stronger on these subjects than Pope Leo or Pope Pius XI. To accuse him of fomenting class bitterness is to accuse the popes and to accuse Christ of setting class against class."

2 COPS SURPRISE OLD PAL WHEN HE CALLS ON THEM

Charles Russell, 28 years old, 13 East 9th street, heard yesterday that Policemen Benjamin Benson and Louis Jaster, with whom he has been friendly for several years, wished to talk to him. So Russell went to call on them at the 2d district police station.

There he was informed by Desk Sergeant William Dillon that his friends were out. However, the sergeant said, if Mr. Russell would wait he believed he could find them. By dint of several telephone calls the sergeant got in touch with Benson and Jaster. They requested that Mr. Russell wait for them.

"Sure," said the visitor, "I'd wait as long as good old Louie and Ben wanted me to."

Soon the policemen arrived and informed Mr. Russell they wanted him to go outside and discuss a confidential matter. Then they took him to the United Cigar store at 548 South State street and addressed the manager, Gerald Rose.

"Is this the man that held you up last Tuesday?" asked Benson.

"That's the fellow, and he got $12," replied Rose.

Du Pont Purchases Vase; Gets Big Coin Collection

Wilmington, Del., May 21.—(AP)—A $17.50 vase purchased by Alfred I. Du Pont in a curio shop in Cairo, Egypt, has been found to contain ancient coins worth thousands of dollars, Du Pont made known here today. The gold and silver coins are believed to be those known as "pentadrachmae," of the time of Ptolemy, 300 B. C.

Night Parking Ban Goes Into Effect Tonight

At 2 o'clock tomorrow morning police will begin tagging all automobiles parked in the city streets. They will attach notices to the cars warning the owners that parking for more than one hour between 2 a. m. and 6 a. m. is a violation of the traffic code.

The warning will be followed by a court summons for a second violation of the code. This will be done with as little inconvenience to the public as possible, said Commissioner of Police Allman yesterday.

Serve Summonses in Daytime.

"I want to make as little as possible trouble for the car owners," he said. "No one will be awakened in the early hours of the morning for the purpose of serving summonses. That will be done in the daytime."

The ban on night parking has the indorsement of the Association of Commerce, according to George W. Rossetter, president. He declared that since 1927 it has become increasingly evident that night parking has been leading to an increase in auto thefts, resulting in higher insurance rates and creating serious fire and accident hazards.

Early this year the national board of insurance underwriters served notice that automobile theft insurance rates would be raised unless the thefts were reduced. City officials then agreed upon enforcement of the night parking ordinance.

Protests Enforcement.

H. A. Wehmeier, vice president of the Chicago Auto Trade association, protested against the enforcement, declaring that this is not the time to increase the expense of car ownership for the man who can't afford a garage. He said he believed the campaign will reduce auto sales in the low price range.

"Night parking," said Mayor Cermak yesterday, "is a menace to traffic and constitutes a burden to the police by facilitating theft. I earnestly recommend that owners of garages and guarded parking places give sympathetic consideration to the problem of getting cars off the streets at night with a minimum expense to the owners consistent with a small profit to themselves."

SAITO ORDERED TO ORGANIZE NEW JAP CABINET

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, May 22 [Sunday.]—Admiral Viscount Makoto Saito, vice navy minister during the Russian-Japanese war and former governor general of Corea and delegate to the naval disarmament council in Geneva in 1927, was called to the palace today by the emperor and ordered to form a new cabinet.

Failing to find a capable leader among the men now in the prime of life, Japan turned to an elder statesman who helped to guide the nation thirty years ago in the Russo-Japanese crisis to lead the government in the present crisis.

Admiral Count Gombei Yamamoto, navy minister during the Russian war and later premier, had been mentioned as a likely choice to form the new cabinet. Yamamoto, who is 78, apparently did not desire to form a government. Saito has been ill for several years and he expressed a desire that Prince Saionji, elder statesman, call a younger man.

"Party men and nonparty men, we are all Japanese," Saito said, "and in the present crisis we should not draw the line. If the leaders of the country today realize the gravity of the situation they should coöperate."

80 Coreans Slain.

MUKDEN, Manchuria, May 21.—(AP)—A dispatch to the Rengo News agency from the Japanese branch consulate at Panshih, in southern Kirin province, today said eighty Corean farmers west of there were slain by Chinese rebels who raided the district.

BREAKS OCEAN RECORD; LANDS IN IRISH FIELD

Tells of Her 15 Hour Hop Over Atlantic.

BY ROBERT SAYERS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDONDERRY, North Ireland, May 21.—Mrs. Amelia Earhart Putnam, having achieved the first solo flight by a woman across the Atlantic ocean—2,026½ miles in 14 hours and 54 minutes—rested at Elms Brookhall, near here, tonight and talked freely and jokingly of the feat. To a day it was the fifth anniversary of Lindbergh's record flight to Paris.

Mrs. Putnam will not continue her flight to Paris, but will dismantle the plane and ship it back to America. She probably will go on to Rome, where a flyers' congress is in session.

"I made this flight just for fun," she said tonight. "I have always wanted to do the flight myself and my husband is a good sport. He does not interfere with my flying and I don't interfere with his affairs. When he was satisfied that I was confident I could make the trip he consented, and here I am."

Lands in a Pasture.

Mrs. Putnam's adventure began at Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, at 4:51 p. m. [Chicago time] yesterday—Friday. It ended when she landed at 1:45 p. m. today [7:45 a. m. Chicago time] in a pasture in a mountainous district at Culmore, 5 miles from Londonderry, in northern Ireland. Mrs. Putnam is a former Chicagoan.

She was forced down when her plane's engine developed a leaky gasoline pipe, which prevented her from continuing to Paris, her intended destination. Neither the flyer nor the machine was hurt.

Sets Speed Record.

By her flight of 14 hours 54 minutes Mrs. Putnam set a new speed record for Atlantic crossings. The two previous records were set by Alcock and Brown in their flight from Newfoundland to Ireland, 16 hours 12 minutes, and Wiley Post and Harold Gatty, Newfoundland to England, 16 hours 17 minutes.

Mrs. Putnam was astounded to learn on landing that she had come down in Ireland. She thought she had reached France.

"I must have got off my route," she said.

She reported that she was slightly deaf from the roar of her engine.

Escapes Disaster on Landing.

When asked how her solo flight compared with her previous Atlantic flight in the seaplane Friendship in 1928, Mrs. Putnam replied:

"O, there is no comparison. On this trip I was flying low the whole time and had to rely on myself."

On the previous flight she was accompanied by two men, Wilmer Stultz and Lou Gordon.

Mrs. Putnam said she almost met disaster when she landed.

Her plane came to rest within a few yards of the farmer's cottage. She, very tired and half blinded by the continuous strain on her eyes, did not see the house until the plane stopped.

"It would have been exasperating to crash into the cottage after safely landing," she said, "but my luck held out."

Second Flight Across Sea.

Mrs. Putnam by her flight not only became the first woman ever to make a transoceanic flight alone but is also the first human ever to span the Atlantic twice by heavier than air craft.

After landing, the daring aviatrix left her plane in the field and hurried to the nearest road, where she hailed an automobile. She asked the astonished driver to take her to the nearest town. He rushed her into Londonderry, where she sent the news of her arrival to America and London.

She said she was overjoyed at the success of her flight, but was sorry she was unable to fly on to Paris.

Lost Way in Storm.

Nobody in the town recognized the aviatrix. When she handed in her cables and telegrams at the postoffice the staff members eyed her askance and held whispered consultations as to whether she might be a practical joker.

However, the news of her identity rapidly spread around town and a crowd gathered outside the building. When she reappeared outside the crowd broke into wild cheering and she was nearly mobbed by the friendly throng.

Mrs. Putnam in relating the story of her flight revealed that for more than ten hours she was in danger of the plane taking fire.

"I landed at 1:45 p. m. this afternoon, having been 14 hours 54 minutes on the trip," she said. "I noticed a flame at the exhaust manifold about four hours after leaving Newfoundland and became very uneasy.

"As it would have taken about four hours to return, I decided to go ahead and take the risk. Then I was troubled by a leaking gasoline tank and was greatly worried as to whether my fuel would last out the trip. To make matters worse, I ran into heavy weather which greatly reduced my speed. I flew through storms, mist, rain, and fog.

"I sighted land at about the middle part of Ireland and then flew north. Then I spotted railway lines, which I followed to Londonderry, but could find no place to land. Eventually I came down in a field. I'm not one bit hurt and I think the plane's O. K.

Says She's Nearly Broke.

"All I had for nourishment on the trip was some tomato soup. I have only $20 in American money, which my husband handed me as I was leaving Hasbrouck Heights, N. J. I haven't even a check to sign."

At this point the owner of the field, a man named Gallagher, broke in to say that Mrs. Putnam need not worry about money, as he would see her through in this respect.

She also told the story of her flight to her husband, George Palmer Putnam, New York publisher, by trans-Atlantic telephone.

Mrs. Putnam returned this evening from Londonderry to the spot where she landed and is staying overnight with Mrs. Francis McClure at Elms Brookhall, near Londonderry. She said she wanted to "take a bath and get some sleep."

Britain Loud in Praise.

Mrs. Putnam landed near the spot where the first flight across the ocean—that of Alcock and Brown, British flyers—ended in June, 1919.

The British Isles were lavish in their praise of Mrs. Putnam. The marquess of Londonderry, British secretary of state for air, who is at present in northern Ireland, telephoned her congratulations.

Commander Perrin, secretary of the Royal Aero club, said:

"It was a wonderful performance and a very difficult feat of endurance and navigation of which she should be very proud. It all goes to show that women in the air are the equals of men."

Flew Lockheed Vega Plane.

Mrs. Putnam flew a Lockheed Vega monoplane powered with an air cooled Wasp engine. It is similar in almost every respect to the Winnie Mae, in which Wiley Post and Harold Gatty established their eight day record around the world last year.

Mrs. Putnam's plane, which has no name but carries the number NR-7952 on the lower side of the wings and on the scarlet tail fin, has a top speed of 180 miles an hour and cruises most economically at between 150 and 160 miles an hour. She carried a fuel supply of 420 gallons of gasoline and 20 gallons of oil.

Started from New Jersey.

Mrs. Putnam began her flight from Hasbrouck Heights, N. J., at 2:16 p. m., Thursday, Chicago time. She landed at St. John, N. B., at 5:46 p. m., the same day. She left St. John at 7:02 a. m., yesterday for Harbor Grace, N. F., 700 miles away, where she landed at 11:31 a. m. After resting about five hours she headed out across the ocean.

Mrs. Putnam was accompanied on the first stages of her flight, from Hasbrouck Heights to Harbor Grace, by Bernt Balchen, famous pilot and explorer, and Eddie Gorski, mechanic. Balchen gave her the full benefit of all his extensive knowledge of overseas flying.

Mrs. Putnam's flight today was her second successful crossing of the Atlantic by air. Her previous flight was in 1928, when she flew as a passenger with two men—the late Wilmer Stulz, pilot, and Lou Gordon, mechanic.

On that trip they flew from Trepassey, N. F., in the Fokker seaplane Friendship, to Burry Port, Wales, where they landed out of gasoline. That flight took 20 hours 49 minutes.

Crowd Waits at Paris.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, May 21.—They kept the Atlantic watch again today at the Le Bourget air field, where five years ago today Col. Lindbergh dropped out of the sky onto the pages of history.

Despite a rain a good crowd, mostly members of the American colony and including Ambassador Edge and the entire embassy staff, waited on the field all day for Amelia Earhart Putnam. The crowd was just dispersing in the belief that she was lost when the news of her arrival in Ireland was flashed from London.

There was no special ceremony at the field in honor of Col. Lindbergh's flight. Most of those who went out went as much to see another trans-Atlantic flyer arrive as to make a sentimental pilgrimage.

MOTORSHIP SAILS FOR EAST WITH CARGO OF CORN

The motorship ILI-103 of the Seaboard Great Lakes corporation left the Goodrich docks last night with a cargo of corn for New York and Philadelphia.

Although designed for coastwise traffic, according to Capt. William Lansing, the boat is of sufficiently shallow draft to permit negotiation of the Welland and the New York barge canals and so low of superstructure that it can pass through the Chicago river without necessity of raising the bridges.

The ship is 254 feet long with a 36 foot beam, twin screws and a capacity of 1,500 tons, and makes the trip to New York City in ten days.

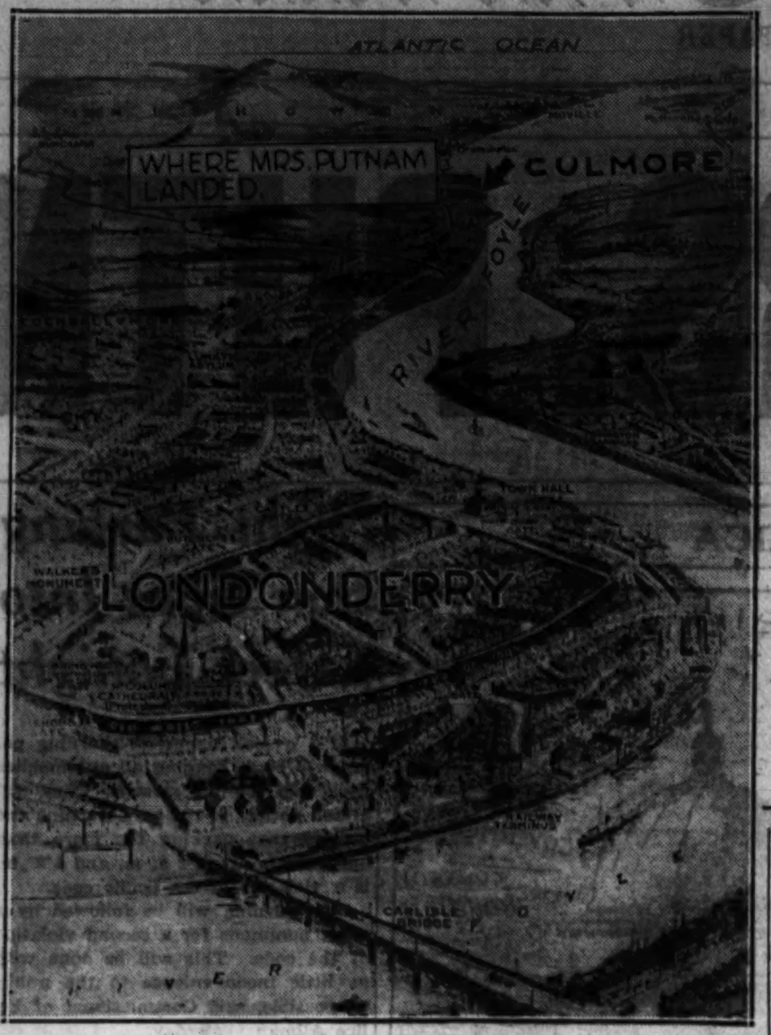
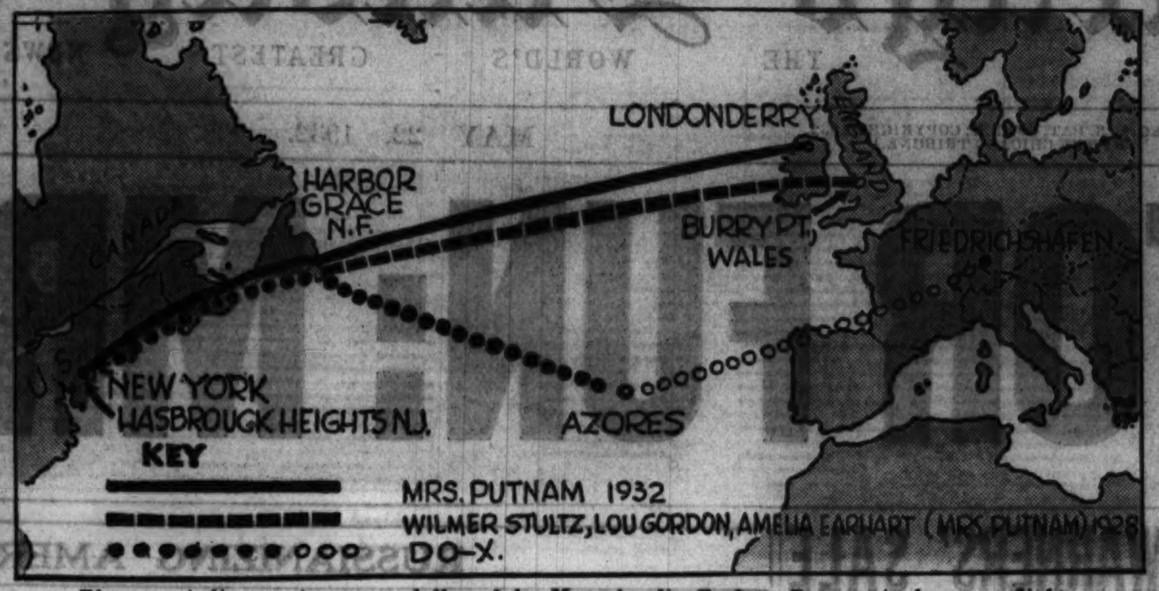
Maps Show How Daring Aviatrix Set Record in Solo Flight Across Atlantic Ocean



Photodiagram showing Londonderry, northern Ireland, in the foreground, and Culmore, five miles away, where Amelia Putnam landed after flying Atlantic alone. She came into Londonderry to notify the world of her success.



The map indicates the routes followed by Mrs. Amelia Earhart Putnam in her two flights across the Atlantic ocean. The flight which she completed yesterday began at Hasbrouck Heights, N. J. She stopped at St. John, New Brunswick, and again at Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, from where she took off, headed for Paris. She landed in a pasture at Culmore, five miles from Londonderry, northern Ireland. In her former flight in June, 1928, on which she was accompanied by Wilmer Stulz, pilot, and Lou Gordon, mechanic, she took off from Trepassey, Newfoundland, and landed at Burry Port, Wales. The German air liner DO-X landed late last night in the Azores on its way back to Friedrichshafen, on Lake Constance, Switzerland. The huge ship took off early yesterday morning from Holyrood, Newfoundland, about 24 miles from Harbor Grace.

Chicago Friends Laud Amelia for Flight Across Atlantic

BY KATHLEEN M'LAUGHLIN.

Chicago friends of Amelia Earhart Putnam had been certain all along that she would conquer the Atlantic. As close to her in spirit as they were distant in the flesh, her old friends here were cheering yesterday the second great feat of aviation's "gallant lady" in flying the Atlantic solo. Her first claim to fame was the flight of 1928 when she crossed the Atlantic in the plane "Friendship" with Wilmer Stulz, pilot, and Lou Gordon, mechanic.

There was no hysteria in the acclaim that resounded in Chicago yesterday. Young Bill Gemmill, son of the late Judge William N. Gemmill, and one of her classmates in 1915, when she was being graduated from Hyde Park High school, epitomized the attitude of all who knew her then, or who met her when she accompanied the crew of the "Friendship" on the triumphal tour of 1928.

"She was the one person who's made that flight about whom I wasn't worrying a bit," he said. "I had the conviction all the time that if she started, she'd win through. Isn't she a grand person, though?"

Friend of Family Confident.

That same confidence in the navigating competence of the girl she always calls "Millie" was embodied in the comment of her mother's old friend, Mrs. L. F. Shedd, 10338 South Wood street. It was at the Shedd home, located then at 9600 Prospect avenue, that Amelia lived during her school days in the Hyde Park district.

"I was just writing a letter to Millie's mother," she told a reporter. "I hadn't heard that Millie had started until late last night, and before we had time to get worried she was across. She's a wonderful girl and capable, and we are thrilled at her success."

Maj. Reed Landis, world war ace and another member of the Hyde Park High school class of 1915, who was among the most enthusiastic greeters of the first woman trans-Atlantic air passenger on her previous public appearance in Chicago, was on a fishing trip in Michigan yesterday when the report of her arrival in Ireland was flashed back across the ocean. Several other Chicagoans who were prominent in the local fêtes given the aviatrix at that time were also away yesterday and could not be reached for comments.

Out to Vindicate Self.

Attorney Gemmill, who took an active part in the celebration Chicago staged for his old schoolmate four years ago, emphasized yesterday his feeling that the first woman to fly the Atlantic had undertaken the trip primarily to vindicate herself of the stigma of "excess baggage" which she applied to herself on her first crossing.

"Remember how she insisted she wasn't due for any credit?" he recalled. "How she kept saying that it was Stultz and Gordon who had turned the trick, and that she shouldn't rate any applause? It got under her skin, I'm certain, because people fêted her just because she was a woman. I think it had a good deal to do with this second trip."

Interviews that she gave following her arrival at Burry Port, South Wales, and also on her trip to Chicago, were being recalled yesterday in connection with her victory over Father Neptune's regions. Her protests against being lionized began from the time the "Friendship's" crew was welcomed abroad.

Said Woman Could Do It.

"Although I didn't handle the controls," she wrote in a special article on the flight at that time, published in THE TRIBUNE, "I believe a woman could, if trained. I don't believe women lack stamina to do a solo trip across the Atlantic, but it would be a matter of learning to fly by instrument alone—an art which only a few men pilots know perfectly now. Among the masters I would rank my two friends, Bill and Slim, who brought me over."

Of her mental attitude toward her previous attempt, nothing could better express the intrepid spirit in which it was undertaken than her farewell message to her sister, in which she said:

"If I fail I shall be glad to pop off in such a real adventure."

Recall Interview Here.

Mrs. Putnam has a habit of sitting with her feet curled up on the chair under her. She was thus ensconsed on a divan in a suite at the Shoreland hotel the morning of her arrival in Chicago four years ago when one of the reporters gathered around her put this query:

"Would you make the trip again?"

The then Miss Earhart paused to give the matter serious consideration. She was silent a few moments and then spoke deliberately.

"No—I don't believe I would. The risk is too great."

BERWYN POLICEMAN DIES.

John Kopal, 47 years old, a Berwyn policeman for the last six years, died in his home, 2529 Home avenue, last evening of intestinal trouble. He is survived by his widow, Anna, and four daughters.

FOUR WOMEN DIED ATTEMPTING TO FLY ATLANTIC

New York, May 21.—(AP)—Amelia Earhart Putnam, making her second flight over the Atlantic ocean, is one of seven women who have attempted the trip.

Four women lost their lives in the attempt. In August, 1927, Princess Lowenstein-Wirtheim was lost in a flight from England to Canada with two men. In December of that year Mrs. Francis W. Grayson was lost on a flight to Denmark with three men.

The following spring, in March, 1928, Elsie Mackay and Capt. Walter R. G. Hinchcliffe disappeared, and in January, 1931, Mrs. Beryl Hart and Lieut. William S. MacLaren were lost.

GIANT AIR LINER DO-X LANDS AT AZORES ISLANDS

HORTA, Azores, May 21.—(AP)—The German flying boat DO-X, largest heavier-than-air craft, arrived here at 10:55 p. m. tonight [7:55 p. m. Chicago daylight saving time] on her homeward flight from America to Lake Constance, Switzerland.

The 12 motored seaplane alighted north of Fayal island and taxied around to the waters off Horta, on the southeast side, to complete the flight from Holyrood, Newfoundland, in 16 hours and 55 minutes.

Hundreds of persons who had gathered on the breakwater and seawall along the Bay of Horta welcomed the huge air liner with its crew of thirteen, including Fraulein Antonia Strassman, woman passenger who was signed as assistant purser. Flares were sent up to help the crew locate the anchorage.

The 100 passenger plane used two hours and one minute longer to reach Horta than Amelia Earhart Putnam took to cover approximately twice the distance in reaching Culmore, northern Ireland, from Newfoundland.

The two airships, Mrs. Putnam's trim, crimson, gold striped monoplane and the huge German built air liner, had left ten hours and nine minutes apart from points in Newfoundland 24 miles removed. The DO-X lifted itself from the waters off Holyrood at 3 a. m. today while Mrs. Putnam had roared away from the airport at Harbor Grace at 4:51 p. m. yesterday.

Seven thousand gallons of gasoline swished against the sides of the vast fuel reservoirs of the DO-X as it took off and it burned on its flight more gallons each hour than the 420 gallons that were in Mrs. Putnam's tanks when she took off.

If Fraulein Strassman continues with the DO-X to Europe, she will become the second woman ever to cross the Atlantic by plane.

Amelia Earhart Putnam Lands in Ireland—First Woman to Fly Sea Alone

Flew Blind Four Hours; Fought Ice on Wings.

New York, May 21.—(AP)—In six thrill filled minutes George Palmer Putnam heard over a trans-Atlantic telephone line from 'ir flying wife, Amelia Earhart Putnam, this afternoon the story of her perilous solo flight across the Atlantic.

His face showing weariness from a sleepless vigil, he waited impatiently while operators worked to put the connection through. Then he vetoed a suggestion that a stenotype record be made of the conversation and retired to a room by himself while they talked.

He was smiling broadly and looked relieved when he finished.

Flew Blind Four Hours.

"It was a burned out collector ring that caused the trouble," he said. "She flew with it for about ten hours. She said that, since she'd rather drown than burn up, she flew right on top of the water most of the way.

"For four hours it was absolutely black and she flew blind. It was rough as the devil. It wasn't an awfully good connection, but I think she said she flew high at first, but met ice and had to drop for that reason

"Tired? She sounded pretty fresh.

"No, I don't think she was very sleepy. It's too exciting and too hard work to fly blind with a sick engine to get sleepy.

Enjoyed "Meal" Over Ocean.

"She said she enjoyed the meal. Let's see—a bottle of hot chicken soup, a cake of chocolate, and two cans of tomato juice. She managed that by poking a hole in the cans with an ice pick and using a straw."

Putnam reached for his coat, which he had discarded in the warmth of the room. A photographer came in for a picture. Obviously proud and excited, he made an effort to talk calmly.

"This makes her the first flyer to have crossed the Atlantic wice, you know," he said.

Then he laughed.

"As her husband," he added. "I guess it would be proper to remark I hope it doesn't become a habit."

Aviatrix Praises Plane.

Putnam had far from a passive part in the adventure, however. He was the manager throughout, and it was his word "Miss Earhart," as he called her, awaited before forming further plans.

He conferred with Maj. Edwin Aldrin, chief of the aviation division of an oil company, on plans for having a new collector ring rushed to the plane.

He said Miss Earhart was enthusiastic in praise of the motor. It gave "beautiful service" and it was just the "extraneous fittings" which went wrong. A broken fuel guage made it impossible for her to know how her gasoline supply was holding out, he said.

Miss Earhart was to spend the night with Mrs. Frances McClure of Londonderry, wife of a merchant there, and tomorrow to be flown to London in a commercial plane to give a radio broadcast at 5 p. m. [noon, Chicago daylight saving time].

Will Be Lady Astor's Guest.

In London she is to be the guest of Lord and Lady Astor, Putnam said. She had been invited to Paris as the guest of Countess Violet di Sibour, and to Rome, where the Italian government next week will entertain trans-Atlantic flyers. But her plans are not certain.

"I may go over to meet her—just to come back with her," Putnam said. "I think she'll probably be there about two weeks. But I can't be sure, because, unfortunately for me, I have business which will take me to California next Tuesday or Wednesday."

Mother Is Delighted.

Medford, Mass., May 21.—(AP)—Word that Mrs. Putnam had alighted safely at Londonderry, Ireland, today, delighted her gray haired mother, Mrs. Amy Earhart, and her sister, Mrs. Muriel Earhart Morrissey.

"It goes without saying that we are delighted that she has landed safely," said Mrs. Morrissey. "It means a lot to mother that she has reached dry land, even if she did not get to Paris as she wished. Any landing is good."

Either they have implicit confidence in Mrs. Putnam as a flyer or her flights have become somewhat a routine matter for her mother and sister. Both retired as usual last night and the usual household tasks occupied them today.

Hoover Sends Congratulations.

Washington, D. C., May 21.—(AP)—President Hoover today sent a cable to Mrs. Putnam, congratulating her upon her trans-Atlantic flight as demonstrating "the capacity of women to match the skill of men in carrying through the most difficult feats of high adventure."

"I voice the pride of the nation in congratulating you most heartily upon achieving the splendid pioneer solo flight by a woman across the Atlantic ocean.

"You have demonstrated not only your own dauntless courage but also the capacity of women to match the skill of men in carrying through the most difficult feats of high adventure.

"HERBERT HOOVER."

"Simply Great!" Byrd Says.

Boston, Mass., May 21.—(AP)—Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, Arctic and trans-Atlantic flier, enthusiastically received word of the success of Mrs. Putnam's solo flight to Ireland.

"Simply great!" Admiral Byrd exclaimed. "Amelia Putnam is an extraordinary person. I know of no man who has more courage than she. There is absolutely no excuse now for a man to feel proud about his exploits as a male."

Reveal Balchen's Warning.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., May 21.—(AP)—Word of Mrs. Putnam's safe landing in Ireland was received here with rejoicing by Bernt Balchen and Eddie Gorski, her adviser and mechanic in the flight preparations.

Mrs. Putnam was advised against the flight at this time by Balchen, the latter said, because of the danger of low temperatures causing formation of sleet on the plane. However, with news of her landing, both he and Gorski made known their satisfaction.

Balchen said he had a set of plans for a trans-Atlantic flight in preparation which he hoped would eclipse all previous attempts.

GOVERNOR BACKS ECONOMY PLAN FOR MINNESOTA

Minneapolis, Minn., May 21.—[Special.]—Gov. Floyd B. Olson will put into effect a program contemplating economies in Minnesota state expenditures of $1,000,000, it was learned today. The plan will include a wage reduction affecting 10,000 state employés, with a saving of $700,000 and a wage reduction of $300,000 in materials and supplies. The economy plan, worked out by Gov. Olson and Mrs. Jean W. Wittich, state budget commissioner, will be announced this week.

SUCCESS OF AIR HEROINE IS LAID TO HARD WORK

First Flight Served to Whet Ambition.

Mrs. Amelia Earhart Putnam, America's premier aviatrix, was born in 1898 in Atchison, Kas., where she lived until she was in her teens. Her father was an attorney, and her mother, whose maiden name was Amy Otis, was of a family well known in Kansas history. Her forbears had been established for generations at Germantown, Pa., and were of old Quaker stock, quite wealthy. Amelia and her sister, Muriel, attended the Episcopal church.

Reverses in the family fortunes when Amelia and Muriel were growing up decided their mother to put them in a public school, and they came to Chicago in 1914. For nearly a year Amelia remained at the home of Mrs. L. F. Shed, her mother's old friend, at 10338 South Wood street. She made few friends among her classmates at the high school and upset an old tradition by dodging the class dinner and the graduation exercises. She went back the next day for her diploma.

Her schooling was continued in Ogontz school for girls in Philadelphia, but was interrupted by her leaving that institution to join the Canadian Red Cross in 1917 as a nurse's aid for war service. When the armistice was signed she enrolled for a pre-medical course at Columbia university and later went to California, where she came into a small inheritance, and immediately elected to expend it on a plane for herself and flying lessons.

Some time later she returned to the east, where she was an instructor for an extension course at Lowell. This was followed by social service work. When she received the invitation to accompany Wilmer Stulz and Lou Gordon to Europe aboard the seaplane Friendship in 1928 she was a worker at Denison house in Boston. Her excursion to Burry Port, Wales, terminated that adventure.

Seeks Greater Achievement.

Miss Earhart, however, felt that she had not achieved a great deal by merely riding in the plane as a passenger and she returned to the United States resolved on greater achievement. She threw herself energetically into work, went to New York from her home in Boston, and was appointed aviation editor of Cosmopolitan.

She purchased a small sport biplane and flew to Los Angeles. It was the first time a woman had ever accomplished the transcontinental flight without a male pilot or navigator. She returned as she went out, flying her own machine. This was nine years after she started flying lessons with money earned by working in a telephone exchange in Los Angeles.

Enters Air Derby.

Yet, she was still a long way from achieving her secret ambition. During the winter she kept up her flying and then during the following summer, with a faster plane, a Lockheed Vega, she joined the best woman pilots of the country in flying the transcontinental Derby from Santa Monica to Cleveland as one event in the national air races. She finished in third place.

That same year she joined Transcontinental Air Transport as assistant traffic manager, and at once launched a campaign to sell flying to women and to men who blamed their wives for their refusal to fly. She spoke at luncheons and dinners, at clubs and wherever there was an opportunity. She is an accomplished speaker—not an "orator," merely a convincing, interesting speaker.

Joins New Company.

With the forming of the Ludington Air lines three years ago to operate an "every hour on the hour" service between New York and Washington, Miss Earhart resigned her position with Transcontinental to become vice president in charge of public relations for the new company. "Public relations" she did not consider as a job in which one flooded newspaper offices with mimeograph sheets telling of the virtues of her company, but a position that required her to meet any one and every one who wanted to write, learn, talk about, or ride on her air line. The work kept her occupied from morning until night and often far into the evening.

Meanwhile, Miss Earhart kept up her flying and was preparing to enter the National Air races of 1930 when she discovered that the rules were, in her opinion, decidedly unfair to the girls. She spoke her mind on the subject so vigorously that she was at once appointed a member of the contest committee of the National Aeronautical association, which is the power behind the regulation of all accredited air sporting events in this country.

Rules Are Modified.

The following year the girl flyers found things more to their liking, and this year at Cleveland nearly half of the important events have been reserved for women, while in a number of races formerly open only to men, women are allowed to enter.

Last year Miss Earhart spent some time touring the country with an autogiro. Flying is expensive, but with characteristic resource she found a packing company that would subsidize her and she flew serenely through the skies of a score of states in her windmill plane.

With all the experience secured through these years of work, she finally decided that she was in a position to fly across the Atlantic alone. How good her judgment was she demonstrated today.

Mrs. Putnam's father, Edwin S. Earhart, died a couple of years ago in Los Angeles. Her mother, from whom he had been separated for years, is now living in Medford, Mass., as is her sister, Mrs. Muriel Morrissey.

SENATE FACES LONG BATTLE ON REVENUE BILL

Adjournment Before the Conventions Uncertain.

Hull [Dem., Tenn.], to cut all present tariff duties one-fifth on all imports on which the tariffs exceed 40 per cent of the value of the article.

Face New Dry Law Fight.

A reconsideration of the votes by which the 1918 and 1922 individual income and surtax rates were defeated, with anti-tariff Democrats threatening to join the radical ranks and put the higher rates over.

A reopening of the prohibition controversy through reconsiderations of votes by which the Tydings beer amendment was defeated and a tax on brewers' wort was adopted.

A further prohibition fight over an amendment to be proposed by Senator Hiram Bingham [Rep., Conn.], to legalize and tax beer of 3.75 per cent alcoholic content by weight.

The Bingham amendment is designed to raise 375 millions in revenue and thus permit the automobile tax proposed in the tax bill to be cut in half, the postal increases to be eliminated, a $5 exemption inserted in the stamp tax on bank checks, and the telephone and telegraph taxes and the admissions tax to be done away with.

Senator Reed Smoot of the copper state of Utah, who is in charge of the tax bill and one of those chiefly responsible for keeping the tariff provisions in the measure, was reported as being ready with a motion to send all amendments to the finance committee, there to be bottled up and forgotten.

Senator Tydings' reply was that such a move would not succeed in stopping him.

"If the motion is made to send the amendments to committee," he declared, "I will move to recommit the whole tax bill. If that fails then I shall present every one of my 500 amendments from the floor."

BLAMES BOTH PARTIES

Washington, D. C., May 21.—[Special.]—Republican and protectionist Democratic members of the senate finance committee are to blame for injecting the tariff fight into consideration of the revenue bill, it was asserted tonight in a speech by Senator Pat Harrison [Dem., Miss.], the finance committee's ranking Democratic member.

Senator Harrison described the difficulty of framing a tax bill in the face of protests against this tax and that from all over the country, and with the "city of Washington swamped with lobbyists employing their arguments in an effort to wreck the tax bill."

Injected Items Into Bill.

Into such a situation, calling for compromise and attention to the needs of the country rather than of particular sections of the country, he said, a majority of the finance committee had insisted on injecting the four tariff items—on oil, coal, lumber, and copper—which the tax bill now contains.

"On the finance committee some of us, but unfortunately not a majority of us," said Senator Harrison, "opposed the incorporation of any tariff rates in this revenue measure. We did that without respect to the merits or demerits of the tariff proposals.

"We employed the argument with our colleagues that if these tariff items should be included in the revenue bill they would provoke sharp controversy and long delay, and arouse a feeling that might endanger the passage of the bill. Every prophecy we made in the committee on finance regarding these tariff items has come true.

"For three days now the bill has been held up because of these tariff discussions. And there is now created in the senate an ugly situation, the repercussion of which, it is feared, may be reflected in votes upon other items, important in character, which are to be considered when the tariff items are finally out of the way."

Latest Land Bank Default Recalls Promises of U. S.

BY PAUL POTTER.

The status of Uncle Sam's two billion dollar farm financing project, created in 1916 to give farmers credit to buy farms, has been brought to the attention of several hundred thousand farmers and investors again this week with announcement of a default on bond interest by one of the 49 joint stock land banks in the system.

The latest defaulter among the land banks, formed with private capital but subject to red tape restrictions in Washington, is the Southern Minnesota joint stock land bank, of Minneapolis. This bank has more than $21,000,000 in unmatured bonds, $11,000,000 tied up in farm mortgages, $6,000,000 in foreclosed real estate and $3,000,000 in sheriff's certificates or judgments uncollected.

3 Others Liquidate.

Three other such banks have been liquidated through receiverships. Only 19 of the 49 banks scattered from coast to coast have ever paid dividends. The situation would not be regarded as so startling, according to bond and shareholders, were it not for the fact that the government has failed to keep the promises it made in the early days of the system.

Many high government officials, including even the late President Wilson, have at one time or another emphasized to farmers and investors the security in farm credits made possible by this legislation.

Congressman Henry T. Rainey of Illinois, in speeches before congress, has attempted to bring that body to realize its moral and financial responsibility in safeguarding its land credit system. He has repeatedly pointed out that the government has not kept its promises either to farmers or investors.

Scandals and convictions have marked the path of regulating the farm loan system. As with the federal reserve system, the farm loan board is headed by the secretary of the treasury. Its members are appointed by the President. Not until criminal irregularities in the joint stock land banks were divulged was a general shakeup in the board's membership and policies brought about under President Coolidge. Eugene Meyer was appointed to the board, and many district officials were ousted or brought to court.

In one court action involving the joint stock land bank in southern Illinois and Indiana it was shown that a federal appraiser had approved loans on three farms in one Indiana locality, and that on all three he had appraised the same herd of cows, horses, and other live stock. The man who had moved the stock from one farm to the other was sent to the penitentiary while the federal appraiser was excused as "dumb."

Only One Goes to Prison.

Walter Cravens, formerly of Chicago, was sentenced to six years in prison and fined $25,000 for misappropriating land bank funds and making false entries. Guy Huston, another Chicagoan, was convicted of false use of the mails in sending out incorrect information on the southern Minnesota bank, but a higher court reversed the conviction. Huston charged he had been "persecuted, not prosecuted," by members of the farm loan board.

Red tape persists today in the handling of farm loans by the board, it was charged recently by officials in the United States Chamber of Commerce. While joint stock land banks are privately owned, every official act must be approved in Washington, and it sometimes requires six months to obtain approval of loan applications.

Some in Good Condition.

Some of the land banks remain in good condition, according to experts on mortgages in La Salle street, and the bonds in recent months have fared almost as well as government securities. Insurance companies and joint stock land banks have no money to lend on farms, and at present practically the only source of revenue is the federal land banks. The farm loan board in January was given an added 125 millions for credit extension by congress. Even these loans are so restricted that a banker in Grundy county, Illinois, this month has been unable to obtain a loan on 600 acres of clear title land.

HOOVER AT CAMP FOR WEEK-END; STIMSON A GUEST

Skyland, Va., May 21.—(AP)—Around a roaring open fire in the "town hall" of their Rapidan fishing camp in the Virginia mountains, President and Mrs. Hoover tonight entertained seven guests.

The chief executive did not reach the Blue Ridge mountains retreat until late afternoon, and retired at once to his cabin to rest before dinner.

Mrs. Hoover and Mrs. Edgar Rickard of New York, who drove to the camp yesterday, awaited the arrival of the President's party.

During the evening Mr. Hoover chatted with Secretary Stimson about conditions in Europe as he found them during his visit to the Geneva disarmament conference.

Present also were Representative Tilson [Rep., Conn.] and Mrs. Tilson, Frank Knox, Chicago publisher; Mr. Rickard, New York business man; and Henry Allen, former Republican senator from Kansas.

The President plans to return late tomorrow.

Fear for Ohio Teacher Who Disappeared After Threats

Akron, O., May 21.—(AP)—Alarm was felt today by relatives and police for the safety of Lawson E. Miller, 24, Akron school teacher, who disappeared mysteriously Thursday after reputedly receiving threats against his life. Miller's wife told police that twice in the last ten days he had been "warned" to leave Akron.

WARNERS' SALE OF OWN STOCK NETS 9 MILLIONS

Market Collapse Wipes Out Profits.

sales and purchases of stock had been made not for the purpose of cleaning up a big profit but because the firm needed working capital.

He denied an intimation by Attorney Gray to the effect that the three brothers had deliberately taken advantage of their special knowledge of the earnings of Warner Brothers to unload without letting the other stockholders in the corporation know what they were doing. Mr. Warner said he had no idea that the stocks would go so low when they began to sell.

Take "Lamb's Skin with Wool."

The disclosures in connection with the Warner deal provoked acrid comment from committee members. Indignation was expressed by Senator James Couzens [Rep., Mich.] and Senator John J. Townsend Jr. [Rep., Del.] at what was termed an example of a corporation using inside information regarding the condition of its company to make money by selling and buying its stocks on the market.

Warner indicated, under questioning by Senator Couzens, that it was a fairly common practice for executives to speculate in the shares of their companies and attempted to defend the practice. His explanation was impatiently brushed aside by Chairman Peter Norbeck [Rep., S. D.] with the remark that the Warners and other speculators of the last few years appeared to have taken the skin of the lamb along with the wool.

Trading in Own Stocks Usual.

"It appears," said Senator Couzens at this point, "that many managers and directors of corporations are more interested in manipulating their stocks than in developing their business."

"The fact is," interjected Norbeck, "that you people profited by the whole transaction."

"That's a fact," answered the witness.

"Mr. Warner has testified," said Senator Couzens, "that he thinks it perfectly proper for the officers of a company, with inside information on its affairs, to trade back and forth in the company's stock. Why beat about the bush? Isn't it a common practice in New York for the officers of a company to trade in their own stocks?"

"I should say that it probably is," agreed Warner.

"Didn't you know," spoke up Attorney Gray, "that after you sold at a top price a pool was formed which shot the stock up much higher?"

Mr. Warner said he did not know that any pool had been formed.

Warner Bought Debentures.

In amplifying his explanation as to why he and his two brothers had sold the great majority of their stock in the spring and early summer of 1930, Warner aroused committee interest with his statement that a portion of the proceeds of the sales had been invested in debentures of the company. Attorney Gray then brought out that by purchasing the debentures the three brothers had put their money into obligations which had first call upon the assets of the company in event it ever liquidated and which up to the present time still paid interest.

Mr. Gray also pointed out that the three brothers had made their sales at a time when a dividend reduction was imminent.

Mr. Warner testified that out of their profits the three brothers had purchased $500,000 in debentures in May, 1930; $400,000 in June, 1930; $2,000,000 in July, 1930, and $465,000 in August, 1930. In all, he said, debentures amounting to $3,365,000 were purchased. These debentures are now selling at $16, while the stock is down around a dollar.

After today's hearing the steering comittee decided to attempt to wind up its investigation by June 10 without asking for an additional appropriation. A new witness will be heard next Friday and no sessions will be held during the interim. Attorney Gray said he was looking into stock market trades in connection with Fox Film company stock.

Dummies Covered Trades.

Mr. Warner stated it was true that the three brothers, handling their stock as a unit, had utilized several undercover trading accounts in selling and buying their own securities during 1930. One of these accounts was in the name of "Harry Charnis," another in the name of "Moe Rosenberg," a third was account "72" and so on.

"We operated under our own name when dealing in other securities than stocks of our own corporation," Mr. Warner explained. "When dealing in our own stocks we dealt through other accounts so that we would not have any influence on the public. We had found that when we bought or sold, if this was known, the public was influenced by our activities. Our purpose was not to influence any one."

Warner then explained his purchases of debentures which supplied additional funds to the company. He also went through the various sales made by his organization, then outlined the company's purchases when prices of the Warner stocks began to come down.

"But didn't you know that the common stock was going off a dividend basis?" persisted Gray.

The witness said that he did later during the period they were purchasing stocks. He pointed out that the conclusions of all their transactions his company had more than 100,000 more shares of stock than when they began their buying and selling transactions.

BRITISH EDITOR URGES HOOVER TO "RESCUE WORLD"

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, May 22 [Sunday].—J. L. Garvin, editor of the London Sunday Observer, in an article headed "Awake, America," appeals to the United States to take upon herself the burden of saving the world.

Discussing the lack of unity of efforts to solve the depression, Garvin adds that "at present there is no leadership in the world such as we ardently hoped President Hoover would provide. Unless the United States takes the lead, none can take it."

He urges America to forgive her war debts in her own interest, adding that the moral and practical effects of such a course would do more than anything to "lift the economic nightmare from the American people themselves as well as the rest of the world."

SHOP FIRE LOSS $10,000.

Robinson, Ill., May 21.—[Special.]—Explosion of a gas burner started a fire today that swept the south wing of Norris Brothers machine shops, causing damage estimated at $10,000.

MILLS OBJECTS TO DEMOCRATS' RELIEF PROGRAM

Indicates Hoover Is Also Opposed to Plan.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 21.—[Special.]—Administration opposition to those sections of the various Democratic relief programs which call for large bond issues to finance new public buildings program was indicated today by Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills following a conference with President Hoover. The Democratic programs, all of which call for huge expenditures for relief measures, are now being investigated by various cabinet members for Mr. Hoover.

While declining to quote the President, Mr. Mills indicated the White House attitude when he referred to the public construction items in the Democratic proposals as "pork barrel plans."

Calls it "Pork Barrel Plan."

"I think it is best for the President to speak for himself," said Secretary Mills. "I will say, however, that there is no great enthusiasm being shown around the White House for an unbalanced budget and for a pork barrel plan in the treasury department."

In the meantime leaders in both the house and senate prepared to devote additional time next week to the working out of a compromise relief measure which would have White House approval. Speaker John N. Garner [Dem., Tex.], whose two billion 300 million relief program would afford one billion for public works, said today he was as yet undecided as to whether to introduce one or two bills to carry out the main features of his plan.

The latest program, which was the outcome of a special Democratic relief committee's efforts, calls for the use of two billions 300 millions. A half billion would go for public construction financed by sales of government bonds; 300 millions would go as direct relief loans to the states, while one billion 500 millions would be raised for public and private construction loans. The billion five hundred million dollar loans would be administered through the reconstruction finance corporation.

May Be Basis for Compromise.

This plan sticks closer to the plan which President Hoover originally favored and it may be the nucleus of a compromise program.

In the meantime a resolution creating a joint congressional committee to investigate the relief problem and recommend legislative solutions to congress, was introduced in the house by Representative Edmund F. Erk [Rep., Pa.].

The suggested relief body would consist of 54 members, to be made up of 26 senators appointed by the Vice President, and 28 representatives to

When Happy Days Are Here Again

AND pocketbooks are fatter, we will still be in business for just one reason—because people have found us useful. During this depression, when every penny counts, over 6,000,000 women shop at A&P every day. They find that our prices suit them and that they've never bought better quality food in their lives. All these women realize that there's more money saved by wise food buying than in any other household task.

We'll be glad when the depression is over. But recovery may be long and slow; and in the meantime, we're going to continue to give our customers the best value for their money that is possible to human ingenuity and great resources. We want to continue our usefulness to the public.

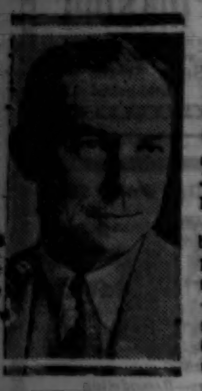
DEMOCRATS FEAR DEADLOCK; LOOK TO DARK HORSES

Switch to Ritchie Likely if Roosevelt Fails.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Second choice candidates and the field of dark horses for the Democratic presidential nomination are engaging the attention of midwest Democrats as the national convention at the Stadium, June 27, approaches.



MELVIN A. TRAYLOR.

Nine candidates have strings of pledges or instructed delegates—mostly "favorite sons"—while in the background are at least six others hoping the lightning may strike their way.

The recent declaration of Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, an adherent of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York, that deadlocks are dangerous to party success in November, has served to heighten an impression among committeemen passing through Chicago that the convention may be tied into a knot by the "stop Roosevelt" movement.

The Roosevelt managers claim their candidate will have a majority on the first ballot. Two-thirds, or 770, is necessary to nominate. There is a growing feeling that the defeat of Roosevelt in the convention is unlikely. But the opposition is still strong.

Block Roosevelt Movement.

In case of a deadlock, the middle west leaders are spending much conjecture on who might be the eventual beneficiary of the "block Roosevelt" movement. Among the possibilities figuring largely in the gossip this last week have been Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland and a string of dark horses including Gov. A. Harry Moore of New Jersey, Melvin A. Traylor, Chicago banker; Newton D. Baker of Ohio and Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, who was Al Smith's running mate four years ago.

Westerners, pausing in Chicago after trips to the east, have dropped word that several prospects are in sight for tryouts, in the event of a deadlock. The supposition is that if the Smith forces stop Roosevelt, the Roosevelt supporters will block the nomination of Smith himself. Revival of the talk of dark horses is based on the theory that recent Smith victories added to the delegates committed to "favorite sons" will yield enough delegates to keep Roosevelt from getting two-thirds, or 770 votes, necessary to nominate.

Swing to Ritchie Likely.

On the other hand, if Rosevelt should fail to land, the Roosevelt strength would block any compromise candidate not satisfactory to Roosevelt delegates. And some "favorite son" delegations are inclined to Roosevelt as second choice.

A swing to Gov. Ritchie is regarded as likely as one of the early attempts to break the deadlock if one is clamped on. Ritchie is rated strong in New York and to have an impressive secondary choice following in states that have instructed for "favorite sons" and others. He is well regarded among the Chicago Democrats and is rated as a strong compromise possibility.

Announcement of Owen D. Young of New York, head of the General Electric company, that he would not accept if nominated has served to clear the political atmosphere to some extent. It removes the man around whom the Al Smith group was figuring to build up a "dark horse" candidacy in the convention. It takes from the anti-Roosevelt field one man from the New York governor's own state. The effect of the Young letter in the last week has been rated of far more significance by the east than by the middle west Democrats.

Young's Strength in East.

Indications were that the Young boom had not taken much hold, even under cover, among the central westerners. Months ago he was in the talk among the Chicago Democrats, whose general reaction at the time seemed to be that as a candidate he might prove "too much of the Hoover type."

In case of a deadlock and if Ritchie does not make the grade, a swing to Mr. Baker may be started by the Smith group.

If it should come to a dark horse, Melvin A. Traylor, head of the First National bank of Chicago, is regarded by his friends as in a good spot. Mayor A. J. Cermak has said that if Illinois after a few ballots should switch from Senator James Hamilton Lewis, its second choice would likely be Mr. Traylor.

One report which has been gaining strength is that Gov. Moore of New Jersey is the dark horse on which the Smith forces may concentrate if early efforts to bust a deadlock are futile. New Jersey has been a leading factor in the "stop Roosevelt" movement.

The former Illinois capitol building at Vandalia, which has been used as courthouse by Fayette county. The county will now abandon the building and turn it back to the state for use as a museum. The building was damaged by fire in 1930.

COUNTY WILL MOVE COURT HOUSE OUT OF OLD STATE CAPITOL

Vandalia, Ill., May 21.—[Special.]—Fayette county is to abandon the old capitol building, the property of the state and used by the county for many years as a courthouse. Plans for a new courthouse and for a new county home were accepted by the county board Friday. Both buildings are to be erected without incurring indebtedness to the county.

Courthouse plans call for the remodeling of the old Remann building, located in a block owned by the county. It was originally purchased for a courthouse site after the sale of the old capitol to the state in 1919. At that time a bond issue for a new courthouse failed to carry and the county has been paying $3,000 annual rent to the state for the use of the building. The building which was used as a statehouse when Vandalia was the capital of the state was purchased by the state for $60,000, and will be converted into a museum.

After the sale of the old building $27,500 was used to purchase the new courthouse site and the remainder placed in a trust fund to be used in providing Fayette county with a courthouse. The old Remann building, which is of substantial brick, will be remodeled at an approximate cost of $25,000. The county home which was destroyed by fire will be rebuilt at a cost of $18,000 from insurance.

POLICE RESCUE VICTIM; HOLD 4 FOR EXTORTION

Four alleged extortionists who used the name of Danny Stanton, beer boss, in an effort to blackmail George Zeman, alleged operator of a loop handbook, were seized by police at Harrison and Dearborn streets yesterday.

They are John Scanlon, 29 years old, of 8015 South Park avenue, who posed as Stanton; John Counihan, 25, of 704 North Central avenue; Daniel O'Leary, 29, of 1367 East 62d street, and John Ryan, 29, of 8716 Loomis street. Sergts. Thomas and Francis Meagher, brothers, arrested the quartet with the aid of Policeman Jerry Lynch.

Several days ago Zeman received telephone threats and was ordered to meet a contact man yesterday. The contact man was O'Leary. In the meantime an employé of Zeman named Ryan had told the Meagher brothers, who trailed O'Leary and Zeman to Harrison and Dearborn streets.

Sergt. Thomas Meagher took a revolver from Scanlon's pocket and John Ryan also tossed away a gun during a brief attempt to escape, according to police.

The four prisoners will be arraigned in the Felony court Tuesday. Police say that Scanlon, in his brief meeting with Zeman on the corner, demanded immediate payment of $500 and 25 per cent rakeoff on his handbook.

CONSOLIDATION PLAN REQUIRES LEGISLATIVE ACTION, SAYS MAYOR

Mayor Cermak reiterated his position in favor of the consolidation of overlapping branches of local governments yesterday, but held that statutory or constitutional amendments are needed. He was commenting on the suggestion of Prof. Charles E. Merriam of the University of Chicago that the way is open now without legislative action.

"The governor shouldn't control the parks," Mayor Cermak said. "A commission to govern all the parks in Cook county either should be elected or should be appointed by the mayor of Chicago and the president of the county board. But as some of the park commissioners are elected it would be necessary to have legislative action."

The mayor said one step toward consolidation is to have all candidates for the general assembly pledge themselves to vote for consolidation of the park systems.

GUNMEN ROB AUCTIONEERS.

Three gunmen yesterday robbed the office of Paul Ginsburg & Co., auctioneers, at 404 South Franklin street, of $1,900 in cash and two bonds valued at $700. Four employés were threatened and A. M. Machbar, the cashier, was forced to open the safe.

PLATFORM CHIEF WORRY OF G. O. P. AT CONVENTION

But Democrats Have More and Bigger Worries.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 21.—[Special.]—In the midst of an economic prostration such as the country has not experienced in more than half a century, a national plight that challenges political leadership, the two major political parties are about to enunciate their principles and offer leaders to guide the republic back to prosperity.

In the Republican and Democratic national conventions, meeting in Chicago in the last two weeks of June and extending into July, the party programs will be determined by superior numbers working their will in spectacular conflicts of factions and opposing schools of thought that will claim the breathless interest of the country.

Platform Only G. O. P. Worry.

The Republican convention, assembling on June 14, will present a struggle over the formulation of the party platform only, while the Democratic convention, which will meet on June 27, will stage two great battles—one over the nomination of candidates for President and Vice President, the other over the platform.

With President Hoover assured of renomination with negligible opposition and the renomination of Vice President Curtis no longer seriously opposed, the Republicans will have nothing to fight over except their declaration of principles and promises of future performance if entrusted by the people with another quadrennium of power at Washington

Big Battle over Prohibition.

There will be differences of opinion on the platform planks dealing with Republican proposals of measures to mitigate and end the depression and on a score of other public questions, but the big battle will be over the formulation of the party stand on prohibition. The party that for a decade has been the bulwark of the dry cause has been shaken by the popular reaction against prohibition and compelled to make concessions to the wets, lest it surrender what chance it may have of remaining in power.

Eastern wets demanding outright repeal of the 18th amendment will clash with western drys seeking to commit the party to renewed faith in the virtues of the noble experiment, while middle of the roaders will endeavor to satisfy both extremes with a plank proposing in some fashion a national prohibition referendum.

Noncommittal Stand Likely.

The resolutions committee, after lengthy hearings of arguments pro and con and heated consideration of the issue, will frame the plank and recommend its adoption, while the dissatisfied minority will carry the fight to the floor of the convention.

The outcome probably will be a cautiously worded plank designed to inspire the confidence of wet Republicans that return of their party to power will forward a change of the prohibition régime and at the same time allay the fears of the drys that any aggressive move in that direction will be made during four years more of Hoover.

Much the same sort of platform fight will take place in the Democratic convention. Like their opponents, the Democrats will be compelled by the trend of popular sentiment to retreat from their position of 1928 and move in the direction of modification of the 18th amendment.

Democrats' Problem Different.

Meeting after the Republicans shall have committed themselves, the Democrats will have an advantage in the rivalry of platform building. The big question for the Democrats to decide will be whether to keep to the limits of the Republican declaration on prohibition and thereby virtually remove the issue from the election or to go the Republicans one better in the direction of modification, with a view to catching the votes of wet Republicans dissatisfied with Republican pussyfooting, providing it can be done without alienating the support of the [politically] dry south.

ROOSEVELT WINS TEN OREGON VOTES; G. O. P. DELEGATES TO FRANCE

Portland, Ore., May 21.—(AP)—Oregon's ten votes will be cast for Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt at the Democratic national convention and Joseph I. France of Maryland will have the state's 13 Republican votes at Chicago.

Returns from yesterday's presidential preference primary increased today the leads piled up by the two candidates.

The delegates to the national conventions will be obliged by an unwritten law to support the primary victors at Chicago until nominated or released by the men to whom they are pledged.

Willis C. Hawley, veteran Republican representative in congress, held a narrow margin over James W. Mott, state corporation commissioner, in his race for renomination. Hawley polled 17,485 votes in 425 precincts of the 802 in the first district. Mott had 17,120 votes.

Senator Frederick Steiwer, Republican, built up a big lead over former Senator Robert N. Stanfield, polling 55,785 to Stanfield's 39,432 in 977 precincts, for the renomination.

Elton Watkins, a dry, and Walter Gleason, described as a "wringing wet," staged a nip-and-tuck fight for the Democratic senatorial nomination. With 897 precincts counted Gleason had 10,591 votes, and Watkins 10,475. Marshall N. Dana, associate editor of the Oregon Journal, ran third with 8,107 votes.

CUBAN MILITARY COMMANDER IS KILLED BY BOMB

Others Escape Death at Hands of Assassins.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, May 21.—The Cuban government's announcement of the existence of a plot to assassinate public officials and army officers as a last resource to oust President Machado from office was actually disclosed today, when Lieut. Enrique Diego Diaz, commander of a military garrison 30 miles west of Havana, was killed by a powerful TNT bomb.

The bomb was contained in a small package sent to him through the Pan-American express company from Havana. His offices in the garrison were wrecked by the explosion. This was the first time assassins have used bombs in Cuba.

Secret Service Chief Escapes.

Another bomb was sent via the Pan-American express to Maj. Santiago Trujillo, chief of the secret service in Havana. The bomb failed to explode. Two other bombs wrapped in packages were found at the express office and another one at the central post office.

It was also revealed that bombs had been mailed to Maj. Arsenio Ortiz, former military governor of Oriente province, Col. Federico Rasco, military commander at Havana, and Quartermaster General José Lores.

Gen. Alberto Herrera, chief of staff, personally assumed the investigations of the conspiracy to spread terror among government officials. He announced that today's assassination reveals that native revolutionists have joined the communists in their efforts to murder island leaders.

Open All Packages.

Secretary of Communcations Manuel Delgado has established a strict censorship over the mails. Persons mailing packages are compelled to fully identify themselves first. Packages must also be opened before they are accepted by post offices throughout the island.

All public officials, military chiefs, and foreign diplomats have been warned by telegram against opening mailed packages.

Police confiscated over 800 pounds of revolutionary and communistic literature today, following the arrest of scores believed to be implicated in the attempts at terrorism. The names of the prisoners are being withheld.

Extra police protection was ordered for Cuba's officials tonight.

ABOLISH FARM BOARD AND WHEAT WILL RISE—CAREY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 21.—[Special.]—Abolish the farm board and prohibit so-called farm leaders from pushing radical, paternalistic legislation, P. B. Carey, president of the Chicago Board of Trade, told Secretary of Agriculture Hyde today, and he would guarantee to pick six Chicago grain traders who could dispose of the farm board's huge stock of wheat at a steadily advancing price.

The conference between the secretary and the Board of Trade's president concerned the latest pieces of "farm relief" legislation—the Strong resolution to authorize the Reconstruction Finance corporation to furnish 100 million dollars for credit for the sale of American wheat and cotton abroad; the McNary bill to empower the farm board to fix farm prices and to employ the export debenture plan or the equalization fee plan or both; and other bills and resolutions affecting agriculture.

Keeps Prices Down, He Says.

"It passes human understanding," said Mr. Carey, following the conference, "that so-called farm leaders in congress instead of trying to raise the price of wheat should at this time be seeking through the Strong and other pending bills further powers to arbitrarily destroy, if they can, the sole marketing system which the grain farmer of this country has and thus further reduce prices.

"I believe wheat should and would advance if the federal farm board were forced by congress to desist at once from their senseless efforts, which so far resulted in practically destroying the free, open, liquid grain markets which the farmer of this country has hitherto enjoyed. Previous to the institution of the farm board there were no cries for any of the taxpayers' money to be squandered on senseless credit operations. There were no discriminatory tariffs against our farmers' grain, and there was no 44½ cent price."

Board's Record a "Ghastly Smear."

Mr. Carey called the farm board's record a "ghastly smear."

"The so-called farm leaders," Mr. Carey went on, have all but abolished the open, competitive market, which required seventy-five years to establish. In its place they have substituted the lowest prices in history.

"There is a tremendous demand for American hard wheat right now. I could appoint a committee of six members selected from our membership, who in a short time, and with absolutely no drain on the taxpayer, could and would dispose of all the government wheat for cash at a steadily advancing price with the inevitable favorable reflection on the general condition of the country."

It does not require more of the taxpayers' money, said Mr. Carey; it requires old fashioned horse sense. If horse sense is not substituted for fantastic theories, he declared, it will be a question of only a short time before American grain farmers will be forced to market their grain as it is done in the Argentine, through a couple of dealers and without competition, or as it is done in Russia, where the farmer is a slave.

The Board of Trade's efforts to carry out the wishes of congress, he said, were met by constant harassment from agricultural bureaucracy and the fatuous attitude of the farm board.

Calls Waste Horrifying.

"When the so-called farm leaders who have been living off the farmers for all these years get back home from Washington this summer the farmers will ask why they have been deprived of their markets," Mr. Carey declared. "Why must they accept the lowest prices in history, and what are they getting in exchange for the money they have contributed for maintaining these men in Washington?

"Their waste of the taxpayers' money is horrifying. The shrieks for economy from a tax ridden citizenry mean nothing to these gentlemen who, through unfortunate circumstances, have been placed in temporary power.

"Then you have the highly paid officials of the so-called farm organizations [now sadly depleted in paid membership] concocting still wilder schemes to protect that large body of our population which will turn into serfs under much further guardianship on the part of such organizations.

"Then you have the federal farm board, also overwhelmingly zealous of their jobs and the farmers' interests.

Provides a $25,000 Job.

"Are these gestures sufficient to protect the farmers' welfare? Certainly not. It has become necessary for the farm board's price pet, the Farmers' National Grain corporation, to open an office in Washington in charge of one Thatcher, who is paid $25,000 a year. It takes the total returns from scores of farms at present prices to keep this one gentleman parasite comfortably seated in his office.

"Who gains? Surely not any form of industry. This is all just a dead weight on the farmer himself and the body politic."

SLAYER OF GIRL, 17, IS SENTENCED TO DIE SECOND TIME BY JURY

Kansas City, Mo., May 21.—[U.P.]—Paul H. Kauffman, ex-convict, today heard for the second time a jury foreman pronounce a verict dooming him to death on the gallows.

The jury which heard his second trial on charges of murdering Avis Woolery, 17 year old Webb City, Mo., girl, this afternoon returned a verdict finding Kauffman guilty and sentencing him to hang.

He was saved from the gallows this spring by a Supreme court decision nullifying the verdict of the first trial and remanding the case to the Criminal court here.

Miss Woolery was attacked and slain two years ago.

Arrest Lawyer Accused of Blackmail by Inventor

Attorney Hugo Radau, 48 years old, 641 North avenue, was arrested yesterday on a charge of extortion made by Benjamin Crenshaw, inventor of a patent automobile signal. Crenshaw told police that Radau had threatened to have him arrested for some supposed crime unless Radau was given an interest in the signal company. Warrants were also sworn out for Mrs. Stella Lacomski, 4427 South Marshfield avenue, and Steve Kalisz, 4807 Loomis street, as accomplices of Radau. Radau was held at the Hudson avenue police station on his failure to give a bond of $500.

U. S. COLLEGE BOY SMASHES BEER DRINKING RECORD

Drains 2 Quart Boot in 13 Seconds.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, May 21.—Jack Robbins of Bridgeport, Conn., 21 year old student at Heidelburg university, tonight quaffed his way to fame by lifting up a two quart glass boot filled with beer at Harry's "New York" bar and draining it faster than any man had ever done before him. Thirteen seconds from scratch to "bottom's up" was his time.

Robbins attributed his record breaking feat, which knocked four seconds off the world's championship record of Jack Frost, to his perfect condition and mastery of the Heidelburg "steady swallow" technique. He is a rather small chap and his performance, friends say, represents a victory of technique over capacity.

Beer drinking championships conducted at Harry's bar are a Paris classic and the title earned there is usually recognized by serious drinkers throughout the world. The glass boot, which is traditionally used for these bouts and is prominently displayed for the admiration of tourists holds exactly two litres—2.12 quarts.

Robbins received his early training at the University of Pennsylvania before going to the German university.

Wildly applauded by a cosmopolitan crowd of men and women in evening clothes, Robbins explained modestly that he not gone there with the intention of breaking the record, but just to put down a stein or two for "dear old Heidelburg," and that he ordered the boot on a bet.

After breaking the record, Robbins showed excellent sprinting form on several ordinary sized glasses, and it was the general opinion of the spectators that he would make a good showing in a marathon.

HOUSE BREAKS SECRECY ON ITS OWN PAY ROLL

Passes Warren Resolution —List Employes.

Washington, D. C., May 21.—[Special.]—Forced by popular demand to break down the secrecy which has been thrown over the congressional tradition of loading down the legislative pay rolls with relatives, the house of representatives today passed the Warren resolution opening the house pay roll to public inspection.

A survey of the pay roll revealed the list of representatives and employés with the salaries the employés receive per month—usually in the capacity of clerks.

While showing the similarity of names, the roll does not indicate what relationship, if any exists, or whether the employé actually works or is one of the many who draw a salary but leave the work to be done by a stenographer receiving a fraction of the sum charged to the federal treasury.

BEG YOUR PARDON

A United Press dispatch from Cincinnati, O., was printed in THE TRIBUNE last May 4 telling of the $100,000 alienation of affections suit brought by Mrs. Mathilda Chamblin of Mason City, Ill., against Miss Eleanor Swiggett, who was accused of alienating the affections of Edward Chamblin, husband of Mrs. Chamblin. The dispatch was in error in stating that Mrs. Chamblin was housekeeper for her husband before their marriage. Mrs. Chamblin says that she has, since girlhood, been accustomed to having her own maid and previous to her marriage was engaged in the real estate business, and was not her husband's housekeeper.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 21.—[Special.]—The laboratory bench of Dr. Wilmer J. Souder, handwriting expert of the United States bureau of standards, tonight became a pivotal point in the nation-wide search for the kidnapers and murderers of Charles Augustus Lindbergh Jr.

All correspondence received by Dr. John F. Condon from the persons to whom he paid $50,000 in a futile effort to obtain the baby's return, together with the original ransom note left on the baby's crib the day he was stolen, has been submitted to the federal expert.

Dr. Souder's investigation, it is hoped, will disclose whether "Jafsie" was duped into the $50,000 ransom payment by cruel swindlers or whether he was dealing with the actual captors and murderers of the child.

"Some tests take one day," the federal expert said, "while others take eighteen months." And he referred all further questions as to his connection with the case to the department of justice officials or to Col. Norman K. Schwarzkopf of the New Jersey state police.

Dr. Souder will not only examine the handwriting of the ransom notes and the letters to "Jafsie" but will also scrutinize the cabalistic symbol which signaturized the ransom message to "Jafsie."

Seek Bootlegger Who "Knew."

New York, May 21.—[Special.]—The search for information about the kidnaping and murder of the Lindbergh baby is now centering in Maryland where, the day before the baby was found dead, a bootlegger gave a circumstantial account of how the child had been taken, said that it had been killed, and declared that its body was within five miles of the Lindbergh home.

The fact that so much of this bootlegger's story afterward proved to be true has caused the New Jersey state police to entertain seriously the view that the man knew what he was talking about.

The bootlegger's story came to the New Jersey police through Arthur Mills, identification expert at the Maryland house of correction and formerly a member of the Maryland state police.

Knew Only Nickname.

"I was standing at a filling station on the Washington boulevard near Lansdowne," he said, "when the bootlegger drove up in a car for gasoline.

"I always knew him only by a nickname," said Mills, "and I have forgotten what that was."

"I recognized him and he recognized me," Mills continued, telling of his encounter with him on May 11. "He told me that his business in Jersey was all shot to pieces because of the Lindbergh case. He said the roads were so thoroughly patrolled, and every vehicle was so much subject to search, that business was shot and would be until they got the people who killed the Lindbergh baby.

"I remember distinctly that he said 'Killed the Lindbergh baby,' and I asked him what he meant when he said 'killed'."

"'That's right,' he said, 'killed.'"

Dr. John F. Condon, Fordham lecturer, who paid the $50,000 to one of the supposed kidnapers on the night of April 2, made another unexplained automobile journey today into Connecticut and was understood to be on his way to Pawtucket, R. I.

PASCHEN FIGHTS TAX CASE WITH U.S. WITNESSES

Bank Manager Tells of His Overdrafts.

Determined attempts to break down the government's income tax evasion case against Chris Paschen were made by the former building commissioner's lawyers yesterday as the trial ended its third week before Federal Judge Barnes.

Two of these attempts were made by calling witnesses already used by the prosecution. One witness left the inference that she had not been asked to tell all she knew when the government had her on the stand. The testimony of the other, also a woman, tended to refute the testimony of a man who said he had talked with Paschen in his city hall office about city contracts performed allegedly by two of Paschen's "dummy" companies.

Bank Manager Testifies.

The testimony which seemed to impress the jury most was given by Earl Wilson, assistant manager of the bookkeeping department of the First National bank and formerly manager of the transfer department of the Foreman National bank where Paschen had several accounts.

Wilson testified that the average daily overdraft in the Chris Paschen company account in the Foreman bank during 1927 was $291.95 and that in 1928 the average overdraft was $1,942. The account was overdrawn 210 days in 1927 and 236 days in 1928.

The government charges that Paschen's net income for these two years was more than $1,200,000 and that he evaded payment of a tax of $114,000. Cassius Poust, his chief attorney, is trying to show that even though a great deal of money did come into Paschen's bank accounts, much more was expended and that he actually owed no tax in 1927 and only the $818 he paid in 1928.

Tells of Brown Envelope.

Miss Alma Alfoth, who handled a trust account for Paschen in the Foreman bank and who was a government witness, was called first by Poust yesterday. She told of a mysterious brown envelope intrusted to her care in 1928, to which Paschen often referred. She denied knowing its contents. Poust sought to question her as to a conversation she had with Assistant United States Attorney Dwight H. Green and a government agent when she was examined before the trial.

The government objected and the attorneys and Judge Barnes retired to a corner of the courtroom, out of hearing of the jury, while Poust whispered the testimony he sought to prove. He quoted Miss Alfoth as having told Mr. Green and Fred Peabody, the agent:

"I don't see how you can figure a profit for Mr. Paschen. I had to withdraw securities all the time for the trust account to cover overdrafts."

According to Poust, Green replied: "Don't mention that to the jury; you have a convincing manner." Judge Barnes did not allow this to be presented to the jury.

Another government witness, Helen Reynolds, private secretary to Building Commissioner Ericsson, who acted in the same capacity for Paschen, was also called. She testified that she was always in Paschen's office when he was there and that he had never received a call from Frank S. Wilder, another government witness.

Wilder testified that as an agent for an indemnity company he called on Paschen in 1927, and asked him to sign the bonds of two allegedly "dummy" concerns which were to perform city contracts. Paschen refused and said: "If my men are going to do the work, you don't need a bond," according to Wilder.

On cross-examination, Miss Reynolds testified she never left the office when Paschen was there; that she had her lunch at her desk; and that she answered or knew of every phone call made to the office. Wilder was never there, she said.

Tire Dealer on Stand.

Martin K. Whalen, president of the Ogden Auto Supply company, 1455 Ogden avenue, located just half a block from the Paschen company office at 1450 Clybourn avenue, testified that in 1927 and 1928 he sold tires and accessories to Paschen totaling $4,920. He was asked if he knew Walter A. Redfield, a former Paschen employé who testified that Paschen had ordered company records burned.

Whalen said that Redfield's reputation for truth and veracity was bad and that he "would not believe Redfield under oath."

"Did you ever hear Redfield threaten Paschen?" Poust asked.

An objection was sustained, the jury retired and Whalen said he had heard Redfield, whom the defense alleges was discharged by Paschen, say: "I'll get even with Paschen if it's the last thing I ever do."

Whalen then said that Charles Howarton, who testified that he burned the records, had an equally bad reputation for truth.

REVEAL $132,000 FEES IN 3 BANK RECEIVERSHIPS

Depositors' Protests Cut Costs in One Case.

How receivers and their attorneys took $132,000 in fees out of a compromise settlement of stockholders' liabilities in three closed banks was revealed in a survey yesterday of court records and bank statements. The total settlement was $662,750, and the receivers and lawyers thus took approximately 20 per cent of the money intended to repay depositors for their losses.

The three banks involved were the South Side Savings Bank and Trust company, the Northwestern Trust and Savings bank, and the Sheridan Trust and Savings bank. The settlement in each case involved only the stockholders' liability of the Foreman interests in the three closed banks.

Little Work for Lawyers.

In each case, it was pointed out, the Foreman family preferred a compromise settlement of 40 per cent on their stockholders' liability. There was little work connected with the transaction and the receivers and lawyers apparently took $132,000 in fees merely for accepting the compromise offer.

A story was revealed concerning the deal involving the South Side bank which was said by one banking authority to illustrate clearly the case with which some receivers and attorneys collect excessive fees.

The capital stock of the bank was $500,000, and the Foreman interests owned $493,750 of this stock. They offered to settle on a basis of 40 per cent and the offer was accepted. The Foremans agreed to pay $197,500 and those involved in the case began to consider what fees should be given them for this settlement.

The Receiver's Story.

According to Receiver John A. Carroll, he was told that he would receive a fee of $12,000. The law firm of Brown, Fox & Blumberg, representing the complainants in the stockholders' liability suits, claimed a $25,000 fee, and Attorney Samuel A. Ettelson, representing the receiver, was to get $12,000.

These fees would probably have been approved in court if Receiver Carroll had not objected. He called in a committee of depositors in the bank and told them about the fees. A roar of protest went up from the depositors and the subsequent opposition was such that the fees were slashed.

Receiver Carroll was awarded a $3,000 fee, although he offered to take no fee at all. The law firm of Brown, Fox & Blumberg were given $18,000 instead of $25,000, and Attorney Ettelson received $5,000 instead of $12,000. Thus, the transaction cost $26,000 instead of $49,000 because the receiver had insisted upon the depositors' approval.

The bank has paid 35 per cent to depositors, but still owes $2,103,000.

Make $284,250 Settlement.

In the case of the Sheridan Trust and Savings bank, the Foreman interests owned $710,000 of the $800,000 capital stock. Again, a 40 per cent settlement of $284,250 was offered and accepted. Again, the law firm of Brown, Fox & Blumberg represented the complainants in the stockholders' liability cases.

From the $284,250 Logan L. Mullins, the receiver appointed by the court, took $5,000 as his fee. The law firm representing the complainants took $28,245 as its fee, and Attorney Fred A. Fischel and the law firm of Brundage, Landon & Holt, representing the received, collected a $9,200 fee.

In addition $10,000 was set aside "to cover future expenses." Other costs raised the total expenses connected with acceptance of the compromise offer to approximately $60,000, and Receiver Ernest Ridgeway who was appointed by the state auditor, was given only $224,000 of the $284,000 collected with which to pay off depositors.

This $224,000, it was pointed out, is virtually all that the depositors have a chance of getting out of a total stock liability of $800,000. The bank has not yet made a payment to depositors, who have $4,607,000 coming to them.

Settlement Costs $46,680.

Similarly the Foreman interests paid $181,500 to the receiver in liability proceedings for the Northwestern Trust and Savings bank, another 40 per cent compromise. Receiver Raymond J. Hurley took a $10,000 fee, his attorney, Louis J. Behan, collected $5,000, and the law firm of Brown, Fox & Blumberg, again representing the complainants in the suits against stockholders, got $18,150. Other costs raised the expense for this one compromise settlement to $46,680.

In its petitions for fees the law firm of Brown, Fox & Blumberg asserted that the usual fees in receivership cases run from 10 per cent to 25 per cent of the money collected and pointed out that they were asking only a modest 10 per cent fee.

The state receivers, appointed by State Auditor Oscar Nelson and not by the courts, have so far collected only eight-tenths of 1 per cent of money collected and the attorneys have received an average of 1½ per cent as their fees.

The fees allowed in the cases of the three closed banks mentioned were approved by Superior and Circuit court judges. The fees in the South Side bank settlement were approved by Circuit Judge Michael Feinberg. The fees in the Sheridan bank case were approved by Superior Judge Robert E. Gentzel. The fees in the Northwestern bank case were approved by Superior Judge Ross C. Hall.

The Chicago Bar association committee investigating receiverships in the Circuit and Superior courts has decided to look into the receiverships in federal courts. The committee has been at work for two weeks. At least two judges have been questioned, as well as several attorneys.

The committee was appointed to determine if there is a "receivership ring" in Cook county, with a number of attorneys and receivers receiving exorbitant fees for their services.

WIFE MAY KEEP DEEDS GIVEN HER BY FERGUSON HEIR

Circuit Judge Daniel P. Trude yesterday decided that he lacked the authority to force Mrs. Genevieve Ferguson, 1233 Chase avenue, to return the quitclaim deeds given her by her husband, Stephen, to safeguard an alimony settlement from the $2,000,000 estate of her father-in-law, Charles Ferguson, pioneer Rogers Park real estate operator. Mrs. Ferguson won a divorce last August. She was awarded custody of their son, Charles II., and given a quarter interest in Ferguson's $300,000 inheritance.

Recently attorneys for the estate asked that Mrs. Ferguson deed back the property she has recorded in her own name in order that the whole estate might be settled. Mrs. Ferguson said that she would do this if her husband would safeguard her settlement. A month after the divorce Ferguson married Trudy Davidson, a cabaret entertainer. His first wife asserted this has complicated his rights to the estate, much of which is in real estate, because of the dower rights of his new wife.

Judge Trude held that the matter was outside his jurisdiction.

TRIAL OF BAIN BANK CASE DUE TO BE DELAYED

The Bain bank case, which was scheduled to go to trial tomorrow before Judge John M. O'Connor, is expected to be continued to May 31. Special Assistant State's Attorney Edwin J. Raber, who is in charge of the prosecution, said that he would not oppose a continuance of a week in view of the fact that the defendants had announced that they would waive a jury trial and expedite the disposition of the case.

One of the reasons for the expected continuance, it is said, is that Judge O'Connor, who is sitting in the Appellate court, has not been reassigned to the Criminal court by the Supreme court judges and the executive committee of the Circuit and Superior courts.

John Bain, south park commissioner and head of a chain of twelve banks which failed, is the principal defendant on the conspiracy charge. His two sons, John H. and Robert Bain; his son-in-law, W. Merle Fisher, and Dr. Walter Buhlig, his personal physician, and Frank A. Mulholland, south side realty dealer, are co-defendants.

College May Queen

Miss Ruth Nickel, Wausau, Wis., elected May queen at Lawrence college, Appleton, Wis. She was general chairman of the Pan-Hellenic ball held last night and as May queen led the grand march.

CLASS ORATORS OF 57 YEARS AGO HOLD REUNION

Nine former pupils of the old Hayes school, the Brown school, and the old West Division High school who 57 years ago formed the Summer Literary society and settled the problems of the world each Saturday night met last night in the Hotel Sherman. All now are more than 70 years old, they said.

Milton J. Greenebaum, retired banker, of the Hotel Aragon, who presided, recalled the days when they met in the basement of a Baptist church at Washington boulevard and Paulina street until the janitor ejected them.

Of the 117 members, 58 are dead, 26 are inactive and their addresses unknown, 18 Chicagoans are active, and 15 are outside of the Chicago area.

Officers elected last night were: Edward J. Rogerson, retired undertaker, president; Charles E. Matthews, druggist, first vice president; Alfred B. Chandler, manufacturer, second vice president, and John E. Wilkie, third vice president. William E. Slosson, secretary for many years, was reelected. Charles D. Jennings was reelected recording secretary.

300 Attend Reunion of 33d Division Vets

War veterans of the 33d division, A. E. F., held their annual reunion at the Hotel Sherman last night. More than 300 attended under auspices of the Thirty-third Division War Veterans' association. Thomas G. Burns is president. John Newcomb, 71 years old, the sergeant at arms, is the oldest member.

Twenty Arrested in Two Englewood Gaming Raids

Police of the Englewood district last night raided two alleged gambling resorts, arresting twenty persons and seizing betting charts and other equipment. The places were conducted by Earl Williams at 1157 West 59th street and Floyd Shutts at 5850 Wentworth avenue.

FINED AFTER GAMBLING RAID.

Bernard Cygan, 23 years old, alleged operator of a hand book, was fined $50 yesterday by Judge Leon Edelman for having gambling paraphernalia in his establishment.

ACTS TO AUCTION WAUKEGAN STATE BANK'S ASSETS

Judge Says Move Would Be Help to Creditors.

Circuit Judge Ralph J. Dady yesterday ordered the receiver of the closed Waukegan State bank to petition for authority to sell the assets of the bank at public auction at such time as the court should direct. He said that he had been advised that the persons preparing to open the proposed new Citizens Bank and Trust company were interested in purchasing the assets and that such a sale would be to the best interests of the creditors.

H. A. Smith, executive vice president of the proposed bank, said that the order virtually removed the final obstacle to the formation of the new Waukegan bank.

The order came as the result of a controversy between Judge Dady and Judge Edward D. Shurtleff, which resulted in the appointment of two receivers for the bank. Judge Shurtleff 10 days ago removed Fred Brown Whitney as receiver after charging him with inefficiency, and appointed John R. Fulton, real estate operator, in his place. Judge Dady, after returning from a vacation, reappointed Whitney with the statement that Judge Shurtleff had no jurisdiction in the case.

State Auditor Oscar Nelson further complicated matters yesterday when he appointed one of his employés as custodian of the bank and ordered the records sealed so neither receiver could reach them. Judge Dady's order failed to state which of the receivers was to move for sale of the assets.

Here's Burning Question! Who Set Mitsky on Fire?

Matthew Mitsky, 45 years old, caught fire yesterday in front of his home at 5144 South Ashland avenue. He was extinguished and treated for minor burns at the county hospital. The fire was of incendiary origin, Mitsky told police. "I was walking along quietly when some one poured gasoline over my clothing and lit me," he said. New City police advanced the theory that a carelessly handled cigaret had started Mitsky's personal blaze.

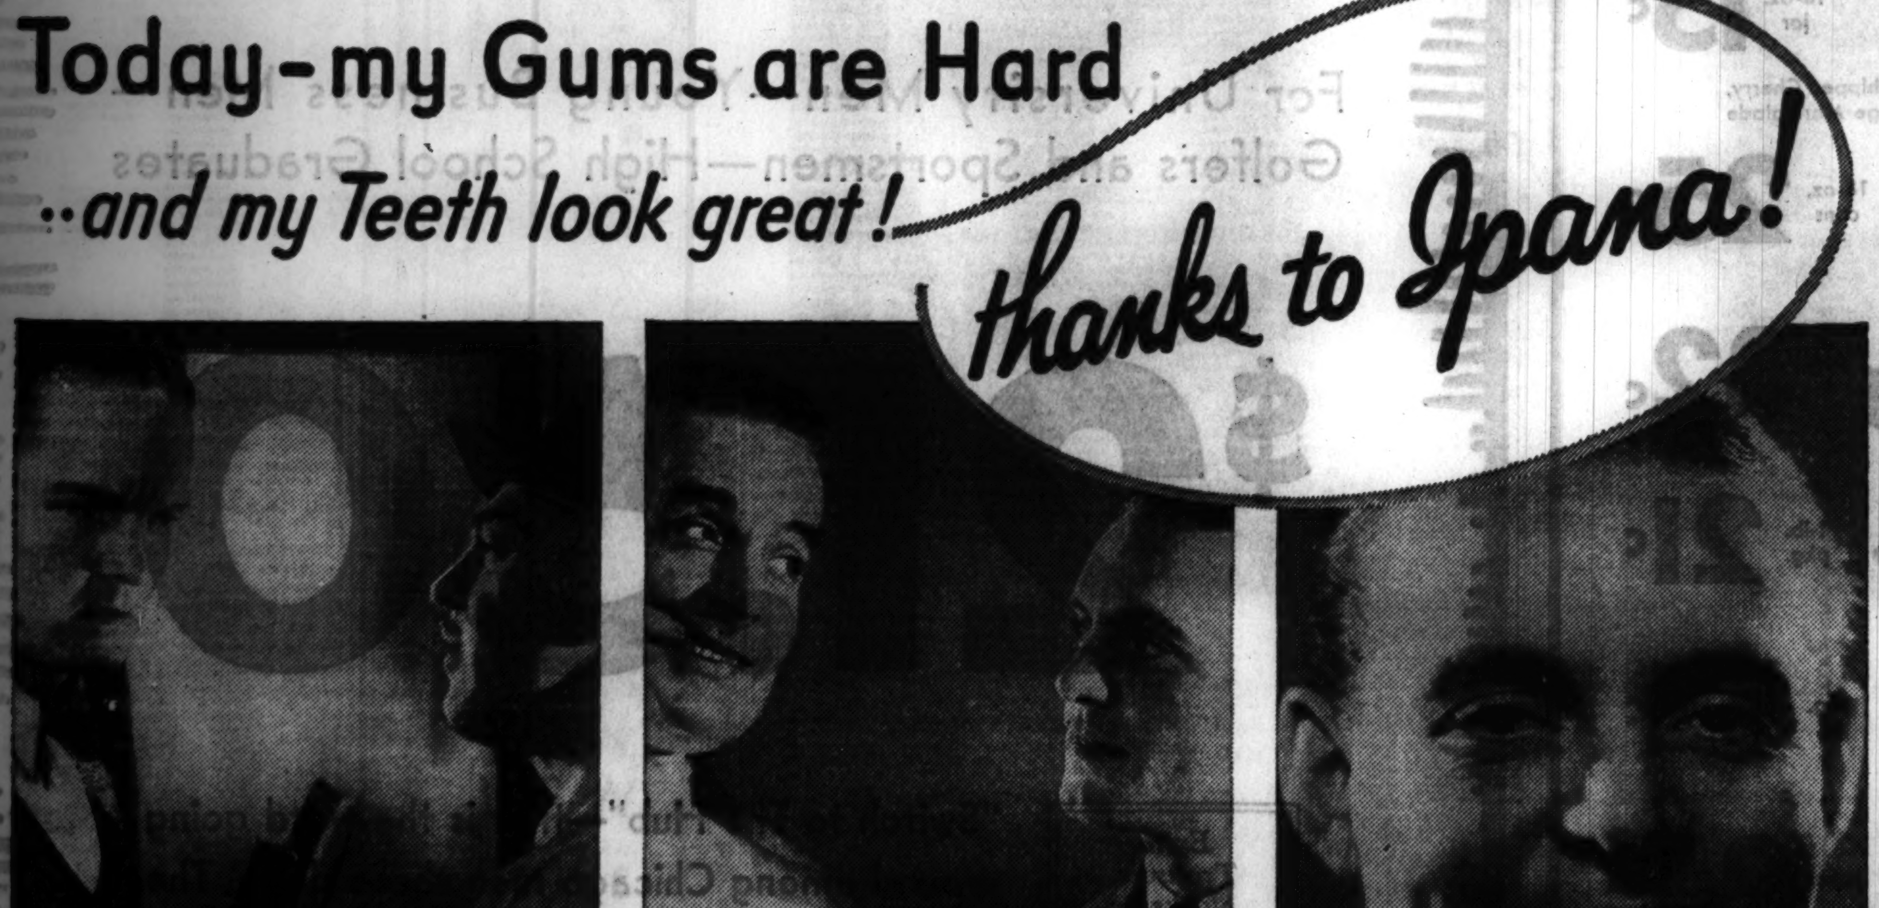
Today-my Gums are Hard ..and my Teeth look great!



1. Told of "pink tooth brush."

A golf "pro" straightened out my mashie shots. And this same hard-headed Scotsman told me a few things about my gums. They were soft. They bled, too. "Anybody that thinks he can laugh off 'pink tooth brush' is crazy," he said. "I've seen men with gingivitis. And Vincent's disease. And even a few with pyorrhea. And they didn't laugh!"

2. I started with Ipana.

I asked my dentist about it. "Most of the foods we eat nowadays are as soft as cooked cereal," he explained. "Your gums get so little stimulation that they become tender and start to bleed." He showed me how to massage Ipana Tooth Paste into my gums, to harden them. He said the ziratol in Ipana would help get them hard and firm.

3. Firm gums—white teeth!

Yes, I clean my teeth with Ipana! And every time I put more Ipana on my tooth brush and rub it on my gums. Does it do the work? Why, at the end of the first month there wasn't the faintest sign of "pink tooth brush." And today my gums are as hard as a golf ball! Remember: A good tooth paste, like a good dentist, is never a luxury!

RECTOR ADMITS KISSES, BUT 'HAD NO LUST IN HEART'

Insists He Avoided One Made "Offensively."

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, May 21.—The Rev. Harold F. Davidson, rector of Stiffkey, who is on trial in the consistory court on charges of immoral conduct, collapsed on the witness stand today after a severe cross-examination concerning his friendship with various girls. He was forced to leave the courtroom for fifteen minutes.

Yesterday the rector had taken the stand in his own defense. Today attorneys for the bishop, who brought the charges against him, attempted to tear to pieces the rector's story that his affairs with girls merely involved efforts to save them from lives of prostitution.

Admits Kissing Waitress.

The Rev. Mr. Davidson vehemently denied that his conduct at any time was immoral.

Under cross-examination, the 62 year old rector, styled by his own attorney as a "troublesome busybody," admitted that he had kissed Barbara Harris, pletty blond waitress, twice while in a restaurant. Miss Harris is one of the bishop's chief witnesses against the pastor and has accused the latter of immoral relations.

"I was just trying to be kind to her," he explained, "because I had spoken rather severely to her. There was no lust in my heart."

He stressed that he had only kissed her on the forehead and that, on one occasion, when "she tried to kiss me in an offensive manner I thrust her aside and told her not to do it."

The clergyman also insisted that Miss Harris, who had testified about his appendicitis scar, had never seen his stomach "unless she peeped through the bathroom door."

Tells of Locking Up Girl.

The rector then told how he had locked 18 year old Miss Harris in her room to prevent her from going out late at night.

"She said she was going to walk home," he testified. "It was late and I said that it was absurd at that hour of the night. I did not lock myself in with her."

"Did she give you a black eye?" the prosecution asked.

"She did not," the clergyman said.

The Rev. Mr. Davidson said he had given Miss Davis a book called "Damaged Goods" in his efforts to save her. He described the moral of the book as a "warning to young people about the terrible effects of promiscuity."

He also described in detail his experiences in brothels during the war, attacking the "icebergs" among church people for "drawing their skirts away" from unfortunate girls.

Took "Wayward Girls" Home.

"I tried to protect young men and boys and took wayward girls to my home," the rector said.

"Did you know what they were?" he was asked in reference to the "wayward girls."

"I knew what they might become," the rector answered. "If you are going to make outcasts of these girls forever, how are you going to raise them up? You must get them among respectable people. The great failing of the church is that there are icebergs among its people. They draw their skirts away from them."

He also testified that he had tried to save a 26 year old actress, who called him "Uncle Harold," but he denied that he had put his arm around her waist while riding in an automobile.

"It would have been a physical impossibility if we were to ride in comfort," the Rev. Mr. Davidson added.

Nervous About Use of Hands.

"It has been suggested that you are nervous about the use of your hands," the prosecution said. "Is it usual for you to touch people?"

"I am forced to restrain myself constantly," the rector said, "especially from touching the learned chancellor."

"You certainly had better not," the chancellor interrupted.

The rector concluded his testimony by describing how he advised dancing girls "to take the straight and narrow path" when he called on them in their dressing rooms in London music halls.

Six Killed, Many Hurt in Salvador.

SAN SALVADOR, May 21.—(AP)—Six persons were reported dead and many injured from a severe earthquake that shook the republic of Salvador today.

Most of the casualties, including the deaths, were reported from Zacatecoluca City, capital of the department of La Paz, where many buildings were destroyed and others damaged. Other casualties were reported from the town of San Juan.

The residents of San Salvador fled to the streets in panic, but only a few old houses were damaged and no one was hurt.

The small town of San Juan was destroyed, said reports received here. Two large sections of Usulutan were demolished.

Damage also was reported in 13 other towns. Relief organizations gave first aid treatment to the seriously injured and began providing for the destitute.

SEIZE SUSPECT IN SHOOTING ON GOLF COURSE

Dan Free was held yesterday at the detective bureau as a suspect in the robbery and shooting of Dr. Daniel E. Murphy, 50 years old, of 500 Barry avenue. Dr. Murphy was shot through the thigh on the 18th fairway of the Bunker Hill golf course when he ignored the command of two bandits to drop his golf club. They took a dollar bill and change from his pockets and fled into the forest preserve.

Free was arrested at Waukegan and Milwaukee roads when police found a pistol in his car. Police said he answered the description of one of the gunmen.

350 Take Part

More than 350 boys and girls participated in a roller skating tournament yesterday at the dedication of the new south park rink at 51st street and the outer drive. Constructed of an asphalt composition, the rink is 22 feet wide and has a 2,000 foot course circling the model yacht basin. President Edward J. Kelly of the south park board said that the rink had been constructed in order to attract children from skating in the streets.

There were no children.

GREEK PREMIER QUITS IN DISPUTE ON "WHAT TO DO"

Parliament Differs on Financial Cures.

ATHENS, Greece, May 21.—(AP)—Premier Eleutherios Venizelos, whose position as head of the government was made difficult by Greece's financial problems, resigned today because of difficulty in getting parliament to pass legislation he sponsored.

He recommended the formation of a coalition republican cabinet under one of the opposition leaders. Alexander Papanastasiou, who was first premier of the Greek republic in 1924 and is leader of the Agrarian and Labor party, was expected to attempt the formation of a new cabinet.

Must Cut Costs.

Premier Venizelos announced his resignation shortly after the finance minister in presenting the nation's budget to parliament said it was imperative that expenditures be reduced. This could be done, he said, only by cutting the interest on loans hitherto paid in gold.

Fusion of the three military ministries into one portfolio of national defense was said by the finance minister to be another necessary economy.

Ruled Greece 4 Times.

Venizelos has ruled Greece four times as premier within 25 years. His present régime began in 1928, when he returned from exile in Paris.

Faced with one of the most difficult situations in its history, Greece has abandoned the gold standard and deferred payments on its foreign debts.

SCHOOL LAWYERS SEEK WAY OUT OF NEW TAX MUDDLE

May Sue to Avoid Latest "Teachers' Orders" Law

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The Chicago school board is completely blocked at present from selling any 1932 tax anticipation warrants. The reason is that Chapman and Cutler, security experts, have declined to approve of them. No bank, bond house, or insurance company would purchase the warrants without their approval.

The new difficulties of the school board arise from acts of the special session of the legislature, recently adjourned. Before the session the board obtained cash for current expenses by issuing warrants and selling them in anticipation of the collection of taxes.

Apply Law to Chicago.

Early last winter some Chicago teachers' organizations decided they wanted the system in vogue down state for 20 years. Briefly the system provided for the issuance of checks upon a school treasury, which are certified by the treasurer as an acknowledgment of salary due and payable, but are also marked "not sufficient funds." The law was made applicable to Chicago last January by legislative action. This system is called "teachers' orders."

Soon afterwards Chapman and Cutler said that while that law might be a little confusing in Chicago, it did no particular harm because tax anticipation warrants still remained as the first lien on tax collections. If tax warrants were issued to the full extent of tax collections, the warrants would be paid. If any "teachers' orders" were outstanding, their holders would have to wait for their money.

Then some one downstate conceived the idea that "teachers' orders" should be made legally acceptable for taxes. Such a law was passed by the legislature on April 26 and signed by the governor on May 3. That so complicated the local situation that Chapman and Cutler notified City Controller Szymczak that they could think of no way by which "we can approve tax anticipation warrants."

Fear Each of Money.

If tax warrants and teachers' orders are issued by the school board, and both utilized for the payment of taxes, Chapman and Cutler wrote, "there is considerable doubt whether enough actual money will be collected to pay the warrants." The opinion stated that the law firm declined to approve of warrants where there is doubt about their payment.

The school board's tax levy for its educational fund totals $51,143,006 for 1932. This is the fund from which the teachers and other employés are paid. The salary appropriations from this fund for 1932 total $42,433,888. If one-third of the teachers and other employés should demand teachers' orders—and it is said they have the right to mandamus the board to issue them—there would be about $14,144,000 in orders outstanding.

Results in Cash Shortage.

Then if the board has issued tax anticipation warrants to 60 per cent of its tax levy, there would be $30,685,000 of warrants out. If the tax collections were only 70 per cent of the levy, as they were in 1929, the board would get $35,800,000, but if the teachers' orders were used in the payment of taxes, the board would have only $21,655,000 in cash to pay off $30,685,000 in tax warrants. That is the possibility to which Chapman and Cutler object.

Attorneys for the schools, teachers, city, and Chapman & Cutler discussed the matter again yesterday.

"We have not decided what to do," explained Frank Righeimer, assistant school attorney, later, "but we believe that the last law passed is unconstitutional. It is indefinite in some respects. We are trying to find a way to raise and have decided quickly the constitutionality of the last act."

Descendants Plant Tree in Memory of Nelly Kinzie

An elm tree was planted in the memory of Nelly Kinzie, the first white girl born in Chicago, by her descendants yesterday, south of the World's Fair replica of Fort Dearborn. Mrs. Elsa Kentsing, president of the Nelly Kinzie club, presented the tree to John Manson, custodian of the fort and a direct descendant of both Nelly Kinzie and Capt. William Whistler, builder of the original fort.

DR. GECHT TELLS OF PAYING $2,000 RANSOM FOR WIFE

Gave Money to Swalwell, Victim Testifies.

The payment of $2,000 to the kidnapers who held his wife in custody was described from the witness stand yesterday in Judge Philip Sullivan's Criminal court by Dr. Max Gecht, 749 Diversey parkway. The physician testified that Attorney Ward Swalwell took the money to the kidnaping gang.

Swalwell and Edward Finnen, a saloonkeeper, are on trial for assisting in the kidnaping of Dr. Gecht and his wife. Two other defendants have pleaded guilty to the actual kidnaping.

Dr. Gecht told how he and his wife, Georgia, had been detained in a Palos Park cottage. He was released to obtain ransom money while the kidnapers continued to hold Mrs. Gecht.

Knew About His Affairs.

"Those men at the cottage knew all about my affairs," the doctor testified. "They spoke of my buying a hospital in California. The only one who knew anything about that was Swalwell."

Swalwell's defense is expected to be a claim that he acted only as an intermediary after the kidnaping and had nothing to do with the actual abduction.

The gang told him to obtain $5,000 ransom, Dr. Gecht testified, but he was able to raise only $2,000 after his release. Swalwell, whom he had called upon for advice, told him to obtain the additional $3,000 if possible, he testified.

"Those fellows are terribly tough," Swalwell was quoted as saying. "They mean business. I'm afraid for Georgia's [Mrs. Gecht] life if you don't get all the money they want."

Gives $2,000 to Swalwell.

Dr. Gecht then told of giving the $2,000 to Swalwell. The attorney took the money and later told the physician he had given it to the kidnapers.

"They'll take the $2,000 and let Georgia go," Swalwell told the physician, according to the latter's testimony. "But you've got to pay another $1,000 or they'll pick you up again."

The next morning at 7 o'clock, Dr. Gecht received a telephone message from his wife. She said she had been released in La Grange.

"What if I do pay those men another $1,000?" Dr. Gecht asked Swalwell, he testified. "They might kidnap me again."

"Oh, you can believe those fellows," Swalwell was quoted as replying.

Goes to Pat Roche.

On the day after his wife's release Dr. Gecht told the whole story to Pat Roche, chief investigator for State's Attorney Swanson. The remainder of his testimony at the session was an account of how he and Roche worked to trap the kidnapers. The physician continued to demur to the payment of the $1,000, he testified, and he received many calls from the gang, chiefly from its leader, John Pingara.

By tapping the physician's wires Roche listened in on the calls. The name of Thomas Maloy of the Motion Picture Operators' union was mentioned by the kidnapers in several calls. Maloy, they said would vouch for the fact that Dr. Gecht would not be bothered further if he paid the ransom.

Mentions a "Dr. Nathanson."

The name of a Dr. Nathanson was brought into Dr. Gecht's testimony. He said that Dr. Nathanson was mentioned by the kidnapers as a possible victim.

"Swalwell suggested that Dr. Nathanson may have put me on the spot," testified Dr. Gecht. "I said, 'Why should he?'"

Dr. Gecht was still on the stand when court adjourned to Monday.

ADMIT CONFESSION OF PARKER GUARD IN KIDNAPING TRIAL

Peoria, Ill., May 21.—[Special.]—The confession of Edward Woodford, outside guard at the Ray Stoops farm, where Dr. James W. Parker was held captive for eighteen days while his kidnapers demanded $50,000 ransom, was admitted into evidence in the trial of ten men and two women today.

It was the third confession so far introduced and admitted and it was accompanied by the same charges of police brutality and legal wrangling that delayed the trial when the others were presented. The state expects to

Harry Trautsch of the state highway police and Stephen Creech, federal game warden, testified that they raided the Stoops farm in the Spring Lake bottoms because it fitted a description given by Dr. Parker. There they arrested Ray, Bessie, and Dean Stoops, who confessed and told the officers that Woodford had acted as a guard. When arrested in Padua, in McLean county, Woodford said he had been approached and asked to serve as guard for a sum of money, the officers testified.

Woodford testified that the Peoria policemen beat him until his eyes were blackened and his face covered with blood. The policemen denied this and the prosecutor introduced a photograph of Woodford made the next day, which showed no evidence of mistreatment.

MAN WHO ATE NAILS TO LIVE SENT TO JAIL

Gerald Bodine, 33 years old, who ate nails for a living, was sentenced to serve six months in the house of correction yesterday by Judge Thomas A. Green in the jury court on a charge of attempting to collect money on false pretenses.

Bodine was arrested after he had filed a claim for damages against the Rakilos Restaurant company, charging he had been served a nail with his food. Investigation revealed that he had collected $600 on the same charge from restaurants in various parts of the country.

Bodine, who lived at 6351 Blackstone avenue, admitted yesterday that he furnished the nail and washed it down with coffee.

Chicago Court Declines to Forbid Jerusalem Divorce

The assistance of Superior Judge Harry B. Miller was sought yesterday by attorneys for Mrs. Polly Spizel, 3854 Adams street, in averting the proposed action of the grand rabbinate at Jerusalem, which has summoned her to Palestine for the hearing of an ecclesiastical divorce. Mrs. Spizel is now in Jerusalem. The lawyers asked an injunction to prevent her husband, Abraham, who also is in Jerusalem, from appearing against her or transferring his property. Judge Miller decided the matter is beyond his jurisdiction.

NEW GROUP SEEKS REASONS PEOPLE ACT THAT WAY

Scientists Form Society to Study Personality.

Chicago is the cradle of a new scientific society, one of the first of its kind, organized as a clearing house for the study of human behavior. It will count among its members, men prominent in various fields of thought, will be known as the Chicago Society for Personality Study, and will be formally launched with a meeting on Wednesday night at the Medical and Dental Arts club, when officers will be elected.

"So far as known, this is the first scientific society of its kind," Dr. Meyer Solomon, acting chairman, said yesterday. Dr. Solomon is in the department of neurology at Northwestern university medical school.

"We intend to study human behavior and personality from every angle," he said. "We will bring together psychiatrists, psychologists, sociologists, anthropologists, educators, physiologists, biochemists, political scientists, criminologists, and others whom we feel can contribute to advancement of knowledge of personality.

To Study Human Behavior.

"Human behavior and personality in every phase will be studied, from every angle. We intend to have monthly meetings at which papers will be read, and then a frank and full discussion had on all angles of the matter presented. Individual case studies will figure largely in our analyses.

"Their will, for instance, be one case submitted by one of the members from his particular angle. Then other members will enter into discussions of the physical makeup, the social background, the educational opportunities of the subject. We will endeavor in various ways to discover why an individual acts in a certain way—whether the motivating influences are controlled by one or all these things."

Group to Be Limited to 100.

Problems to be considered by the group—which for the present at least will be limited to 100, and already includes the best students of personality in Chicago and its environs—will comprehend family situations, incompatability, delinquency, the alcohol and drug habits, religious phases, cerebral fatigue, constitutional makeup, including the nervous system and ductless glands, speech disorders, political personalities, sexual problems, dreams, child behavior, primitive thinking, imagery, suggestion and hypnosis, methods of personality study and mental healing, and numerous others.

The society's membership will be nonsectarian and will include many schools of thought.

Charter members include Prof. Ernest Burgess of the department of sociology and Prof. Harvey Carr of the department of psychology at the University of Chicago; Dr. John Favill, neurologist, of Rush Medical college; Dr. Paul Schroeder, director of the Institute for Juvenile Research, and Prof. Robert Gault, psychologist, of Northwestern university.

POLICE RELEASE VOLPE.

Anthony [Mops] Volpe, once an associate of Al Capone, who was picked up Friday night and held on suspicion, was freed yesterday by police. Volpe is fighting deportation proceedings and is at liberty on bond.

STATE WILL OPPOSE EFFORTS TO PAROLE 'INDIAN JOE' HUSZAR

Efforts to obtain paroles for Joseph [Indian Joe] Huszar, former terror of motorists in the village of Broadview, and David D. Beyers, who swindled taxpayers out of an estimated $250,000, will be opposed by the state's attorney's office, it was announced yesterday. Notices that parole pleas will be heard for the prisoners on May 31, were served on Assistant State's Attorney Charles J. Mueller. The pardon board will hear the applications in Springfield.

"We will oppose these applications," said Prosecutor Mueller. "Both men deserve to be kept in the penitentiary for the maximum terms."

"Indian Joe" and Beyers have served only the minimum of their sentences. Huszar is under a 1 to 14 year sentence for assaulting motorists he arrested on the pretext that they were speeding.

Beyers took money from taxpayers on the representation that he would fix their taxes. He is under a 1 to 10 year sentence for operating a confidence game.

RACKET BUREAU TO PROBE DAIRY PLANT BOMBING

Investigation of the bombing of the Meadowmoor Dairy company, 1334 South Peoria street, last Friday morning, will be opened tomorrow by the racket bureau of the state's attorney's office, it was announced last night by Edward Dufficy, assistant state's attorney. Dufficy said the investigation would be opened by calling in officers of the milk wagon drivers' union.

At the city health department it was said yesterday that the newly formed dairy has not yet met requirements on which a milk plant license can be issued.

"The new equipment in the Meadowmoor plant has not met standards of the board of health in two tests recently made," declared Dr. Herman N. Bundensen. "They are coöperating with us and regardless of any local squabbles, a license will be issued when the standard requirements are reached.

The Meadowmoor company announced after the bombing Friday that it would retail milk at 9 cents a quart, two cents less than the regular price in Chicago. J. L. Selph, manager, said farmers near Sun Prairie, Wis., and in five other localities have offered to supply the milk.

RAID FAKE BOND HOUSES NAMED IN $500,000 FRAUD

Suspect Ousted Exchange Member as Operator.

Investigators from the state's attorney's office yesterday raided the handsomely furnished offices of three so-called investment companies on the twelfth floor at 188 West Randolph street, where, it is alleged, swindlers operated a confidence game that cost gullible victims a total of $500,000.

Sixty of these victims, according to Assistant State's Attorneys L. P. Holt and H. S. Weinberg, turned over to the occupants of the office securities which were to be sold. Perhaps the sales were made, but none of the sixty has received any money for his negotiable paper.

The offices were deserted when the raiders arrived and it was apparent that they had not been occupied for more than a week. Nor was there a single negotiable bond or stock certificate in the place. The prosecutors, however, took possession of a truckload of records bearing on the operations of the three concerns—the Prudential company, the Bond Discount company, and the Northwestern Investment Securities company.

High Pressure Operators.

Methods of the operators of the three companies were of the high pressure variety. They had a list of 15,000 physicians in the middle west and a form letter ready to be mailed to each, in which the companies offered to buy, sell, exchange, or advance money on any type of security. There evidently had been a great many strong telephone appeals to the customers—there was an unpaid $2,000 bill for services on one of the desks.

During the last week a number of the customers, suspicious because they were unable to get either money or the return of securities they had sent in for sale, had gone to the offices to demand settlement. Assistant State's Attorney Edward Dufficy of the racket bureau, who coöperated with Prosecutors Holt and Weinberg in the investigation, said that none of them had found any of the officers in.

It was explained that the Prudential company and the Northwestern had been independent concerns, but recently had been taken over by several men and coördinated with the Bond Discount company.

Dobry Believed Member.

One of the operating group is believed by the prosecutors to have been D. A. [Old Pressure] Dobry, who was expelled from the Chicago curb exchange in November, 1930, for violation of the rules. He was at that time president of the D. A. Dobry Securities company of Daven, t, Ia. His company collapsed two months later and Dobry disappeared, as did $400,000 of the concern's assets.

In April, 1931, Dobry was seized in Chicago and was held in the county jail while a search for these assets was being made by a receiver appointed in the federal court. In May, 1931, he was sent to Iowa on extradition proceedings. He was released there some time later.

Some of the losers of good securities told the prosecutors that a man with whom they talked called himself, with some customers, Allen, and with others, Smith. These were false names adopted by Dobry, in the opinion of the state's attorney's investigators.

ATTORNEYS TO GET BRITONS' CHARGES IN FACTOR SWINDLE CASE

Federal Judge Charles E. Woodward yesterday entered the formal order allowing Attorneys John H. S. Lee and Thomas C. McConnell to take depositions in London in the suit of British investors to break the $3,000,000 Chicago trust fund of John [Jake the Barber] Factor. The former Chicago barber is alleged to have defrauded English investors of $7,000,000 in fraudulent stock deals.

Reliable reports yesterday that Factor had purchased a Rolls Royce automobile for $27,000 indicated that he has other money outside the trust fund. Factor cannot touch the trust fund until disposition of the pending suit.

Attorneys McConnell and Lee, representing the investors, will leave tomorrow for England to be gone for two months as the final preliminary step before the civil suit, which is expected to go to trial late this summer. They will question investors in Factor enterprises who are financially unable to attend the trial and take depositions from brokers who handled money for Factor. The attempt of the British government to extradite Factor for criminal trial in England, is pending in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. The motion was denied in the District court.

If he's all "PLAYED OUT" when PLAYTIME comes—

it's ASTHENIA*

HE used to be the one who always wanted to "go places and do things" ... kept urging you to hurry through dinner so you could be off together to the movies, a show or a dance.

With what zestful anticipation you used to look forward to your delightful evenings together .. to those enchanting hours of recreation that brought the long day's separation to an end.

But how he has changed! Now—how you dread the tedium of drab evenings!

Strange as it may seem, you yourself have been partially at fault—without realizing it.

You've let him grow old—feeling, no doubt, that you were powerless to prevent it.

But you're not! You can restore his former vigor.. his eager vitality ... his spirit... his enthusiasm.. his pep! Do it naturally, too .. in 10 days' time .. and with no more than a minute a day of his cooperation.

Would it surprise you to know that he ... like thousands of other busy men ... is a victim of *Asthenia? That his present apathy is caused by faulty elimination?

"But how is that possible?" you ask. "He's as regular as can be!"

Poisons accumulate gradually . bred by millions of micro-organisms in the digestive tract. Little by little these poisons seep into the blood stream. Then comes that half-alive feeling—the condition known to science as *Asthenia.

That's what's robbing him of his former zest and depriving you of those cherished joys and pleasures.

Would you like to know how to restore his former vigor.. make him eager once more to participate in the pleasures which used to mean so much to both of you?

Get him to take Pluto Water before breakfast every morning for ten mornings. Don't let him miss a morning for ten days straight! You'll be amazed how this gentle, simple treatment will restore his old-time vim. He'll begin to feel as if he were "walking on air."

After that—have him take Pluto Water every Sunday morning regularly and he'll be rid of this insidious blight.

Incidentally, you might try the treatment yourself. You'll find it just what you need to tone up your system.

Pluto Water comes in two sizes—20c and 45c—at all drug counters; on trains, steamships; and at hotels.

A Gentle Laxative

Recommended by physicians everywhere.

Start now to cleanse your system of Asthenia—⅛ glass of Pluto Water in ⅞ glass of hot water—each morning for ten days. Then take Pluto Water every Sunday morning.

"RIDE in all THREE —but don't buy any car till you've had a Floating Power ride"

MAKE COMPARISONS WITH ALL THREE LOWEST-PRICED CARS AND DECIDE FOR YOURSELF, URGES WALTER P. CHRYSLER

"ANY CAR without patented Floating Power is out-of-date."

I KNOW you're going to look around this summer before you buy any low-priced car. You should.

In times like these, you're wise to weigh values carefully and demand the most for your money.

That's why I want you to compare this new Plymouth with the other two lowest-priced cars.

I want you to see how much longer and bigger and roomier the new Plymouth is. Why, we're even building a big seven-passenger sedan with 121-inch wheelbase.

Check up on the engineering, too. Try to match the modern features of the new Plymouth in either of the other two cars. It has the very finest Floating Power, Free Wheeling, Hydraulic Brakes, Easy Shift Transmission with Silent Second—all of them.

I promise you the surprise of your life in Plymouth's Floating Power. You'll find that vibration no longer exists. You'll marvel at the smoothness of the Plymouth. After ten minutes at the wheel, I think you'll agree with me that any car without patented Floating Power is out-of-date.

Floating Power is something apart from Free Wheeling. Plymouth also has Free Wheeling. Don't confuse the two.

In all my experience, I never built an automobile that was packed with so much value as this new Plymouth. And I never built one that sold for as little.

See the new Plymouth. Drive it. Compare it with those other two cars of its price, before making any decision. That's the one sure way to get the most for every dollar.

WANTED . . . USED CARS! Now is the time to trade. Dealers now can give you an advantageous allowance on a new Plymouth. Prices on the 10 models range from $495 to $785. Thrift Models—2-door Sedan $495, 4-door Sedan $575. All prices f. o. b. factory.

HORNER RULES ON $3,000,000,000 WITHOUT A LOSS

Widow and Orphan Find Probate Judge a Friend.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Cook county's Probate court, over which Judge Henry Horner has presided for seventeen years, impresses the visitor as a combination of the judiciary and big scale business. More than 200 million dollars in cash and property passes through the court each year, most of it to widows and orphans.

Three billion dollars in 17 years was estimated yesterday as the volume of business settled by the court during Judge Horner's incumbency. To get an idea of its size, it is a larger sum than that now being administered by the 2 billion dollar Hoover Reconstruction Finance corporation, of which Gen. Charles G. Dawes is head.

"Not a Dollar Lost."

The boast of the county building is that not a dollar belonging to the widows and orphans and minors has been lost by reason of any lack of efficient court management.

To handle the estates, which come into the court at the rate of 10,000 a year, Judge Horner has developed an organization as closely articulated as that of the largest corporations in private business. He has six assistant judges, each a specialist, in addition to 60 clerks, and the court has won nation-wide recognition for system, speed and for uprooting unscrupulous tactics which, years ago, used to eat heavily into estates.

Social students have ascribed much of the success of the court to the possession by Judge Horner of financial acumen as well as legal sagacity. It has kept many an inherited estate from evaporating before the heirs became of age. The judge, who is the Democratic nominee for governor, takes as much interest in the smallest estates as in the largest.

Fixes Rule for Investments.

A few years back, in the whoopee era of inflation and "get rich quick," Judge Horner was not so popular among some guardians and conservators. When new money in an estate accumulated in the bank and the guardians came around to get permission to invest, the judge laid down a fixed rule for the protection of the minors and insane. He insisted that new investments must be of only three kinds, federal or municipal securities, or real estate at 50 per cent of its actual value.

Stocks and bonds were skyrocketing then and the stock exchanges were running wild and millionaires were being made overnight, on paper. The judge, however, ruled stocks and bonds out—too speculative. Guardians raged and stormed; they criticized the judge as being too conservative; they said he lacked knowledge of modernist finance. The judge affably turned them down. He said he would not permit any orphans under his jurisdiction to become lambs in Wall street.

After October, 1929, these critics changed their tune. Every time the market hits a new low they renew their thanks.

In a reminiscent mood yeseterday, Judge Horner recalled a few of these cases, among them one involving an orphan with $50,000 in the bank.

"It was a funny case," said the judge. "The family came around and wanted me to let them invest the money—it was some $50,000—in the stock of a corporation that was jumping up by leaps and bounds on the ticker. They said their whole neighborhood was putting its money into this stock, that it was a concern of such wonderful management and with such an established market that the stock was gilt edged, as good as a federal bond.

"They talked so long that I finally said, 'Well, I'll let you invest, if you can bring me a bond from a guaranty company guaranteeing that the stock will not fall in price.' I did not think for a minute, of course, that they would be able to do this.

"But, illustrative of those times, in a week or so they appeared with a policy, or bond, from a guaranty company, guaranteeing that the stock would be worth three years from then what it then was. So I let them invest.

"Then came the collapse of the market. The stock tumbled, but instead of the orphan losing it was the guaranty company, which was obligated by its bond."

Judge Horner said what he likes best about his work is the romance in it. It's an attitude that has led the bench and bar to call him "protector of the widows and orphans."

His court, and the judge himself, for that matter, is organized like clockwork. At 9 o'clock he appears in his office, carrying a satchel, with wax records of notes, opinions, letters he has dictated into a phonograph during the previous evening at home. For one hour he has informal hearings in his chambers. Fifty or sixty are generally waiting. Last year, the clerk's count showed, 9,083 persons had presented matters to the judge in his chamber in the 9 to 10 period. As much attention is paid to a guardian who wants permission to buy a bicycle for a boy with an estate of a few hundred dollars as to one who asks a permit to buy an automobile for some minor who is heir to a large fortune.

Ninety Cases in 75 Minutes.

At 10 o'clock the judge mounts the bench, where he sits until 11:15 on daily motions of court. These average 90 every morning—200 on Thursdays when the time is extended. In 75 minutes 90 motioins are heard and decisions made. The lawyers have been trained to cut their remarks to the bone, no superfluous words. Last year 20,980 such motioins were heard by Judge Horner.

Speed and dispatch is the word. Some 40,000 estates are constantly in process of settlement. About 10,000 new ones are filed each year and about 10,000 are disposed of.

GERMANS SUFFER AS STATE BUILDS $2,000,000 JAIL

Prussia Offers Example of Reckless Spending.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BRANDENBURG, Germany, May 21. — While the federal government states and communities alike in Germany are neck deep in debt, owing to years of reckless spending, and while the deficit of the communities alone in the current year is estimated at close to $200,000,000, the state of Prussia has just completed its latest luxurious public building—the penitentiary in Brandenburg. It cost the Prussian taxpayers almost $2,000,000.

The new building is the latest word in jails. For the superhumanitarian ideas which inspired it the building made Berliners nickname it "the Brandenburg sanatorium." It is located in an expensive woody district near Brandenburg, originally designed for the erection of villas.

No Bars on Windows.

The building is approached by a broad avenue lined with lime trees. The impression from outside is that of a magnificent governmental building rather than of a penitentiary.

So eager were the achitects to avoid that bleak jail aspect that they forgot some of the vital requirements of prisons, such as grilled windows, and the very first day of its occupation two old jailbirds slipped through the fine entrance portal, decorated with heavy bronzes, and disappeared for good.

The penitentiary occupies a space larger than that of the vast imperial palace in Berlin. Each single sleeping cell occupies 529 cubic feet.

Plenty of Sun and Air.

All the sleeping cells are to the north, while the numerous public rooms, smoking rooms and workshops, where the prisoners spend the day, face the west, east and south to give the maximum of sun and air. Many corridors have glass roofs. The building encircles spacious lawns for sporting purposes. There is a church, with an organ, and a movie theater. Much space is occupied by the bathing establishment. Numerous shower baths and bath tubs are neatly separated from each other by rubber curtains in gay colors.

Some point with pride to the fact that Prussia now has the finest, the most expensive, the most humanitarian jail in the world. Most persons, however, say that, with all due respect to modern humanitarian ideas, $2,000,000 is a rather stiff sum to spend for the exclusive benefit of jailbirds in these hard times.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

CONGRESS AND THE RISING TIDE.

From all over the country a tide of protests and memorials is sweeping on congress and the President, demanding a reduction in the colossal costs of the federal government. Thus far the protests have had little visible effect. Some congressmen at one moment talk big about economy, a moment later refuse to vote reductions in appropriations, and the next day vote for higher and more burdensome taxation.

The result is a growing bitterness, an ill concealed dislike for official Washington, which is creeping into the speeches and petitions of the citizens. Many of the men in the government resent the demands for an economy which will prevent the fulfilling of political promises and interfere with the maintenance of political organizations, while those on the outside rightly regard these considerations as negligible in a time of national crisis. The more irresponsible men in congress have sought to divide their enemy by arraying the poorer against the richer, but the results to date must have proved disappointing. Instead of halting the demands for economy, the display of demagoguery has had the opposite effect.

No newspaper is large enough to print all the protests which each day are being hurled at Washington. Only the most significant of the petitions and speeches ever find their way into print, but even one day's collection of these is convincing evidence of the state of the popular mind.

A few days ago, for example, Mr. Merwin K. Hart of Utica, N. Y., spent a half hour with the President to demand, in the name of the New York Economic council, of which Mr. Hart is president, that federal expenditures be reduced to the 1926 rate. He told Mr. Hoover that the people of Binghamton and Endicott had declared in favor of abandoning work on their postoffices as a measure of federal economy. Mr. Hart said he was astonished at the eagerness of the people of the smaller cities in New York to organize for economy in government. The interview no doubt was friendly enough in tone, but the reference to the popular temper in Republican strongholds in upstate New York could have been intended for only one purpose: to warn Mr. Hoover and his party.

Mr. Hart's warning was reinforced on the same day by former Gov. Smith. Alfred E. Smith, too, knows his New York. He demanded retrenchments and with characteristic candor placed himself squarely in favor of a reorganization of the executive departments by Mr. Hoover. This, from the nominal leader of the Democratic party, from the man who obtained more votes than ever before were given to a man of his party in a presidential election, is a fair warning to the shortsighted Democratic leaders in congress. If they want to capture control of the government they must do so by giving the country what it wants above everything else: a relief from the tax burden. They cannot afford to play politics with this issue. To do so is to advertise their incompetence. Mr. Smith did not hesitate, even, to demand not only the defeat of the bonus bill but also a reduction in the present appropriations for veteran relief. Almost alone among the active politicians he is speaking the overwhelming sentiment of the country on this issue.

On the same day the Kansas City section of the Federation of American Business heard and applauded the speech of former Senator James A. Reed. Mr. Reed is conscious of the cleavage between the more gluttonous pay rollers and the nation and demands a show of strength. Who are these congressmen who vote for taxes and against retrenchment, he asks, and answers his question from the wealth of his experience in Washington. They are men who succeeded in getting themselves elected to office, but otherwise men of limited mental and moral endowment.

Mr. Reed was merely giving voice to the inarticulate thought of the people of the United States. Those in Washington who wish to remain there will give heed to what he says. Passions are rising. The strongest of instincts, the instinct for self-preservation, is at work. Congress will bow to the popular will or take the consequences.

The American people, as these expressions and a thousand others plainly show, regard it as their duty to support the government and not the government's duty to support the people. The people of this country want to be relieved of their burden of taxation because it is impossibly heavy and also because the enormous sums now being taken to Washington are used for the destruction of private enterprise and the creation in its place of a collectivist society. The tragic examples of New Zealand and Australia stand as a warning of what must be expected if a group of unscrupulous politicians within the District of Columbia is permitted to gain the victory over the constructive forces of the nation.

DEMOCRACY AND EDUCATION.

There is an idealistic and somewhat sentimental equalitarianism which suspects and resists recognition of differences in individual capabilities and which would standardize education according to a misapplied theory of equal opportunity. It ignores the fact that opportunities exist only for those who are able to make use of them and that a single standard of academic or book-minded education cannot bring equality in results. For one youth it is useful, for another hopelessly inadequate. To the great extent that this false conception of popular education has dominated our schooling it has been hugely wasteful, both from the viewpoint of individuals and that of our modern society. We all want every child to find the door of opportunity open, so far as our forethought and experience can provide it. But the opportunity he should have assured to him is the opportunity to be himself, to make the most of what is in him. To provide merely academic education is to shut this opportunity off from many, indeed to most. The academic or book-minded conception is supposed to be democratic, but it is not related to the actualities of a free society.

A free society cannot be well served by an education based on a false equalitarianism, which ignores the variety of individual character and capacity. It cannot be well served by an educational system which ignores its need for competent mechanics as well as for competent teachers, preachers, bankers, doctors and lawyers.

But the question of vocational preparation is not the only one which presents itself for educational readjustment. There is the vital question of education for citizenship. We believe this has been even less satisfactorily answered than that of preparation for individual success. It is not an easy problem to solve, but it is of the greatest moment that it should be solved. There is nothing more ominous in our democratic state today than that popular thought is so easily betrayed. This is not so much the result of influences met in mature life as in lack of sound basic training and information in the plastic years. Indeed, the best influences are largely wasted because they come too late. Our educational system has failed to prepare for competent citizenship while preparation is effective. That is why the efforts of the responsible press, of civic organizations and disinterested leaders are so often abortive.

It is, of course, true that good citizenship is largely a product of forces and factors which the schools cannot directly provide, moral or religious factors, the influences of homes, of social environment, of heredity. But there is a rudimentary instruction in political action, in the simple principles of our government and the historic experience from which they sprang, which is not yet efficiently given. We think our schooling is not adequate in arousing interest in citizen responsibilities while it may be possible to implant and cultivate it. And above all else, we think, it falls short of its possibilities in training average minds to be in a reasonable degree critical, logical, and resistant to false emotion. No doubt this last is very near a counsel of perfection. We realize that it represents a very difficult ideal. But if we are to make even an approximate success of self-government we must try earnestly and unfalteringly to approach it.

THE TRAINING CAMPS.

As a friend of the military training camps THE TRIBUNE can say that it was not the true advocates of national defense who put the $5,000,000 appropriation back in the army department bill. They would reserve their advocacy until the country had restored its revenues and was again on its feet. They realize that national defense is now acutely one against internal raids upon financial security. The enemy is the spirit in congress which fights all attempts to cut government expenses.

The tactics are not bewildering. They simply require a coalition of all the influences which want any kind of appropriation. One is led to the support of another and thus nothing can be touched. The training camps are valuable, but the waste of public money by indefensible government activities and expenditures has been such that important enterprises must be suspended until there has been a recovery. Compromises will not get results.

FEDERAL LAWS AGAINST KIDNAPING.

Two bills have been introduced in congress to punish kidnaping as an offense against federal law. Both bills seem to have been prepared at the instance of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, and in all probability would have slumbered in committee save for the Lindbergh affair. Now a subcommittee of the house is preparing to report one bill favorably and a senate committee is expected to give its blessing to the other.

The pattern of much of American political thinking was never more clearly revealed. Something happens which offends the conscience of the American people, but they do not exert themselves to catch the offenders and punish them under existing law. The feeling of outrage is transferred, instead, to Washington and takes the form of a demand for a new law. Two assumptions, both of them wholly false, are made. One is that the officers of the federal government are more efficient and honest than those of the state governments are or can be; and the other is that the cure for any ill, new or old, is a new law. If either of these assumptions were within a light year of the truth the millennium would have dawned long ago in this country.

To what lengths congressmen, supposed to know something about the American scheme of government, will go in drafting these laws is also well illustrated in the kidnaping measures. There is, of course, no constitutional warrant for a federal law against kidnaping. To find an excuse for the enactment one of the bills sets forth the theory that kidnaping is commerce. If a kidnaped person is carried across a state line, therefore, a transaction in interstate commerce has been completed; and congress has the right to regulate interstate commerce. The Supreme court has stretched the meaning of interstate commerce to the breaking point, but even so the judges would not let congress place a tax on the interstate shipment of goods manufactured by child labor because, the court said, the tax was plainly intended not for the regulation of commerce but for the prevention of child labor, which is not the business of the federal government. They could hardly hold, then, that a law to punish kidnaping as interstate commerce was a regulation of commerce rather than a regulation of kidnaping, without complete self-stultification. The chances, then, are that a man convicted under the proposed kidnaping law would be set free by the Supreme court, and instead of the law's resulting in the punishment of a guilty man it would have precisely the opposite effect.

The other kidnaping bill would punish any one who sent a note through the mails demanding ransom. One objection to this bill is its loose phrasing. Intended merely to punish kidnapers who use the mails, the law might be employed for very different purposes, much as the Mann act, which was intended to prevent interstate traffic in prostitutes, came to be used by blackmailing gold diggers. The more fundamental and important objection to the bill, however, is the inescapable fact that the crime which should be punished is not mailing a letter, but kidnaping. If it is possible to catch the man who mailed the letter it is also possible to catch the man who did the kidnaping, because he is the same fellow. If it is possible for a federal officer to catch a letter mailer it is possible for a state officer to catch a kidnaper.

Kidnaping is not a new crime. It is at least as old as Joseph in the Bible. The men who wrote the constitution knew all there was to know about kidnaping and wisely concluded that, like other ordinary crimes against persons and property, the crime of kidnaping is an offense properly punishable by state and not federal law. Nothing has happened meanwhile which in any sense justifies a change in that basic concept. The Lindbergh case, far from emphasizing a need for an extension of the federal government's powers, points directly to the need for local vigilance. If the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce would spend less time in trying to get federal laws enacted and more time in cleaning up St. Louis it would accomplish something substantial. It is not without significance in this connection that the men now being tried for kidnaping Dr. James Parker were caught through the efforts of the Chicago Association of Commerce. And they are being prosecuted, it might be added, under Illinois law in the courts of Illinois.

THE MACAULAY PROPHECY

MACAULAY'S forecast of doom for the American democracy has been put back in circulation as something which may be near fulfillment. "I seriously apprehend that you will," he wrote H. S. Randall of New York in 1857, "in some such season of adversity as I have described, do things which will prevent prosperity from returning; that you will act like people in a year of scarcity, devour all the seed corn and thus make the next year a year not of scarcity but of absolute failure. There will be, I fear, spoliation. The spoliation will increase distress. The distress will produce fresh spoliation. There is nothing to stay you. As I said before, when society has entered this downward progress either civilization or liberty must perish."

THE END OF THE NEW WORLD

RANDALL had written Macaulay to say he was surprised to learn that Macaulay did not have a high opinion of Jefferson. Macaulay replied that he was "surprised at your surprise." He did not have a high opinion of Mr. Jefferson because he was full of dread of democratic institutions. "I have been long convinced that institutions purely democratic must, sooner or later, destroy liberty or civilization or both. . . . Either the poor would plunder the rich and civilization would perish or order and property would be saved by a strong military government, and liberty would perish." An idea that the United States might be exempt from the rule he could not hold. When population had spread over the fertile and unoccupied land the problems of the new world would be those of the old and exemptions would disappear. "Then your institutions will be brought fairly to the test."

THE FATHERS OF COMMUNISM

THE BRITISH system has come more nearly offering proof for the prophecy than the American. Macaulay was standing on the soil which was to produce a Labor party prime minister and make Ben Smith, ex-taxi driver, treasurer of the royal household. It was British development which was to bring the sale of castles to pay the dole. The extravaganzas of Australia and New Zealand were to arise out of it. The ideas which permeated the islands and the dominions did not spread out of America. They came from the land of the kaiser and the czar. It was absolutism which bred socialism and communism.

IF NOT DEMOCRACY, WHAT?

DEMOCRACY may not work. The trouble is, we do not know what else will. Temporarily, Stalin and Mussolini. Ultimately, dictatorships blow up. Monarchy has gone to pot. The bottom comes up and spills top government. Wherever people are told that they cannot have suffrage and political equalities they are in a ferment until they get them. Even if we do not know what kind of government can endure we may be pretty sure it will not be one which tries to deny a majority of its people a satisfying participation in it. If with such participation they can't make a go of it the alternative may be that they must make a go of it.

American democracy made itself some of its troubles when it began to distrust its representative system.

The United States was designed as a representative democracy. That was not because the people were either uninformed in the theory of pure democracy or inexperienced in its working. They used it for their regional affairs. It was found in the town meeting.

Impatience with some disclosed defects of the representative scheme, particularly in the system of party management and nominations, led to an impulsive abandonment of some of its features and the adoption of direct action. It appears that a wiser course would have been to do the best that could be done with the system as it was. There was too much impatience for that.

YOUR TEETH! LOOK OUT!

THE old fox and coon hunters who read this story will tell the greenhorns that it is easy to judge when a pack of dogs have hit a good trail. By its energy and enthusiasm, the tone of the bark, and the number of dogs that join in, the pack tells the trained ear of an experienced listener that the game is not far from the pursuers.

The writer had his training and knows how to time his ears to know how the dogs feel through the pitch of what they say. He has also had some experience in listening to the bay of research students chasing their prey. The signs indicate that the research men who are working on the problem of mottled teeth are soon to "make a kill."

Mottled teeth, as such, are of more interest to my beautiful neighbors who tell the ladies how to become beautiful, or how to remain so. The uglier men, and the children sometimes known to neighbors as ugly ducklings, are more interested in crumbling teeth and teeth that do not hold fillings well. Many complain that fillings will not stay in their teeth. They wonder if they should blame their dentists. There are some who complain that their own or the children's teeth crumble as though they were made of sand, or they wear down to the roots even though the sufferer is not a tobacco chewer.

Evidence accumulates that the trouble results from drinking water that contains too much fluorin. The remedy consists in changing one's source of drinking water. When the railroads found that the water taken on by locomotives at certain tanks made steaming unsatisfactory, their first reaction was to discontinue using the objectionable tanks. The second step was to find water softeners that would convert bad water into a satisfactory product.

Probably before long all communities supplied now with water that causes mottled teeth will be using an efficient softener suited to the particular water.

One of the recent additions to the pack is a group of people connected with the University of Arizona. The people of a town in that state complained that their teeth were bad. The cause was traced to the water supply. Those citizens who did not use water from the common supply had good teeth. The research students at the university proved that the water had too much fluorin and that the foods used in the town did not. Finally they used experimental rats to clinch the proof that excess of fluorin in a water supply harmed the teeth.

KEEP UP THE HABIT.

L. R. writes: Ten days ago I weighed 184 pounds [stripped] and today, 173 pounds. This was accomplished simply by not packing into my very prominent stomach pastry, breads, butter, and potatoes, and eating freely but moderately of grape fruit, oranges, salads, meats [except pork], cream and sugar in my tea and coffee. In fact, I am having more fun eating than formerly. I measure 5 feet 7 inches in height and would and can easily take off another ten pounds. I am 50 years old.

What's wrong, if anything, with my eating habits? Personally, I think they are wonderful and, inasmuch as I have been too obese for three to four years, I feel I have really achieved something. I sleep great, not falling asleep, however, an hour or so after dinner in the easy chair.

REPLY.

It is not easy to understand how minor changes in your diet could make you lose eleven pounds in ten days. Probably a good deal of the loss is of water, and the rate of reduction will slow up as soon as you have dried out somewhat.

Be that as it may, you are comfortable and happy, and you are fully justified in going after that other ten pounds. In fact, you might make it twenty. A man 5 feet 7 inches tall should weigh about 153 pounds.

I am sure your feet will give you a unanimous vote of thanks.

SORENESS IN MOUTH!

A. B. C. writes: For some time I have had constant soreness in the interior of my mouth and white patches on the tongue. It is a stinging soreness. I have been to several physicians and dentists, and have had various methods of treatment for Vincent's angina. A specialist on mouth diseases, to whom I was sent as a last resort, after having treated the infection also as trench mouth, suggested I have a Wassermann blood test and smear taken. The test was negative. The smear failed to show any trace of Vincent's. What do you think this can be?

REPLY.

Since trench mouth has been ruled out you might be examined for three other possibilities: Pellagra, pernicious anemia, and Hunter's anemia. Each may have mouth symptoms.

DON'T GET THE HABIT.

M. S. writes: Is there any harm in eating baking soda? I crave it after eating my meals.

REPLY.

I think there is. Soda should not be taken except under a physician's directions. You may have a stomach ulcer and the acid juice causes discomfort. If that is your trouble you should know it. To take soda habitually is to upset the balance between acid and alkali in your system, and to provoke the stomach to secrete acid unduly.

WHEN DOCTORS DISAGREE.

Dr. C. A. E. writes: You are wrong when you say that after a child has had diphtheria and is cured by antitoxin, he is safe from a second attack of the disease. I know that is the rule, but there are exceptions, and I have seen one.

REPLY.

You are right, as usual, though I have known you to be wrong. I hope my batting average of being right may equal yours.

COLLECTING LOAN.

Cicero, Ill., May 7.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. Can I collect a loan of $600 without a note? 2. The loan was made nine years ago, but I have four witnesses to prove I gave him the money. 3. He had two boys who worked for five years helping him pay for a property and business with the understanding of being shareholders. When not helping there they worked some place else and sent money to help pay on the property and business. Is there any way they can collect? 4. Now he is married the second time and his second wife told the boys to get out. They have witnesses to prove they gave their time and money. Is there any way they can collect? 5. I made the loan in Indiana and afterwards he bought property and built a business in Wisconsin. Does that make any difference? 6. Could I put a lien on the property or secure an injunction against said property?
A. C.

1. Yes, on proper proof.
2. The limitation period on oral contracts is five years and hence your claim would be barred unless the period has been extended by part payments or new promises.
3. It would be presumed that services rendered by minors were not to be compensated. We cannot advise to advantage without knowing the age of the boys and exactly what was said.
4. See No. 3.
5. No.
6. See 1 and 2.

BUILDING RESTRICTIONS.

Chicago, May 10.—[Friend of the People.]—I'd like to know how many inches or feet of space is required to be left on each side of the lot when you build a garage. A garage was built next to mine and it is situated so close that there is no room for an umbrella to pass through.
C. R.

A frame garage not exceeding 300 square feet in area may be built on the lot line. A frame garage over 300 square feet must be at least one foot from the lot line. If built of brick it may be built on the lot line.

JOHN E. ERICSSON,
Deputy, Department of Buildings.

MORTGAGE RENEWAL.

Evanston, Ill., May 7.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I own a small home which has a first mortgage against it. This mortgage is held by a local bank and it falls due next February. 1. If the bank will not renew it what, if any, rights have I after they foreclose on me? 2. How soon after it falls due can they foreclose? 3. I am planning on renting it this spring. Who would collect the rent after mortgage is due? 4. I have been told that I have homestead rights but do not understand what it is. Please explain.
M. S.

1. Fifteen months are allowed for redemption from the foreclosure.
2. At once.
3. You will unless a receiver is appointed.
4. If you read the trust deed you will probably find that it expressly waives homestead. What your informer probably had in mind was the fifteen months allowed for redemption from the foreclosure.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

NATIONAL CONVENTIONS

REPUBLICAN—1896.

St. Louis, Mo., June 18.—The Republican national convention which began on June 16 in the Auditorium building finished its work and adjourned. William McKinley of Ohio was nominated on the first ballot, exactly as predicted in THE TRIBUNE weeks ago. The vote was McKinley, 661½; Thomas B. Reed, 84½; Matthew S. Quay, 61½; Levi P. Morton, 58; Senator Allison, 35; Don Cameron, 1. Mark Hanna, the successful leader of the McKinley forces, made a pretty little speech and Permanent Chairman John M. Thurston of Nebraska declared Mr. McKinley to be the nominee.

Garret A. Hobart of New Jersey was nominated for Vice President by a vote of 533½ to 277½ for H. Clay Evans of Tennessee, his nearest rival, with the rest of the votes scattered.

The gold standard, by the action of the convention, has been recognized by an overwhelming majority of the Republican party. A strong effort was made to induce the party leaders to agree on a straddle declaration on the money question, but they withstood the temptation and gave the world an illustration of the bravery of the Republican party in meeting any issue forced upon them.

The silver delegates led by Senator Henry M. Teller of Colorado bolted the convention and held a miniature convention of their own in which it was agreed to place Senator Teller in the race for President on a bimetallic platform. Among prominent silver leaders who joined the bolters were F. T. Dubois of Idaho, C. S. Hartman of Montana, Frank Q. Cannon of Utah and R. F. Pettigrew of South Dakota. The silver men left the convention after Senator Cannon had read the declaration of principles on behalf of the silver contingent of the resolutions committee.

MAY 22, 1916.

PARIS.—The last two days have been marked by unprecedented activity by aviators on the western battle front. Raids and counter raids were made all along the front and duels in the air were numerous. Official reports show that allied airmen had the better of the battles. Several German aircraft were destroyed or driven to the earth while the allies lost five of their machines. The Germans twice raided Dunkirk, killing seven and wounding thirty-five, and dropped many bombs on Belfort and the region of Baccarat and Epinal. The allies bombed the German encampments at Wywege and Ghistelles, the military establishments at Thionville, Etain, and Spincourt and the German bases at Azannes and Damvilliers.

CONSTANTINOPLE.—The war office communication says: "On May 18 three enemy warships bombarded El Arish [coast of Syria] for two hours while six enemy airmen dropped 100 bombs; 100 persons were killed and five slightly injured."

VIENNA.—The official Austrian reports of May 19 and 20 show further extensive gains in the new offensive movement in the southern Tyrol which has carried the Austrian front into Italian territory. The Austrians have entered Ronncegno. The statements say that since the beginning of the attack the Austro-Hungarians have captured 257 Italian officers and more than 12,900 men.

BERLIN.—More than 1,300 French, including 31 officers, 16 machine guns and 8 cannon, were captured in a new German assault on the Verdun front in the region of Dead Man hill, the war office announced.

PARIS.—The French war office admits that the Germans succeeded in capturing a first line trench on Dead Man hill on the Verdun front and gained ground on the slopes west of the hill.

AN OLD GERMAN LETTER.

Madison, Wis., May 6.—The interest aroused by the publication in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE of extracts from several German emigrant letters of about ninety years ago has had the effect of causing persons in this country who are of German descent to look into their family archives for letters which may have lodged there many years ago.

Approximately one hundred copies of German letters assembled at the University of Bonn, Germany, have been received by the State Historical Society of Wisconsin. It was this collection from which samples were printed. Now comes Mr. Christian See of 3915 South La Salle street, Chicago, who has kindly offered to the State Historical Society of Wisconsin the privilege of copying an old letter which has been in his possession for a long time. It was written to his ancestor in the Rhine province, Germany, under date of Dec. 3, 1853, by Mathias Zimmer, whose place of residence at that time was St. Clair, Mich. The writer was living upon a small farm and had evidently recently come to this country for he speaks of German friends who had helped him in getting settled. He is delighted with his new surroundings, and says:

"Here it is better for poor people than in Germany, for here one can earn enough money. My two oldest sons earn for me every month each sixteen dollars and their own good board, working in the sawmill. Next spring my son Nicolas will get eighteen dollars. . . . Here there is more food grown than America needs, otherwise France and Germany would starve. . . . Household equipment is somewhat dearer than in Germany, but worth much more. I have bought myself all household equipment; we also have a fine cow and a fine sow. Two days before St. Barbara's day we butchered a pig which was fatter than any I ever butchered in Germany. It cost me thirteen dollars. . . . We have here as good Kirmess as those in Weiberen can imagine, for our daily bread is much nicer than what the Weiberen people bake for Kirmess bread. . . . Bell received me as a father his own child who had long been away. He brought me from town with his oxen and wagon, waited on me nicely, kept me over night, and helped me to get settled in our own home. . . . He has everything in sufficiency again, although he had lost so much when he was in Wisconsin. In these four years that he is back here he has acquired eighty-five acres of land, and very good land; two yoke of oxen, two wagons, six cows, four other cattle, six young calves, a flock of sheep and a drove of hogs, from which he slaughtered four fat hogs and one fat cow. All of this he has acquired since his return from Wisconsin, and all is paid for. So it is easy to see that it is not bad here if one is industrious and sensible. . . . We could wish that it were as good for poor people in Germany as it is here."

The custodian of the Zimmer letter learned about the collecting activities here through his connection with one of the German societies in Chicago. It is hoped that all who are in possession of similar letters may be disposed, like Mr. See, to send them on to the State Historical Society of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis., for copying. Copies will be retained here and other copies will be sent to the University of Bonn for preservation and use there, as has been done with the letter in question.

JOSEPH SCHAFER,
Superintendent, the State Historical Society of Wisconsin.

PERQUISITES.

Green Bay, Wis., May 12.—I have noticed that your Mr. Orr has featured Senator Joseph T. Robinson in his cartoons recently as being one of our outstanding patriots and opponents of radicalism and communism. I know little about Senator Robinson, but if the editorial in the Green Bay Press-Gazette of Wednesday evening, May 4, 1932, correctly states the situation I cannot help but wonder what the rest of the members of the senate must be doing to the country when Senator Robinson, by comparison, is so outstanding.

I quote from the editorial referred to:

"Each member of the senate is allowed, besides a salary of $10,000, mileage for traveling purposes and excursion junkets to the Philippines, Porto Rico, Panama Canal Zone, etc., an additional $10,320 a year to pay for hired assistants, whereas representatives are entitled to $5,000 per year for such additional purposes. . . .

"Senator Robinson, Democratic leader, employs his aged mother-in-law at $2,580 a year. She does no work, doesn't even go to Washington, but stays down in Arkansas and draws her pay. He also employs his brother-in-law, who is a bank president in Little Rock, Ark., and seldom gets to Washington."

UTILITY RATES.

Chicago, May 12.—I see by the papers that a certain Paul Douglas, described as a college professor, has demanded that the I. C. C. reduce the rates of public utilities in Chicagoland by 20 per cent. I believe the employés and security holders should band together to protect their interests from these continued attacks by professional busybodies. The first to suffer if the professor is successful will be the employés, who will have to take a big cut in pay. The next will be the stockholders, whose dividends will be passed. The third will be the bondholders, when with income and credit greatly impaired, the companies find themselves unable to finance and are forced into a receivership. Lastly, the public will suffer, as there will be no funds for experimentation, improvements or extensions of service and no chance of raising more capital.

To offset this, the great majority of customers will save from ten to fifty cents a month for a while.

Therefore I urge all Chicago district investors in utilities to form a protective association with the help of the employés and fight. I do not know how others feel about it, but after being mauled, thrashed and knocked flat by old man depression, I am in no mood while thus lying flat on my back to be kicked all over the landscape by a coterie of parlor pinks.

ROBERT I. SIMONS.

REPLY TO A COMMUTER.

Chicago, May 12.—A commuter demands the price of his monthly ticket reduced to what it was before a 20 per cent raise some six years ago. That raise, likely, helped the railroad to pay security holders modest dividends which later on had to be discontinued even on the senior issue. If aspiring to ride at somebody else's expense let "A Commuter" apply to the interstate commerce commission, Washington, D. C., or buy a ticket to the nearest available asylum for imbeciles.
OBSERVER.

ADDING TO THE UNEMPLOYED.

Chicago, May 14.—I certainly do not agree with Leonard Henry. Can't he see that the employment situation is bad enough without adding the milk drivers and all other men employed in the dairies to that long list of the unemployed? Surely adding to the number of unemployed is not going to bring prosperity, is it?

ROCKFORD GIRLS' COLLEGE CROWNS QUEEN OF MAY

Student of 84 Years Ago Watches Ceremony.

BY KATHERINE KELLEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Rockford, Ill., May 21.—[Special.]—Rockford college, pioneer among women's colleges of the middle west, paid tribute today to its most outstanding student, Jane A. Burrill of Wilmette, crowning her queen of the May. The crown of purple violets is the highest school honor that can come to a Rockford college girl.

The ceremony took place upon the elm shaded acres selected for the campus 84 years ago. Less than a block away a member of the first class watched from her home and recalled the springtime festivities of pre-civil war days. Mrs. Caroline Potter Brazee, 94 years old, was the former pupil. She was graduated from the college and later served as a member of the faculty. She was too feeble to attend the afternoon's event.

High School Delegates Guests.

Alumnæ, relatives, and friends came in throngs and Middle Linden hall, built in 1854, echoed with the gayety of reunions. During the morning sixty-four delegates from high schools in Illinois, Wisconsin, and Indiana competed in athletic events. They were guests at the May party, the campus supper, and the dance this evening.

Every chair bordering the outdoor amphitheater was occupied as Ghys' "Amaryllis," an old French air written to Louis XIII. and the theme song of every Rockford May party, was sounded. Then, when the processional moved into the amphitheater, the May queen in her white silken gown was greeted by a burst of applause as her identity was discovered.

Old Queen Crowns New.

Virginia Werden of Wilmette as the herald, led the procession. She was followed by the old queen, Helen Carr of Highland Park, the crown bearer, and flower children. The ladies in waiting, Katherine Rawson and Julia Joslin of Rockford, and Alice Hillinger and Evelyn Wienecke of Glencoe, followed bearing arches of flowers through which the new queen passed to the throne.

Miss Burrill was crowned by the old queen and in turn placed upon the head of the old queen, the wreath of forget-me-nots. From the throne the royal party viewed the dance drama from Voltaire's "The Princess of Babylon."

Rockford Queen

MISS JANE A. BURRILL.

The May party has become as traditional at Rockford as the daisy chain at Vassar or tree day at Wellesley. The adaptation of "Princess of Babylon" for dramatic purposes was made by the athletic department, under the auspices of the junior class.

School Free of Debt.

Dr. William A. Maddox, president of the college, revealed that Rockford college is one of the few ending the school year without indebtedness and without anticipating the reduction of salaries among its faculty.

"This college was a pioneer in the west in the orientation idea for freshmen," Dr. Maddox said. "We have been using that method for twelve years. We have been building up a new curriculum in an effort to redefine education.

"Our honor society, Socratic, is making a contribution, believe over and above Phi Beta Kappa. We have elected the intellectuals—not the drudges or the Ph. D. types alone, but those who will create an abiding interest toward happiness and a full life."

Miss Burrill is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. James A. Burrill of 182 Greenwood avenue. She was elected class president in her sophomore year and reëlected in her junior year, setting a precedent. She served as president of the student government, was an honor scholar and a member of Socratic society. She has been active in dramatics and a leader in campus athletics.

MAYOR WALKER'S 'ANGEL' ON TRIP IS BROUGHT BACK

Will Testify on $10,000 Letter of Credit.

New York, May 21.—[Special.]—The law defied by Russell T. Sherwood, missing fiscal agent of Mayor Walker, has been invoked successfully by the Hofstadter committee, it became known today. It brought back from Europe the Equitable Coach company employé who brought the mayor a $10,000 letter of credit and later made good his $3,000 overdraft.

This witness, who has not yet been called to the witness stand by Samuel Seabury, chief counsel to the committee, is J. Allan Smith, eastern sales representative of the Twin Coach company of Ohio. The president of this company, Frank R. Fageol, provided much of the cash with which the Equitable waged its winning campaign for a franchise from the city.

Until a few months before the mayor forced the franchise through a hostile board of estimate, he had control of a "trustee fund" of $282,000 created by contributions from Fagol, William O'Neil, president of General Tire and Rubber company, and C. B. Ross, one of Fageol's employés at the time.

The fund dwindled faster than O'Neil "liked to see it go," and Smith was supplanted as trustee but received a bonus from the Equitable backers, according to evidence presented at earlier hearings.

This bonus, Mr. Seabury contended, was $10,000, although the witnesses have insisted it was only half that amount. The whole matter is one that Smith is expected to clear up, but the probability is that he will not be called until after Mayor Walker has had his day in court.

It was last January when Dr. Seabury and his assistants began to look for Smith. At that time they had in their possession the letter of credit which Smith had purchased.

Early in February, Mr. Seabury learned that Smith was aboard a liner approaching Genoa. A subpœna was issued and the civil practice act under which Sherwood was fined $50,000 for contempt when he failed to return from Mexico City, was invoked. An order was obtained from Supreme Court Justice Alfred Frankenthaler and that with the subpœna was cabled for service to Paris.

Under the law which Mr. Seabury invoked, Smith's property in New York state would have been liable to forfeiture to the amount of $100,000 if he had failed to return after accepting service of the order.

Advising his hearers to remember that "there are still more frames than there are pictures," Mayor Walker made known today that he is prepared to face "any man" on the charges developed before the Hofstadter committee.

Continuing in the same vein but adhering to his recent policy of not mentioning the committee or its counsel by name, the mayor indicated further that his defense would be based on the theory of distortion of evidence for political purposes by Samuel Seabury.

WUXTRY! COUNTY BOARD 'FINDS' 400 MILLIONS TO TAX

Commissioners Appear in Embarrassing Tangle.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The county board seems to think it has found $400,000,000 worth of new property, or $400,000,000 of added value to existing property, in Cook county within the last three months. The board apparently intends to levy taxes on it. That was probably the purpose of "finding" it.

This discovery appears in the board's consideration of its forest preserve budget, whose gross total—although a million or so is not to be spent—is $8,075,988.81. That is the equivalent of $244 for each of the 33,000 acres in the forest preserves, which is about 40 per cent of the original cost of the land.

An Embarrassing Situation.

In its effort to find taxes to support that budget, the board appears to have tangled itself in an embarrassing knot. As a preliminary explanation, it should be said, that the members of the county board are ex-officio commissioners of the forest preserve district, which is co-extensive with Cook county. Exactly the same individuals adopt the county budget and the forest preserve budget. They have exactly the same property upon which to levy taxes for both purposes.

On March 5 the county board decided formally that the assessed valuation of all Cook county property for 1932 would be $4,000,000,000 even. They were then sitting as county commissioners, adopting the county budget.

Set a Higher Valuation.

These same commissioners are now considering a forest preserve budget, which contemplates that the tax value on the same property for the same year will be $404,233,632 higher than their estimate of March 5. The higher the valuation the more taxes they can levy.

Even the four billion valuation of last March was too high, according to the fiscal agents of other local governments. The four billion was too high by $155,823,000 on the basis of the council finance committee figures, $166,938,000 too high according to the school board, and $331,894,000 too high according to City Controller Szymczak.

But for the purpose of levying taxes for the forest preserves the county commissioners boosted their own four billion estimate to $4,404,233,632. Even by the school board's calculation, this is $571,171,000 too high and according to City Controller Szymczak, it is $736,127,000 above reasonable expectancy.

Recognize It Should Be Cut.

That indicates where the county board is starting in the preparation of its forest preserve budget. President Emmett Whealan and several other commissioners, who made a three day fight to cut the county budget, recognize that the forest preserve budget should be trimmed.

Under the law the board is permitted to levy one and a half cents for the corporate needs of the forest preserves. He recommended that this tax rate be cut one-third to one cent. but even then it appears high in comparison with the county budget, school budget, and the city's estimates.

While the corporate appropriations of the forest preserves are relatively small, they serve to indicate the difference between the forest preserve estimate of gross taxes and the amount which other local governments would estimate.

Estimates Are Too High.

Rudolph Mulac Jr., controller of the forest preserves, estimates the tax income of its corporate fund at $660,635. President Whealan recommended that this be cut to $440,423. On the basis of the county board's estimate of tax values the amount would be $400,000. The city council's finance committee would reduce it to $384,417 by its method of reckoning.

City Controller Szymczak's method would shove it down to $366,810. In Mr. Szymczak's opinion the forest preserve commissioners are attempting to levy on 20 per cent of property values which will not be found when the 1932 valuations are completed.

The county commissioners, in their capacity as trustees of the forest preserves, are in the position of telling the public there is 10 per cent more property in the county to tax for forest preserves than there is for the care of the sick, injured, and poor of the community and other county board functions.

FOUR OFFICIAL PAPERS DROPPED BY METHODISTS

Atlantic City, N. J., May 21.—(AP)—Four of the eight Christian Advocates published in various parts of the country as the official organs of the Methodist Episcopal church were legislated out of existence by the general conference today.

Their discontinuance was a part of the general sweeping campaign for economy.

The Advocate editions ordered abandoned are those published in Pittsburgh, Chicago, Portland, Ore., and Athens, Tenn. The circulation of the eliminated editions is to be absorbed by continuing the New York, Kansas City, Cincinnati and San Francisco publications.

One economy plan, however, which appeared in grave danger of foundering, was the move to expedite the conference session to such an extent as to make adjournment possible by noon Wednesday instead of running the full month.

The delegates approved the Wednesday adjournment earlier this week, but legislative progress has been so slow that today the adjournment date was ordered reconsidered, with all indications pointing to another full week of sessions.

WOMAN AND HER DAUGHTER KILLED IN AUTO CRASH

Mrs. Cora Swihart, 56 years old, and her daughter, Lorraine, 17 years old, of 2523 Harrison street, Evanston, were killed yesterday afternoon in an automobile collision at Prairie road and Touhy avenue, Tessville. Mrs. Swihart was the wife of J. Lawrence Swihart, music director at the Evanston High school, where his daughter was a student.

The two women were driving to Naperville to visit another daughter, Victoria, a student at the North Central college there, when the accident occurred. The sedan, with Lorraine at the wheel, struck the rear of another car, drive nby Mrs. Margaret Hansen, 22 years old, 7800 Kedvale avenue, Niles Center.

Swerving after the collision, the Swihart car skidded and overturned and brought up against a heavy motor truck driven by Joseph Kirscht, 735 Illinois road, Wilmette. Kirscht told police that he saw the crash and had stopped his truck before the Swihart sedan struck it.

Both women were extricated immediately, but Lorraine died before medical aid could be summoned. Mrs. Swihart died an hour later at the St. Francis hospital in Evanston.

Hurt in Collision; Dies.

Daniel Ward, 37 years old, of 3819 South Halsted street, a mechanic, died last night in St. Paul's Emergency hospital of injuries suffered earlier in a collision between his car and one driven by Harry Ellis, 26, of 4717 Kenwood avenue, at Union avenue and 31st street.

An unidentified man about 30 years old was killed last night at 14th street and Western avenue when he was struck by an automobile driven by Orvin Holte, 2063 West Congress street.

These deaths and those of Mrs. Swihart and her daughter increased the 1932 Cook county motor toll to 420.

N. U. Athletes Injured.

James G. Payne, captain of the Northwestern university track team, and James De Forrest, a member of the team, were injured yesterday in an automobile collision in Evanston several hours before the Big Ten track meet at Dyche stadium. Payne, injured in the Drake relays, was not scheduled to compete, but De Forrest was entered in the half-mile event.

De Forrest, Payne, and a third student, Herbert Brook, 22 years old, were injured when the car driven by De Forrest collided with the automobile of Mrs. Flora M. Reed, 50 years old, 604 Michigan avenue, Evanston. Mrs. Reed said that De Forrest caused the accident when he tried to cut in front of her in Forest avenue, near Kedzie street, Evanston.

Payne's right leg, which was injured in the relays, was broken in the auto accident; De Forrest's right wrist was broken, and he was cut about the head and face. Brook was cut in the back of the head. De Forrest was booked on a charge of reckless driving and released on bond.

Mrs. Reed, who was not injured, was released.

Battle with Policemen; Seized.

After kicking one policeman in the abdomen and threatening another with a hammer, Barney Sikora, 19 years old, was arrested yesterday at his home at 1218 East 93d street on a charge of forcing a truck off the highway with his car and injuring a boy. His father, John Sikora, 49, also was seized.

Young Sikora, said by police to have served a term in the Bridewell recently, was driving with his father in 94th street when, it is charged, their machine forced a truck driven by Isadore Rothstein, 40 years old, 1519 South Ridgeway avenue, off the road near Harper avenue. David, 10 year old son of Rothstein, was hurt. The Sikoras drove away, police said.

Policemen William Bielawski and Michael McCarthy of the Burnside station went to the Sikora home. There, it is charged, young Sikora kicked Bielawzki. He and his father then ran inside the house and emerged a moment later, Barney threatening McCarthy with a hammer. Help was called and the Sikoras were arrested.

Shelby E. Cuddy, 28 years old, of Parsons, Kas., who was driving to Chicago to reënlist in the Marine corps, was killed yesterday when he was struck by a truck while walking on State route No. 4 near Lincoln, Ill. His brother, George, and a friend, sitting in their automobile, saw the accident. Joseph Cullen, 956 North Waller avenue, Chicago, the driver of the other car, was freed.

More than 700 boy choristers from the Episcopal choirs of Chicago will participate in a music festival this afternoon at St. Bartholomew's church, 67th street and Stewart avenue. The Rev. Howard R. Brinker stated that as the choristers will fill the church, arrangements have been made for the congregation to hear the service from the lawn. Leading organists and choir masters of the city will take part in the service. The sermon will be preached by the Rev. E. Ashley Gerhard, of Winnetka.

400 ALIENS SENT BACK TO HOMES FROM CHICAGO

From the metropolitan area were 175, of whom 75 were destitute and were taking advantage of the government offer of free return to their native lands. The others were from Illinois, Iowa, Indiana, Wisconsin, and points west as far as Seattle, Wash.

Many of the deportees were classified as undesirables. Six were insane and three were listed as criminals who had served terms in prison. The local contingent was in charge of H. R. Landon, inspector in charge of the immigration warrant office.

PROBE DEATH IN DENTIST'S CHAIR; SUSPECT SUICIDE

The inquest into the death of George DeFoe, 58 years old, of 1518 East 63d place, who died Friday in a dentist's office, was postponed to June 2 by the coroner's office yesterday to determine whether DeFoe had ended his own life. He died shortly after the dentist, Dr. George Mitchell, 1523 East 63d street, had extracted twelve teeth, and heart disease was believed responsible.

However, police found a farewell note in his room addressed to a daughter, a Mrs. Mulvihill. It is possible, police said, that DeFoe took poison before going to the dentist's.

Shoots Man in Street When His Windows Are Broken

Suspected as a window smasher, Joseph Lachner, 20 years old, of 1802 North Lincoln street, was shot in both legs this morning by Frank Czyszcon, 45 years old, in front of the latter's home at 1230 Marion court. Several of the windows there had been broken, and shortly afterward Lachner and another man, who police said was intoxicated, appeared in front of the home. Czyszcon, believing they were the vandals, fired twice. Czyszcon was held.

HITLERITES TRY FOR HAPSBURGS IN AUSTRIAN DEBUT

Provincial Council Opens Session Amid Disorder.

BY WILLIAM SHIRER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VIENNA, Austria, May 21.—The debut of the Austrian Hitlerites in today's opening session of the lower Austrian provincial council not only brought the expected tumultuous scenes, but also disclosed that the Austrian branch of Germany's Fascists was flirting with the old imperial ruling house of Hapsburg of Austria-Hungary.

"Long live the Hapsburgs!" was the greeting the Hitlerites accorded the Socialists and Conservative Christian Socialist party members as they entered the room. While the Socialists shouted back, the Hitlerites began singing "God Save the King," and the visitors in the gallery, according to their political views, either helped the Socialists in shouting or joined the chorus of the Hitlerites.

The house, however, was able to do some business, and elected a president, governor and vice presidents. The former Austrian chancellor, Karl Buresch, who resigned on May 6, was elected governor of the province of Lower Austria.

Pledge Aid to Austria.

GENEVA, May 21.—(AP)—The council of the league of nations, noting a financial condition steadily growing worse in Austria, Greece, Hungary, and Bulgaria, made another effort today to work out a scheme for the relief of southeastern Europe with the aid of Great Britain, France, and Italy.

A mixed commission of government representatives and financial experts to work out a plan of temporary relief on an international basis was decided upon after the three powers nad promised financial assistance to Austria. The commission is expected to meet in Geneva next week.

Capt. R. A. Eden, British spokesman, announced the willingness of his government to join in an international loan to Austria and do what it could to permit the Vienna government to repay to the Bank of England its credit of 100,000,000 schillings [currently about $14,000,000]. British participation was made conditional on Austria's continuing to meet payments on her foreign debts.

Urges Relief Be Spread.

The Italian and French delegates promised participation, but Joseph Paul-Boncour of France suggested that the financial crisis was not confined to Austria or the Danubian states.

"Any partial or limited plan of relief will be inadequate," he said.

The council also attempted today to persuade the Liberian representative to promise that Liberia would pay the expenses of a league representative to pacify the Kru region. An international manager for Liberia was proposed yesterday. The Liberian delegate finally agreed to telegraph to Monrovia regarding the expenses, which involve a maximum of $5,000.

JOHN WESKE, 83, CHICAGO FIRE WITNESS, DIES

John Weske, retired shoe manufacturer, who witnessed the Chicago fire, died yesterday in his home at 2618 North Albany avenue of injuries suffered Aprill 22 when he fell in his bedroom.

He would have been 83 years old on May 31. Weske came to America from Germany and became proprietor, with a brother, of the Union Shoe and Slipper company. He retired 17 years ago.

Surviving are three children and three foster children. Funeral services will be held Tuesday morning in the chapel at 2483 Milwaukee avenue.

Charles B. Burt, 52, Is Dead After Long Illness

42 MEN BURIED IN TUNNEL 100 HOURS ARE SAVED

VALPARAISO, Chile, May 21.—An army of rescue workers today brought out alive forty-two men who had been entombed almost 100 hours in Las Raices tunnel in the Lon Quimay range of the Andes mountains in south Chile.

Government supervisors are checking up on three others, including a Danish engineer, who were reported to have been in the tunnel. The tunnel is being driven for the Southern Trans-Andean railroad, and is to be 2½ miles long. A landslide on Wednesday covered 100 yards of the mouth of the tunnel on the Chilean side, entombing the diggers.

Fourteen hundred excavators helped to save the men. Last night military forced a safety gallery through the rock and earth into the tunnel. The imprisoned men were found in the upper reaches of the tunnel, where they had fled to escape drowning. Divers and special pumping apparatus had been rushed here by plane last night. Hundreds of relatives and friends were on hand to greet the men as they came out.

20 Miners Entombed.

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, May 21.—[U. P.]—Twenty native miners were entombed 6,000 feet underground in the Robinson mine today when an earth tremor caused a fall of rock. Rescuers made contact with one miner by tapping, but were unable to learn the fate of the others.

Fireman Dies of Injury Received at Gas Blast

The gas explosion which killed Herman Griebe, 63 years old, a recluse, in his home at 2348 Roscoe street May 2 and injured eleven neighbors claimed another life last night with the death of Fireman John W. Storey of truck 13 in the Belmont hospital. Griebe's house was virtually leveled by the blast which occurred, police said, as a result of his attempt to end his life by gas. Fireman Storey responded and was hurt when caught in the collapse of a wall section. Storey was 32 years old and lived at 1508 North Campbell avenue.

Three South Side Women Victims of Two Bandits

Three women were held up in separate robberies on the south side by the same two bandits early this morning. Miss Belle Dohm was accosted in the hallway of her home at 6009 Dorchester avenue and robbed of her purse and $6. Miss Alice Strook, 6847 East End avenue, was stopped near her home and robbed of $6 also. The third victim, Mrs. Anna Wyman, 5043 Blackstone avenue, was menaced at 56th street and Lake Park avenue. The gunmen took her purse containing 69 cents and some insurance papers.

"Funeral by Hursen"
Of Course

Hursen Chapels are today recognized as the finest institutions of the kind in this country. The North Side Chapel, particularly, is a masterpiece of beauty, massiveness, facilities and arrangements. It has recently been remodeled. The South Side and West Side Chapels are palaces, convenient for the smaller or the largest funerals.

All Hursen automobile equipment, the finest things on wheels, was built for Hursen along Hursen special designs. Yet the charge is no greater than for equipment far less desirable.

There is no charge for the use of any of the three Hursen Chapels, each equipped with organs of unmatchable tone and size. The charges for Hursen funerals are less than the charges usually made elsewhere. So, call Hursen, of course!

FASCIST EDITOR FIRED BY HITLER FOR "THINKING"

Gen. von Schleicher is popularly supposed to be one of those responsible for Groener's retirement from the defense ministry on May 12. He suggested to Groener that the latter's health was such that he ought to resign. Dr. Krebs commented after his dismissal that "the National Socialist party does not tolerate any one who presumes to think for himself."

PARENTS, HERE'S CHANCE TO SHOW YOUR ERUDITION

U. of C. Scholarship Quiz Contains "Stickers."

The examinations taken by 789 high school students last week in Chicago and seven other cities to compete for the annual scholarships offered by the University of Chicago might well offer their parents some puzzlers.

One of the simplest questions in English listed 16 authors and titles of books and asked the pupils to identify both with the following characters from the works:

35 Minutes for 1 Question.

One question, which the students were asked to answer in 35 minutes, lists 81 works and 89 authors. The pupil was to indicate what author wrote what work, what century he wrote in, what his nationality was and what form of work he wrote, whether drama, poetry, etc.

A few of these 81 listed works are: "Endymion," "Jane Eyre," "Jurgen," "The Faerie Queen," "A Farewell to Arms," "Roan Stallion," "Canterbury Tales," "The Deserted Village," "Pamela," "My Antonia," "Ode to the Skylark," "Of Human Bondage," "Sketch Book," "Ethan Frome," "The Alchemist," and "Sohrab and Rustum."

Another question listed 17 works and 16 authors. The author is not given in all cases. The pupil is asked to indicate the author of each work. The works are:

"All for Love," "The Anatomy of Melancholy," "Areopagitica," "The Beggars' Opera," "Candida," "The City of Dreadful Night," "Dunciad," "The Emperor Jones," "First Principles," "The Lyrical Ballads," "Paracelsus," "Ralph Roister Doister," "Rasselas," "Religio Medici," "Songs of Innocence and Experience," "Tottel's Miscellany," and "Utopia."

Test of Vocabulary.

In a question testing the vocabulary the pupil was asked to give the proper meaning of such words as: Profligate, propitiate, amorphous, peripatetic, cicatrix, prehensile, impugned, cacaphonous, apocryphal, fulminating, sibilant, adumbrate, fiasco, recondite, epitomes, turgid, egregious, prorogue, and anomalous.

A second section in the English examination allowed for the play of the imagination. The pupil was to choose between describing the dominant idea, or the principal character, of a recent novel he has read outside the school curriculum, or writing for 40 minutes on a sonnet of Edna St. Vincent Millay. The sonnet, quoted in full, is from "The Fatal Interview," the first line of which is "Even in the moment of our earliest kiss."

The history examination, which, like the main English test, the authorities said they did not expect any pupil to answer in full or entirely correctly, was comprehensive. One question listed 15 "causes" and 18 "results," the former to be fitted to the latter. Among the "results" listed are: Wilmot Proviso; Panic of 1837; Compromise of 1850; Split in the Democratic party in 1860; the Monroe Doctrine; civil war in Kansas; Webster-Ashburton treaty, and Dorr's rebellion.

In another history question the student was asked to distinguish between the truth and falsity of 100 statements. Some of them were:

"Alexander Hamilton was supported in his financial measures by Thomas Jefferson."

"The eighteenth amendment provides for 'local option.'"

FLYER IS KILLED

CAPT. GEORGE ENDRES.

HUNGARIAN SEA FLYER KILLED IN CRASH AT ROME

Fall Witnessed by Famous Airmen.

ROME, May 21.—(AP)—Capt. George Endres was killed today in a crash of his plane Justice for Hungary, in which he and Capt. Alexander Magyar flew from Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, to Budapest in 1931.

The ship plunged to earth and burst into flames at Littorio field, where Italy's leading airmen and some of the most famous in the world had congregated to welcome Capt. Endres to the convention of transoceanic flyers, which opens tomorrow. Capt. Julius Bittay, the second occupant of the plane, also was killed.

Scores of aviators rushed toward the burning plane with fire extinguishers, but by the time the flames had been quenched the ship was a twisted wreck and the bodies of the airmen were unrecognizable.

Cause of Accident Mystery.

The cause of the accident was unknown, but one thing was certain. It could not be blamed on the weather for the sky was blue and it was a perfect day.

The motto of the air force, that although some may die others must carry on, was exemplified a few minutes after the crash when 81 pursuit planes went aloft for a dress rehearsal of the air circus that will be put on next Thursday. The 81 ships roared over Littorio searching for the enemy in a mimic warfare maneuver.

The Hungarian flyers fell from a comparatively low altitude just after they had cleared a hill and come into view of the crowd of airmen waiting to receive them. They were coming in from Budapest.

When their bodies had been extricated they were covered with Italian flags and were turned over to the Hungarian minister, who will arrange to send them home.

Five noted Americans are among the trans-oceanic airmen who will attend the convention. They are Hugh Herndon Jr., Harold Gatty, George W. Haldeman, Albert Francis Hegenberger, and Holden C. Richardson.

Mother Grieves in Cincinnati.

Cincinnati, O., May 21.—(AP)—Mrs. John Endres embraced her youngest son and wept when told of the death of her oldest boy, Capt. George Endres, at Rome today. The frail, gray haired 75 year old woman received a letter from Endres three weeks ago, saying:

"I guess you think I'm terrible, always saying that I will come back for a visit—and then never doing it. However, this is the last letter I am going to write before I really come to America. The next time you hear from me I will be home."

ILLINOIS WOMEN LEAD NATION IN REPEAL DRIVE

100,000 New Members Enrolled in Week.

The Illinois Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform has been advised by national headquarters in New York that this state topped the list throughout the nation for repeal week activities and membership gain. Approximately 100,000 additional members were signed up during the week by the 600 volunteer workers canvassing widely scattered districts in the city. The Chicago headquarters is at 700 North Michigan avenue.

The Chicago women opposed to prohibition began their drive last Monday morning with 63,750 members enrolled. Their motorcade of automobiles, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Ernest Graham, starting from Broadway and Wilson avenue and moving south through the loop to 22d street and then west to Western avenue, inaugurated the campaign for new members.

163,000 Women Members.

Last night the count at headquarters revealed the list of members increased to 163,000. Many prominent women participated, spending a full working day each day on the drive, of which Mrs. George Brennan was general chairman.

The Chicago Federation of Labor, through its committee for the modification of the Volstead act, coöperated actively in the campaign. Social service workers from Madonna Center, led by Miss Marie Piamondon and Miss Agnes Amberg, worked all week. Miss Rose O'Connor, president of De Paul settlement, signed up nearly 1,000 women at a benefit card party for the settlement. Several deans of schools secured cards during the week for their teachers and a special drive was held at the University of Chicago with marked success.

Show Change in Sentiment.

"In view of the fact that our membership in Illinois totaled 63,754 in the two years of our organization, and then swelled to 163,000 in six days," said a statement from Mrs. Leslie Wheeler and Mrs. William H. Mitchell, co-chairman of the Illinois division, "we feel that these figures alone indicate a very definite change in public opinion. If Illinois is an indication of other states in the Union, nothing can stop repeal of the eighteenth amendment. We believe that the results of the week have a definite political significance."

Enrolling of new members still is going on, the co-chairman pointed out, and hundreds of requests for cards which they were too rushed last week to supply, are now being filled.

SOCIALIST CONVENTION APPROVES PART OF RUSSIAN COMMUNISM

Milwaukee, Wis., May 21.—[Special.]—The national convention of the Socialist party, at its opening session today, adopted a resolution stating "while not indorsing all policies of the soviet government, it indorses efforts being made in Russia to create the foundations of a Socialist party."

The resolution called upon all workers to guard against "capitalist attacks on Soviet Russia," and said "the Russian experiment is a natural outgrowth of the conditions peculiar to that country."

Socialism and communism are closely linked in the opinions of the American people at the present time, and failure of the Russian experiment will reflect with great force on the Socialist movement in the United States, speakers declared.

BRITAIN READY TO ACT ON NEW RULE FOR INDIA

Cabinet to Sift Plans This Week.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, May 21.—The marquess of Lothian, one of the chiefs of the round table conference on the future status of India, who recently returned from India, Prime Minister MacDonald, although supposed to be recuperating from an operation on his eye at Lossiemouth, and Sir Samuel Hoare, secretary of state for India, have taken important decisions about the future course of plans for the Indian government.

They have now before them a proposal put forward by the various committees and an alternative proposal by the Indian government. Next week, the India committee of the cabinet meets to consider the proposals and, it is stated, that a decision will be reached by the cabinet before the first week in June.

Opposes Separate Electorates.

These decisions relate to two important matters. The first deals with communal questions such as the representation of minorities. The prime minister is reported opposed to a plan for separate electorates for the various sects of religions and commercial interests, while the government of India favors continuing this plan until the minorities themselves declare against it.

Lord Lothian is supporting the prime minister and declares it would be the "worst possible thing" to have the legislature made up of blocks representing separate and conflicting interests.

The second question deals with the responsibility of the federal legislatures. The government of India is against any surrender of the control of currency, defense, commerce, and all Indian services. The public debts are also necessarily, in its opinion, a reserved subject, but the government of India favors an immediate extension of provincial autonomy with cabinets for each province, and feels that in spite of the All-India Congress party it will be possible to obtain a strong public opinion in favor of working with provincial legislatures.

See Danger in General Franchise.

Regarding a central government, the government of India thinks there is no great danger if the communal electorates are continued, but that there is a definite danger of failure if a general franchise is adopted.

Lord Lothian, however, is reported to be in favor of an extension of the responsibility of the administrative department. He said that he would have been willing to introduce provincial reforms a few months earlier, but now insists that the bill when offered to parliament must deal with both the central government and the provinces, and that there should not be a longer interval than six or nine months in setting up the two governmental systems.

Lord Lothian is expected to have the support of the prime minister and Lord Sankey, the lord chancellor, but he may meet opposition from other members, including Lord Hailsham, secretary of state for war, and Sir Samuel Hoare, who may listen to the advice of Indian officials.

Viceroy Lord Willingdon is reported to support Lord Lothian's view, but it is feared here that he is not strong enough to fight his own officials who are determined to slow up the advance of India, if possible.

CITY PLANNING IN RUSSIA TOPS WORLD'S RECORD

Crane Tells of Gigantic Soviet Program.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Russia has the opportunity to build the really great cities of our time and the city planning now going on in Russia is the largest in scale and perhaps the most significant going on anywhere else in the world, according to Jacob L. Crane Jr., planning consultant, of Chicago, who has zoned and planned a majority of the Chicagoland suburbs and also been identified with city planning in various parts of this country.

Some months ago he visited China at the invitation of the Chinese government to give advice on the modernizing of several oriental city plans and later visited Russia as a guest of the soviet government to look over their city planning program.

Mr. Crane points out that America in the last fifty years has set a world's record in city building, caring for an increase of fifty million in our urban population, or at a rate of a million a year. This record seemed likely to remain unbroken, but now Russia has started a program of city construction at an even faster pace. They propose to provide, in a period of perhaps thirty years, urban facilities for a new city population likely to run to one hundred millions, an average of three millions annually.

25 Million New Flats.

Twenty-five million new apartments must be provided, tens of thousands of miles of city pavements and sewers and water mains must be installed, and thousands of schools, administration buildings, clubs, theaters, supply centers, etc., must be built.

"If constructed in this country at even the prevailing depressed costs this program would run to a total bill of some hundreds of billions of dollars" said Mr. Crane. "And, as nearly as I could make out from working briefly with them, the Russian city planning and city building agencies take all this as a matter of course. It goes along as only one of the major projects, not to be overrated beside the program of industrial development, of agricultural extension, of transport, of mining and of national defense.

"The work of Giprogor, state trust for planning cities, was going on last summer in a madhouse set of offices where the elevators didn't work but imagination did. Plans for sixty towns and cities were in process, drawn for a total population of perhaps thirty million people.

Survey Party Starts.

"Contracts are made between Giprogor and a municipal soviet, or a building trust, to have plans prepared for erecting a new city or rebuilding an old one. At once a survey party, an economist and a planner go to the site and bring back a beautiful set of studies on everything from the ground waters of the region to the food habits of the people living there.

"A conference is held, in which the economist-sociologist dominates. The 'program' is established for this town; it shall be a city for industrial workers or a winter resort or an educational or government point, or a fisheries, or farming or mining or lumbering.

"The site is marked out and land is allocated first of all to the manufacturing plants, and thereafter the territory for residential occupation is attached as a sort of appendage to the industrial location.

"A party is sent into the field and after a sometimes too long delay, a topographical map is brought in and from it a contour model of the site is built up. Then the architect-planner is turned loose to design the town layout. The studies, economic, sociologic, engineering, and architectural, are beautifully drawn up on a set of charts and maps. Nowhere have I seen as carefully prepared town planning surveys."

Motor Freight Highways.

Mr. Crane says that from some higher central authority a set of "norms" or standards is handed down to the Giproger and all town planning must be done in conformity with these "norms." They advise to disregard all old property lines; to lay out all streets and roads for automobiles straight and wide; all main highways to have central strips separating the two directions of traffic, thus absolutely preventing headon collisions so prevalent in America when a careless driver gets over into the wrong lane. Special freight highways for commercial traffic are called for.

Cities are laid out in large blocks, or quartels, with a maximum length of 1,640 feet on each side. These provide inside roadways and pedestrian crossings, using simple block forms, preferably rectangles, with large, inside open spaces for playgrounds, etc. Each quartel will accommodate from 4,000 to 7,000 people, and each will have complete neighborhood facilities; primary school, club, supply station and playgrounds. The apartment buildings are built around the outside. The inside is used for public buildings, playgrounds and gardens.

All to Live in Flats.

A group of five to ten quartels is called a rayon [region] and to each rayon is assigned a unit of higher schools, major club, major supply center, athletic field and a theater. The entire city is then tied up with a principal administrative center and principal athletic field or fields, and major parks both within the area to be built up and also in the surrounding country.

Every one is to be housed in apartment buildings. No single family houses are proposed except in unusual situations, where they are considered only temporary. And Mr. Crane is not enthusiastic over the modern Russian flat. They run to box-like forms, totally unembellished, with fire escapes being the only outside decorative feature, he said. They have small rooms, few closets, tiny kitchenettes, all arranged so rooms can be used in units of three or four to accommodate families or individuals.

"The whole residential or dormitory program is out of scale with the comparatively elaborate, even magnificent proposals for communal buildings and facilities," said Mr. Crane. "Nevertheless, the apartment house program is entirely consistent with the underlying social theory that the neighborhood and community and not the family shall be the basic, economic and social unit.

More Open Spaces Than Here.

"The ground plans are beautifully designed and the buildings arranged in interesting groups to the best advantage for sunlight and public services. The quartel, with its repetition of the same box-like apartment building over and over again, seems dull and monotonous. Conversely, by the wide spacing of buildings and by the assembling of open areas for common use, the quartel promises to be more healthful and more agreeable than anything dreamed of in the rebuilding of the congested American city."

Mr. Crane points out that the Russians in their enthusiasm over industrialism have given over the best and most attractive sites along the water fronts of the various proposed cities to factories and railroads merely because the selection of industrial sites is made first in the sequence of planning.

"With all of the good qualities in these town plans," he said, "they still look something like Gary, the living facilities secondary to the industrial purposes.

"After national defense and heavy industry, the first item seems to be the welfare of children, and the town plans reflect this purpose dramatically with the most elaborate school, playground, clinic, library and cultural development, but always dealing with the child as a member of the community and not as a member of a family."

Mr. Leu operates it as a service station and restaurant. Mr. Rich made this sketch.

Sees Turn for Better in Farm Land; Reports 838 Acres Sold

That farm land has reached the bottom and is now on the backward swing is the belief of Daniel F. Quinlan, Woodstock realty dealer, who backs up his assertion with a list of sales of 838 acres in McHenry county, 482 of which were for all cash.

"We've been in the farm business for thirty-seven years in the one location and in all that time there's never been a time when a farm investment would give greater returns than right now," said Mr. Quinlan, "with the positive assurance of future advancement in value. Farm land was the first thing to go down and it's the first thing to come back. The break is at hand."

OUTLINE PLANS TO REORGANIZE 26 BOND ISSUES

Garard Trust Properties to Be Refinanced.

Reorganization plans for twenty-six defaulted first mortgage bond issues of the Garard Trust company, all secured by Chicago properties, were revealed yesterday by William C. Cook, chairman of the Garard bondholders' protective committee. The equity interest in each of the holdings has been acquired by the committee, which has assumed the supervision of the management of these buildings for the protection of the bondholders. Arrangements have been made for the institutional loans to finance the reorganization.

Properties included in the group comprise such buildings as the twenty-two story Narragansett apartment building in the Chicago Beach development, the thirteen story Jeffery Cyril apartments in the South Shore district, and the eight story Brinwood apartments on Kenmore avenue. Outstanding bonds on these projects total about $7,620,000.

Two Salient Features.

Two salient features distinguish the reorganization plan. One is the formation of liquidation trusts to provide for the administration of the revamped projects; the other the establishment of a central management organization to provide efficient and scientific operation for them.

Under the committee's plan, whatever equity may remain in the property after the negotiation of a mortgage to cover reorganization expenses will be owned by the bondholders. The new loan will be secured by an open mortgage with a fixed maximum limit. It will run for a ten year period, interest to be paid only on the actual amount drawn and at the rate of 5 per cent.

This entire plan, it is declared, is intended to avoid the necessity for going through foreclosure proceedings whenever a full deposit of bonds can be secured and thus effect a substantial saving for the bondholders. Likewise, receivership may be avoided and the property retained under competent operation provided by the committee.

Some Managed Directly.

Arrangements have been made for the management of the twenty-six buildings included in this immediate program by an organization headed by F. H. Baschen. Some of the properties are being managed directly, while in other instances the organization is supervising operation by reputable real estate agents.

Mr. Cook, chairman of the committee, was formerly vice president of the Central Trust company of Illinois. Other members of the committee are O. E. Aleshire of Parker, Aleshire & Co., insurance: Adlis J. Browne of Ross & Browne, realtors; Ward C. Castle, vice president of the Central Republic Bank and Trust company; George E. Keys, vice president of the Ridgely-Farmers State bank of Springfield, Ill.; John R. Magill, former president of the Chicago Real Estate Board, and Charles M. Thompson, dean of the college of commerce and administration of the University of Illinois.

Aymer D. Davis is secretary to the committee and Walter C. Senne of the firm of Kirkland, Fleming, Green & Martin is counsel. The Chicago Title and Trust company is depositary.

FOOD MART TO OPEN SOON ON WEST 63D ST.

Phillip Zisken of the Zisken Construction company announces that he has completed the remodeling of the one story building at 1338-44 West 63d street into what is to be known as the West Englewood Food Mart, at a cost of $40,000, and when $35,000 more is spent in equipping the establishment it will open with fourteen different food shops. Four concessions already have been leased, he said, for a bakery, a fish market, a meat market and a fruit store.

The mart will have a frontage of 100 feet on 63d, with a depth of 125 feet. The windows will be kept lighted all night. Mr. Zisken owns adjoining property which will be used for free parking space for 150 cars. The building will have approximately 13,000 square feet of rentable area in addition to office space on a mezzanine floor. It will have a cooling system for summer months and a blower type air conditioned heating plant for winter.

MODERN DESIGN EXHIBITION FOR STATE STREET

For a month beginning Thursday, June 6, Chicago will have an opportunity to view the international exhibition of modern architectural design recently shown at the Museum of Modern Art in New York and other cities, sponsored by the Association of Arts and Industries and other organizations. It will be on view at Sears, Roebuck & Co.'s State street store.

The work of Frank Lloyd Wright will be shown, as will that of the Bowman Brothers, also of Chicago. Raymond Hood's design for a garden suburb skyscraper will be shown

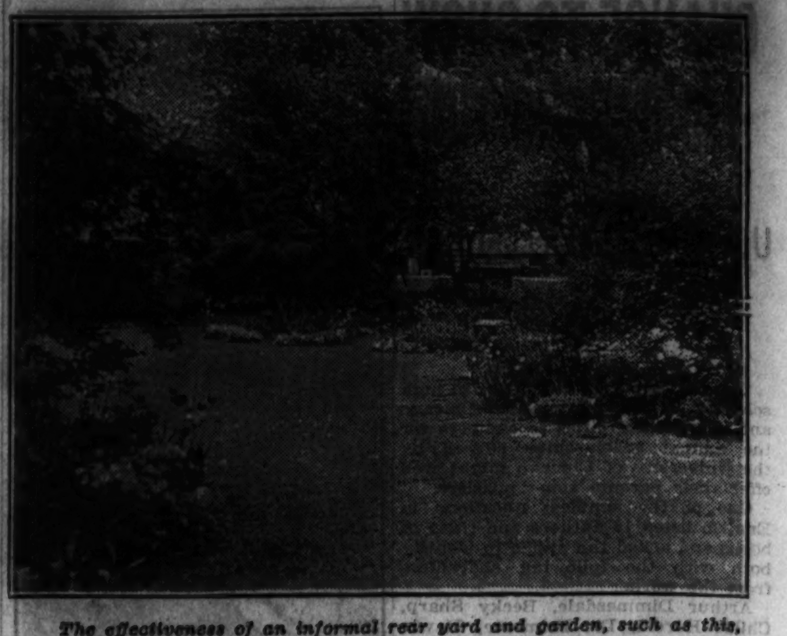
Max Fellner, identified with the leather goods business in Chicago for the last 25 years, has leased the store at 123 South Wabash avenue in the Palmer house, for a term of years on a guarantee and percentage basis and will operate a luggage store under the trade name of Palmer Leather shop. The store formerly was occupied for many years by Kotshonis & Co., florists. R. B. Witwer, real estate agent for the Palmer House company, represented all parties.

NATURE'S CARPET



The effectiveness of an informal rear yard and garden, such as this, developed by Mrs. Mae J. Lehman, 452 South Court street, Crown Point, Ind., is due in large measure to a velvety lawn, kept free of weeds, walks, shrubs or other distracting elements, to a finished natural setting.

WELL FED SOILS AID IN CONTROL OF PESKY WEEDS

Measures to Improve Lawn Cited.

BY PAUL POTTER.

Thousands of city and suburban home folk are to be found in the yards these days, building up the greensward, the flowers, trees and shrubs to luxuriant growth for a season's enjoyment. If the present business conditions do nothing else toward bringing us back to normalcy than to return a fuller appreciation of leisure hours close to nature, the price will not be too dear.

Those who are improving their homesteads have the further incentive in that expenditures and time put into the landscaping add a cash value to the home should it be placed upon the market.

Even in those yards where fresh earth has been spread, the best way to obtain full growth of the plant life and to rid the premises of weeds is to maintain adequate soil fertility. Few old lawns and gardens possess the proper soil conditions, and a summer devoted to improving this situation will be amply rewarded.

Kinds of Fertilizers Named.

Two classes of plant foods or fertilizers are available. The first rich plant foods sold under various names, produce quick results because of the ready assimilation of the elements nitrogen, phosphorus and potash contained in the balanced mixture. These commercial plant foods are convenient to handle and have come into prominence through the decline in availability of natural fertilizers for city use.

The one caution to keep in mind in using these rich plant foods is to apply them when the plant life is dry, as in the late evening, and to soak the ground thoroughly after they have been spread. It is also advisable, if the ground is quite packed, to apply humus in the spring or fall, or to sift sand or coal and wood ashes over the area.

Slower Types Listed.

Other fertilizers available on the market, such as bone meal, ammonium sulphate or pulverized phosphates, are slower in action, and possess one or more of the three elements required by plants for proper growth, foliage and bloom in less concentrated form. The sulphate supplies nitrogen for green growth, and the phosphates develop plant growth. Potash is the element which aids colorful bloom in flowers or shrubs.

Every good gardener maintains a compost heap in some secluded portion of the backyard. Here are piled the lawn clippings, leaves, some soil, lime and plant food, to decompose with the weather and supply a rich humus for later use about flower beds or shrubs.

Lime, it must be remembered, is not a fertilizer. It merely counteracts an acid condition in the soil. Lawns thrive better in a rather acid soil, which permits the grasses to grow while discouraging weeds. The clovers, however, do best in a neutral or somewhat alkaline soil, and where white clover is prominent in the lawn, occasional sprinkling of lime is necessary, usually once in a season.

Weed Control Explained.

Three means of controlling weeds are in general use, the most important one being to maintain a rich soil so that flowers and lawn turf may thrive and keep down the weeds. In such cases, frequent mowing of the lawn will keep down dandelions, although in badly infested lawns hand digging is necessary at least in the spring and fall.

Such weeds as chickweed, ground ivy, speedwell, poison ivy, ironweed or ox-eyed daisy may be weeded out by hand. If they spread over a considerable area, the use of a solution of 1 or 2 ounces of sodium chlorate in one gallon of water for each 100 square feet of turf is advisable.

The leaves must be thoroughly covered, and the application made when no rain or sprinkling will wash it off. Since this solution darkens the grass as well as weeds, many gardeners make the application in winter.

The sodium chlorate is inflammable and must be used with caution not to soak the hands or clothes. Calcium chlorate, similar to the sodium chlorate, is not inflammable. Recent experiments indicate it may develop into a substitute.

Another chemical, iron sulphate, is purchased in granular form for use on dandelion, plantain, chickweed, creeping buttercup or "heal all" weeds. It is also known as green vitriol or copperas, and will stain clothing, walks, buildings or stone work, hence must be used with caution.

The solution of 1½ pounds to a gallon of water is sufficient for 300 square feet of turf. Two or three sprayings at intervals of two weeks are necessary to kill large dandelions. Iron sulphate will seriously injure bent grass and will kill white clover. It should not be used in hot dry weather, and the sprinkler must be thoroughly rinsed out after spraying with it.

REAL ESTATE BOND SERVICE

Inquiries must be accompanied by stamped, self-addressed envelope for personal reply. Answers are based on information received from outside sources and, beyond care in securing it, The Tribune assumes no responsibility. Inquiries should be addressed to the Real Estate Bond Service, Chicago Tribune. Information should not be asked for more than one issue at a time. Give the name of the underwriter and the full title of the bond.

Apartments, Southwest Corner 82d Street and Ingleside Avenue.

Will you kindly give me what information you can regarding the apartment building at the southwest corner of 82d street and Ingleside avenue? When I applied for my interest on my bond I was told that there were still about $10,000 in bonds not yet deposited and that when they were turned in my interest would be mailed to me. Christian Vagtborg is the owner of the property. My bond was bought through the Chicago City Bank and Trust company.—L. M.

The Chicago City Bank and Trust company writes THE TRIBUNE: "This property should not be considered in foreclosure. The bonds held by the bank have been deposited for the purpose of negotiating a renewal as to the entire maturing balance. Funds are in hand for payment of matured interest as soon as this arrangement is completed and we have every expectation of concluding the transaction at an early date. The foreclosure bill which has been filed is merely a protective measure to guard against adverse action by other parties."

The bank further states that of $55,000 outstanding bonds all but one holder with a $1,000 bond have deposited their securities. The three story building contains eighteen apartments. It was originally appraised at $118,000. Its present valuation is placed at approximately $95,000 by the bank.

Claremont Apartments.

I own a $100 first mortgage 7 per cent bond on the Claremont apartments at 509 Belmont avenue, the principal of which is past due at the office of Comlossy & Co. Any information regarding this issue will be appreciated. J. S. P.

C. J. Olsen, assistant secretary of the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee of this issue, states that the trust deed describing the bonds of the Claremont apartments was foreclosed and the property sold some time ago. Money was turned over to the Chicago Title and Trust company to make distribution to the bondholders, which in most cases has been done. Any one who has not sent in their bond may do so and will get approximately $4.87 for every $100 bond, he stated. There was no bondholders' protective committee in this instance; the property was handled by the Chicago Title and Trust company as trustee.

Buena Terrace Apartments.

I deposited my Buena Terrace apartment bond with the Chicago Title and Trust company, but have never been able to secure any information regarding it. I have invested $500 in this and am anxious to save it if possible. Any help you may give me will be more than appreciated. J. T. S.

This was a Greenebaum Sons Investment company issue of $675,000, which has been paid down to $634,000. The building is at 4232 Sheridan road. No receiver has been appointed. The property is being managed by the Chicago Title and Trust company and the net income is being turned over to the Central Republic Bank and Trust company, trustee. Foreclosure proceedings have been instituted, but a decree of sale has not yet been entered.

A statement of cash receipts and disbursements from Jan. 1, 1931, to March 31, 1932, shows gross receipts of $82,828. Operating expenses were $65,512; other disbursements, $16,706, with an excess of income over outlay of $609. There was a balance of $7,749 on Jan. 1, 1931, which gives a total cash balance on hand March 31, 1932, of $8,358. The occupancy on Dec. 31, 1931, was 61.09 per cent.

Floorings, Inc., Lease Ohio and La Salle Street Corner

Floorings, Inc., now in the Engineering building, have leased the main floor space at the southeast corner of La Salle and Ohio, approximately 2,000 square feet, and will occupy it about June 1 with linoleums, carpets, rugs, etc. The space, leased from John Rakllos & Co., fronts forty feet on La Salle and thirty feet on Ohio.

2 SCIENTISTS WILL REMAIN ON ALASKA GLACIER

Hunt Cosmic Ray Data of Death Victims.

With rescue from storm swept Muldrow glacier within their grasp, two scientists of the University of Chicago cosmic ray expedition to Mount McKinley in Alaska yesterday decided to remain on the glacier to search for data lost when two of their party fell into a crevasse and died. Their decision was radioed to Fairbanks, 250 miles from the glacier, by a plane above their camp, and received in Chicago by officials of American Airways.

The two who are on the glacier are Percy T. Olton Jr. and Nicholas Spadavecchia, both of New York. Allen Carpe and Theodore Koven were believed to have measured cosmic rays from the height of Mount McKinley, 20,300 feet, when they fell into a crevasse about May 8 while descending. E. P. Beckwith, fifth member of the party, was carried to Fairbanks in an Alaska Airways plane. He is ill with fever.

Take Repairs to Plane.

Early yesterday morning Pilots Joe Crosson and Jerry Jones circled over the camp of the scientists in a large plane, planning to land and bring them back to Fairbanks. The plane carried a new axle and tools to replace a broken axle on a plane S. E. Robbins, third rescue pilot, had landed on the glacier near the camp on Thursday. Robbins wrote a warning with lamp black on the snow for them not to land because the glacier was breaking up. They dropped the axle and tools with a parachute and returned to Fairbanks.

Shortly after their return to Fairbanks yesterday morning Robbins, who had presumably repaired his plane and taken off from the glacier, radioed that further attempts to rescue the scientists would not be necessary. He said he was flying back to Fairbanks, leaving Olton and Spadavecchia with food for three weeks, rifles, and a comfortable camp.

As he flew toward Fairbanks Robbins, according to United Press dispatches, radioed the story of Spadavecchia's experiences on a ten day trip down the glacier to bring aid to his companions. Spadavecchia left the glacier camp on May 10, Robbins said, to get aid for Beckwith. He carried little food and no rifle. By Thursday night, when Robbins was in the glacier camp with Olton, almost all hope of finding Spadavecchi alive was lost.

Awakened by Shouts.

"Olton and I were sleeping when we heard shouts," Robbins related. "We saw Spadavecchia about 300 yards away in the dim light. The going had been terrible, he said, and he was almost exhausted. The only food he had was one small can of jam and another of chicken.

"'I could make only two miles a day,' he told us, 'because I had to watch for crevasses like Carpe and Koven fell into. I saw that my food would not last until I could get to a settlement. I killed porcupines with my ski sticks and ate their livers. I tried to kill patarmigans, but they were too quick for me.

"'I wasn't lost, but I saw it was useless to try to reach a settlement. So I turned back reluctantly. I held out the jam and chicken so I could have one last big feed before I checked out.'"

Robbins said Spadavecchia and Olton are in good health despite the hardships. [Later an Associated Press dispatch stated Robbins had landed safely at Fairbanks.]

Will Search for Bodies.

The two scientists plan to wait about a week for the snow to clear sufficiently to allow them to begin a search for the bodies of Koven and Carpe, Robbins radioed. They will try to recover data gathered by those two from the top of Mount McKinley, as well as instruments used by them.

Officials of American Airways said pilots on their Alaskan division will be instructed to maintain contact with Olton and Spadavecchia from the air every two or three days during their search.

JOSEPH CERMAK RESIGNS POST UNDER SWANSON

A report that Mayor Cermak's brother, Joseph Cermak, for many years statistician for the state's attorney's office, had been discharged was denied last night both by the mayor and State's Attorney Swanson.

"It is true that my brother is leaving the place he now holds," said Mayor Cermak, "but he was not fired. He resigned to accept a political appointment with the new administration in Cicero, where he has been a Democratic leader for a long time."

Mr. Swanson said that he knew of no political significance in the departure of Joseph Cermak and had brought no pressure to get him out of the office.

Miss Garrigue Gallagher Bride

Ceremony at Church

Miss Garrigue Gallagher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael F. Gallagher of Highland Park, was married to Charles Alexieff Butland at 5 p. m. yesterday at Christ church in Winnetka. A small reception was held after the ceremony at the Gallagher residence on Deere Park drive.

The bride wore a gown of ivory satin with a yoke of chantilly lace which was used on her mother's wedding gown. Her tulle veil fell from a close fitting cap of the same lace. She carried a white prayer book instead of flowers. The maid of honor, Miss Myra Little of Evanston, and the bridesmaids, Miss Martha Hackmeister of Evanston and Miss Harriet Stuart of New York, wore gowns of hydrangea blue chiffon with orchid hats and slippers and carried large arm bouquets of blue and lavender flowers.

The bride and groom will sail from Vancouver on June 3 for Shanghai, China, where Mr. Butland is in business. They will visit his father, Capt. George Butland, in Seattle before sailing.

ORDER 60 NEW TYPE PLANES TO COST $2,000,000

Craft to Cut Coast Trip Five Hours.

P. S. JOHNSON.

Construction of a fleet of sixty new type transport planes, capable of carrying two pilots, ten passengers, and 500 pounds of mail and express at a cruising speed of 155 miles an hour, was authorized yesterday by P. G. Johnson, president of the United Air Lines, which operate from Chicago to New York, Dallas, Seattle, San Francisco, and Los Angeles.

The new planes will be built by the Boeing Airplane company of Seattle. They will cost about $33,000 each, and the fleet of sixty will involve an investment of about $2,000,000. Both the air lines and the Boeing company are subsidiaries of United Aircraft and Transport corporation.

Features of Army Bomber.

The new type planes will be adapted from the low wing, all metal bomber built for the Army Air Corps last year by the Boeing company, and will include features of the monomail, a single motor low wing mail and passenger plane built for United Air Lines by the Boeing company. The plane will be the fastest multi-motor passenger and cargo plane in the world, Mr. Johnson said.

The new planes will have a top speed of 175 miles an hour at 5,000 feet altitude and will cruise at 155 miles an hour, fully loaded, according to army air corps performance data on the bomber. It will be capable of flying with full loads as high as 18,000 feet, which is 6,000 feet higher than is required to clear western mountains. The plane, fully loaded, will weigh six tons and will carry sufficient gasoline to cruise 500 miles and still have a 35 per cent fuel reserve.

Improvements in Design.

The plane is radically different in design from other passenger transports. Highly streamlined, the landing gear is retractable, adding 20 miles an hour to the flying speed. The plane will be powered with two Pratt & Whitney Wasp motors of 550 horsepower, supercharged, and mounted on the leading edge of the cantilever wing. The wing span will be 74 feet, the length of the plane 51 feet, and height, 16 feet. The planes will be equipped for night flying and will have two way radio phones.

The new craft will cut flying time from New York to San Francisco, via Chicago, from 27 to 23 hours or less. Flying time from Chicago to New York, now 6¼ hours, will be cut to 5 hours, and from Chicago to Dallas, now 9 hours, to 7¼ hours. The present 20 hour flight from Chicago to San Francisco will be cut to 15 hours.

The first of the fleet will be placed in operation on the line about Sept. 1, Mr. Johnson said.

ROB MESSENGER OF $540.

STATE ASKS BIDS ON 53 MILES OF BRICK PAVING

Projects Called Political, Wasteful, Dangerous.

BY HAL FOUST.

The Illinois highway department is advertising for bids on contracts to resurface fifty-three miles of old concrete paving with brick. Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor club, yesterday denounced the projects as wasteful, uneconomical, impractical and dangerous.

The cost of the resurfacing, based on last year's experience, will approximate $1,500,000. The fifty-three miles is divided into seventeen projects scattered throughout the state, the closest to Chicago being 2.22 miles on Roosevelt road in Ogle and Whiteside counties, and 4.55 miles on Illinois 7 and Illinois 7A in La Salle and Grundy counties.

Heeds Brick Makers' Plea.

Gov. Emmerson last spring turned a friendly ear to the pleas of brick manufacturers that they needed state contracts to carry them through the depression. Thereafter, the highway department resurfaced 60 miles.

The brick manufacturers repeated their pleas during the political campaign this spring. The governor's candidate, Omer Custer, was defeated in the primary. The award of the brick contract probably will be the last important act of Mr. Emmerson's administration of highway affairs before his retirement.

"The motor club opposed the resurfacing last year and subsequent events have proved our opposition justified," said Mr. Hayes. "On the Lincoln highway near Chicago Heights, for example, the stretch of new brick was the scene of numerous wrecks and casualties.

Three Deaths Traced to Bricks.

"On this highway and on the new brick of Roosevelt road near De Kalb, there were three deaths directly attributed to the slipperiness of the brick pavement. An extensive treatment of surface and shoulders was necessary to reduce the hazard of skidding into the ditch in wet weather.

"On the basis of available figures, the sixty miles of resurfacing last year cost $1,720,000, or $28,700 per mile. The ultimate cost to the motorist taxpayers was $245,000 in excess of the amount that appeared on the face of the bids. On some projects the mileage built was less than specified in the bids and at the same time the contractors' awards were greater than their bids.

Fears Taxpayers' Rebellion.

"The brick resurfacing was a gross extravagance with public funds, particularly flagrant at this time when the taxpayers are demanding economy. The motorists have been submissive taxpayers in the past, but there's liable to be a rebellion against future highway construction unless the road funds are handled economically.

"The cost of $28,700 for the brick can be compared with the $23,000 per mile cost of new two lane concrete pavements in Illinois outside the metropolitan area last year. Widening in the metropolitan area, where labor wages are higher than downstate, cost less than $25,000 per mile last year.

Favors Asphalt Repairs.

"Old and broken concrete roads could be resurfaced with asphaltic concrete in Illinois, as it is done in many other states, for approximately $7,000 to $10,000 per mile, according to the motor club's engineers. Furthermore, the bituminous material can be laid on broken slabs whereas brick requires a better foundation.

"I'm not trying to sell asphalt to the Illinois highway department. As a matter of fact, there is almost as much asphalt used in filler for brick roads as there is for binder in the asphaltic concrete. My only interest is to protect the motorists' tax money from wastefulness."

The cost of the brick resurfacing this year may be lower than the $28,700 of last year. New eighteen foot concrete is being laid outside the metropolitan area this year for $18,980 per mile, as compared with $23,000 in 1931.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cincinnati, O., May 21.—The Cubs fell apart at the finish again today and where there should have been victory there was defeat. Pat Malone faded out after staggering almost to the wire. Guy Bush proved ineffectual as a rescuer, and Bill Jurges committed the most glaring offense of all when he muffed a thrown ball in the ninth. Out of this error the rising Reds, aided by Bush's wildness, shoved across two runs and nosed out the Chicagoans, 6 to 5. Now the Cubs are hanging to first place with only a one game margin.

Malone was wobbly all afternoon, but Hornsby let him hang on. But he didn't remain long after walking the first two batters in the eighth and endangering a 5 to 3 lead his mates had built up against Red Lucas. Bush salvaged that situation with only one run home, but he couldn't overcome that Jurges error in the ninth, and concluded his inglorious exhibition by forcing home the winning run.

Wildness Brings on Trouble.

Bush invited trouble for himself when he passed Babe Herman to start the ninth. Hafey bunted and this was where Jurges, whose brilliance had cut off the tying run in the eighth, blundered. Bush grabbed the bunt and threw perfectly to second to force the Babe, but Jurges dropped the ball. Lombardi made two horrible attempts to bunt and then dribbled a slow grounder toward center. Billy Herman leaped over toward second and reached for the ball with his bare hand, but he didn't get it, and Babe went home with the tying run. Hafey raced to third on the hit.

Hornsby ordered Bush to pass High, filling the bases with none out. The forlorn hope was that a double play might be perpetrated by way of the plate. But Bush couldn't coöperate. He pitched a wide one to Heath, then another, and finally two more of the same. Heath walked to first merely to conform to the rules and Hafey walked in with the run that clinched Lucas' seventh victory of the season.

Cubs Score in First.

The Cubs started their day's work with three hits, which grew into a run. English singled through short after two were out. Moore beat out a hit to Grantham, who tried to make a play at first but threw both late and wild, letting Moore go to second and English to third. Stephenson's high bounder rolled off the tip of Lucas' glove and Grantham snared it at second, but not soon enough to keep Stephenson from beating out a hit on which English scored.

The Reds retrieved the run in their first attack. Malone got the first two men out of the way, but Babe Herman boosted a high fly to left center where it couldn't be reached by either Stephenson or Moore. The Babe ran as far as third, and just about that time Jurges was fumbling the return throw. Babe broke for the plate and Billy Herman, who recovered the loose ball, hesitated about throwing. The delay was just enough to let Babe get to the plate safely, but the error was charged against Jurges.

Two Out, but Then—

Malone also retired two men in the third before the Reds began to manufacture a run. A pass to Grantham was the first happening. Babe Herman peeled off a bullet like single to the left of Jurges. The rest was purely accidental, but nevertheless painful. Hafey, after looking bad on two strikes, made a half hearted attempt to pull away from the next pitch. He didn't move quickly enough and the ball bounced off his bat for a looping single behind Billy Herman. This let Grantham score.

The Cubs bounced back with two

Distance runners line up for the start of the Western conference mile race at Dyche stadium. The large field is closely grouped, but it wasn't long before Henry Brocksmith of Indiana stepped out and won the event in 4:21.1, leaving his rivals staggering about the premises. Wolfe of Michigan, finished second; Sears of Purdue, third; Neese of Indiana, fourth, and Trott of Iowa, fifth. The Hoosier runner also took the two mile event.

University of Michigan track and field athletes are champions of the Western conference. The Wolverines placed in all track events and in four of the seven field contests yesterday at Dyche Stadium to score 50½ points which earned them their 12th championship in 22 years of Big Ten competition.

Ohio State finished second with 46½ points, passing Indiana in the final event of the afternoon, the high jump. Indiana scored 43½ points.

Michigan's championship was gained by team supremacy. Only two of its squad of 20 won individual titles. Edwin Russell was first in the quarter mile and Brooker Brooks was the best of the conference discus throwers. The Michigan mile relay team added a third title when it outsprinted Indiana.

They Only Threatened.

All afternoon Ohio State and Indiana threatened Michigan's point lead. And the Buckeyes, who never have won a conference track title, today might be celebrating except for an unfortunate injury to Jack Keller, their star hurdler. Keller, who previously had beaten George Saling, of Iowa, in the high hurdles, pulled a leg tendon as he reached the seventh barrier in the 220 yard low hurdle race.

Keller quit and, although John Black of Ohio State finished fifth, Ohio saw its championship dream vanish. Had Keller won Michigan would have lost one point and Ohio State, which banked on this victory, since Keller was defending champion, would have scored 50½ points to Michigan's 49½.

Here They Are.

The meet was full of unusual performances. The strong north wind, which swept full on the backs of the sprinters and hurdlers, was responsible. Consider these wind blown records:

Don Bennett of Ohio State tied the accepted world record of 9 5-10 seconds for 100 yards. Then Bennett, in the longer dash, with sails wide spread, floated 220 yards in 20 5-10 seconds, one-tenth of a second faster than the world mark.

Jack Keller won the 120 yard high hurdles in the astonishing time of 14 seconds, two-fifths of a second faster than the world record and a fifth of a second better than the new American record established last year by Percy Beard of New York in the national A. A. U. meet.

Saling, beaten by Keller in the high hurdles, came back to win the low hurdles in 23 seconds. This equals the accepted world record, but is slower by one-fifth of a second than Rockaway's accepted Big Ten record. Rockaway's record has not been given recognition other than by the Western Conference because he used starting blocks.

Despite the wind the dashes and the hurdles were truly run. Saling's victory in the 220 yard lows must not be discounted, for when Keller pulled

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Four unearned runs and almost complete helplessness against the pitching of Vic Sorrell furnished some of the reasons the White Sox took another spanking from the Detroit Tigers yesterday. The game was an unusual Detroit-Chicago contest in that the Tigers did not come from behind to accomplish their foul purpose, the reason being that the Detroiters never were behind. The score was Detroit, 5; Chicago, 1.

The last four Detroit runs were unearned, having been made after the side should have been retired. But too much stress should not be placed on this technicality, for there were two singles and a triple by Jonathan Stone after Selph's sad throwing error with two out in the fourth that were routine matters worthy of the results which accrued therefrom.

You noticed the mention of that fellow Jonathan Stone. He's the same fellow who led the Tiger attack Friday, and he was the bellwether again yesterday what with a triple, another smack which was the purest of triples in caliber but which was held to a double because the colossal Dale Alexander was cluttering up the base lines ahead of him, and a single.

Thomas O. K. in Rescue Rôle.

All the damage was done at the expense of Pat Caraway. Tommy Thomas was a rather neat workman during the last five innings. He got in a couple of jams, but had a lot of stuff and was able to put on the pressure whenever necessity demanded.

It was Sorrell's fifth straight victory and the fourth straight for the Tigers against the Sox. It also was the fifth victory out of six starts Detroit has accomplished in competition with the lowly Chicagoans.

Vic didn't allow a Comiskey boy to get on first base after the fifth inning. Only two of the five Sox hits were made before there were two out and Robroy Fothergill was the only Chicago player to get a walk. The lone Sox run which tied the score for a few short breaths was made in the third on a single by Caraway and a double by Selph.

Tigers Get Going in Second.

The Tigers turned to production in the second inning. Kress made a circus play to dispose of Walker, but Johnson walked and went to second on Richardson's single to left. Hayworth then singled to left center, Johnson scoring and Richardson stopping at second. A walk for Sorrell filled the bases, but Davis attempted to bunt and fouled to Grube, after which Rogell flied to Funk.

The Sox had some idea of tying the score in their half of the second when Blue doubled with one out, but Stone backed against the wall for Fothergill's liner and Johnson was waiting for Appling's smash.

That Terrible Fourth.

In the fourth the Tigers grabbed four unearned runs, all after the side should have been retired. Johnson walked and Richardson fouled to Selph. Then Johnson stole second. Hayworth flied to Seeds and it appeared the third out would be accomplished, when Selph came up with Sorrell's grounder, but his throw to first was wide and Vic was safe on first with Johnson on third. Davis singled to right, Johnson scoring and Sorrell going to third, after which Davis stole second.

Rogell was given credit for a single when his grounder rolled between Selph's heels and the play enabled Sorrell to score and Davis to reach third. Stone then cracked a triple to right, scoring Davis and Rogell. Gehringer indulged in his second strike out to retire the side.

Threaten Thomas in Seventh.

The Tigers tried hard to break through on Thomas in the seventh, but fell short of their aim. After Rogell had fanned Stone made the first hit off Thomas. Then Gehringer struck out for the third time. White, who had replaced Walker, singled to center, Stone stopping at second. The runners moved up on a passed ball, but died when Johnson grounded out to Appling.

The ninth started with Davis getting hit by a pitched ball, causing Alexander to be placed on first to run for him. Rogell fouled to Selph but Stone slammed the ball off the score board, a normal triple. Stone was obliged to put on the brakes to see what the ponderous Alexander was going to do. Alexander was out at the plate, Funk to Appling to Grube. Gehringer singled off Appling's shins and Stone stopped at third. White forced Gehringer.

Don Bennett of Ohio State leaps across the finish line of the 220 yard dash in 20 5-10 seconds, breaking the world and conference records. A strong wind aided the Buckeye flyer in his fast furlong sprint. Hellmich of Illinois, ran second; Fazekas of Ohio State, third; Renwick of Michigan, fourth, and Thompton of Minnesota, fifth.

WENTWORTH, Surrey, England, May 21.—Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare and Miss Helen Hicks, the United States' outstanding women golfers, were defeated today in competition with a team of British women golfers, but the United States won a nine match series, 5 to 3. One match was halved.

Joyce Wethered, whom Bobby Jones called the world's best woman golfer, this afternoon came through with a smashing singles victory over Mrs. Vare, 6 and 4, and Enid Wilson defeated the American champion, Miss Hicks, 2 and 1.

The United States women won three foursomes this morning, a lead which their British rivals could not overcome. The assault by the British in the singles might have turned the tables if Virginia Van Wie had not curled a 30 foot putt over a slanting lie on the 17th green and won from Wanda Morgan, English champion, 2 and 1.

In the singles matches Mrs. Cheney defeated Elsie Corbett, 5 and 3, and the British women faced the impossible task of winning five out of six matches to win the tournament.

Miss Wethered led the assault, playing machinelike golf while Mrs. Vare found five bunkers in succession between the second and seventh holes and turned the first nine 4 down. Miss Wethered's brilliant golf had unnerved the American captain and she was unable to overtake her.

Miss Hicks, after being 1 up three times in the first nine, turned the match all square and began to fade.

Lyons, Jones to Face Tigers in 2 Games Today

This afternoon's double header between the Tigers and the White Sox will be the first two ply major league attraction in Chicago this season. Lyons and Jones will pitch for the Sox and Wyatt and Bridges will oppose them.

Fothergill leaned over too far in recovering Stone's single in the seventh and was seized with a misery in his tummy. He had to leave the game forthwith.

Gerald Walker, who was sent home from the east by Manager Harris because he looked mean when Bucky scolded him for a misplay, apparently has become docile again. He was in the starting lineup yesterday.

Bill Cunningham, Sox coach and cheer leader, who has been doubling in the scouting profession, has reported that he thinks one Ollie Carnegie, a young outfielder now with Buffalo, is a good batsman. And, somehow or other, the Sox believe they could use a good batsman, or maybe nine or ten.

Frank Grube, who was throwing like everything when he was doing all the Sox catching, showed the effects of his extensive layoff. Richardson, Johnson and Davis swiped bases on Frankie. Richardson's theft put him on third.

There is little rest for the weary, as Manager Fonseca might say. Cleveland comes to town tomorrow and with a record of seven straight victories over our fellows.

Here's the way things have gone so far this year with the Sox:

Sox vs. St. Louis	Won 3; lost 4
Sox vs. Cleveland	Won 1, lost 7
Sox vs. Detroit	Won 1, lost 5
Sox vs. New York	Won 0, lost 1
Sox vs. Philadelphia	Won 0, lost 1
Sox vs. Washington	Won 1, lost 2
Sox vs. Boston	Won 3, lost 1
Totals	Won 9, lost 21

CHICAGO BEATEN TWICE.

Adrian Hoopengardner, Purdue pitcher, gave the Boilermakers victory over Chicago in both ends of a double-header at the Midway yesterday. The Lafayette right hander bested Roy Henshaw, Maroon southpaw, in the first encounter, 6 to 2, then got credit for the second win when his mates piled up 11 runs in five innings before Chicago could wear him down. The score of the second game was Purdue, 18; Chicago, 9.

Hoopengardner and Henshaw battled throughout the early game on even terms. Four Maroon errors in the early innings gave the Boilermakers victory. In the second game Straske started for Chicago but was removed in the fifth when Purdue scored six runs on a home run, a pair of triples, walks, singles and errors. The Maroons rallied in the same inning with a four run attack on which Hoopengardner retired in favor of Hartman. Beeks and Pat Page Jr., finished for the Maroons.

IOWA, 5; NOTRE DAME, 4.

Notre Dame, Ind., May 21.—[Special.]—Iowa used two home runs and a triple to defeat Notre Dame, 5 to 4, here today. Notre Dame won yesterday. Capt. Jimmy Kenny hit a home run after Schulte had singled in the third. Gordon Prange hit a triple in the sixth to drive in two runs, and Pitcher Bill Ricke got a homer in the seventh with none on.

With the exception of these runs and a Notre Dame outburst in the ninth which netted three runs on two hits and a pair of errors, the game was a pitching duel between Ricke and Capt. Charley Palt of Notre Dame. Both yielded seven hits. Palt struck out nine to Ricke's one and Ricke yielded the only walk of the day. Joe Sheeketski hit a home run for Notre Dame with none on base. Score:

Batteries—Ricke and Schmidt; Palt and Sheeketski and O'Neil.

BADGERS BEAT GOPHERS, 5-3.

Minneapolis, Minn., May 21.—[Special.]—Two runs scored on Olson's single in the ninth broke up a close pitcher's battle between Nello Pacetti and Walfred Mattson, and enabled Wisconsin to beat Minnesota, 5 to 3, here today. Minnesota scored a run in the first, but Wisconsin tied the score in the second. Minnesota scored in the seventh, but the lead was overcome when Wisconsin scored twice in the eighth. The teams were deadlocked in the ninth, 3 to 3, when the Badgers put two men on and saw them score on Olson's single. Score:

Wisconsin ....010 000 022—5 5 3

Batteries—Pacetti and Griswold; Mattson and Shannon.

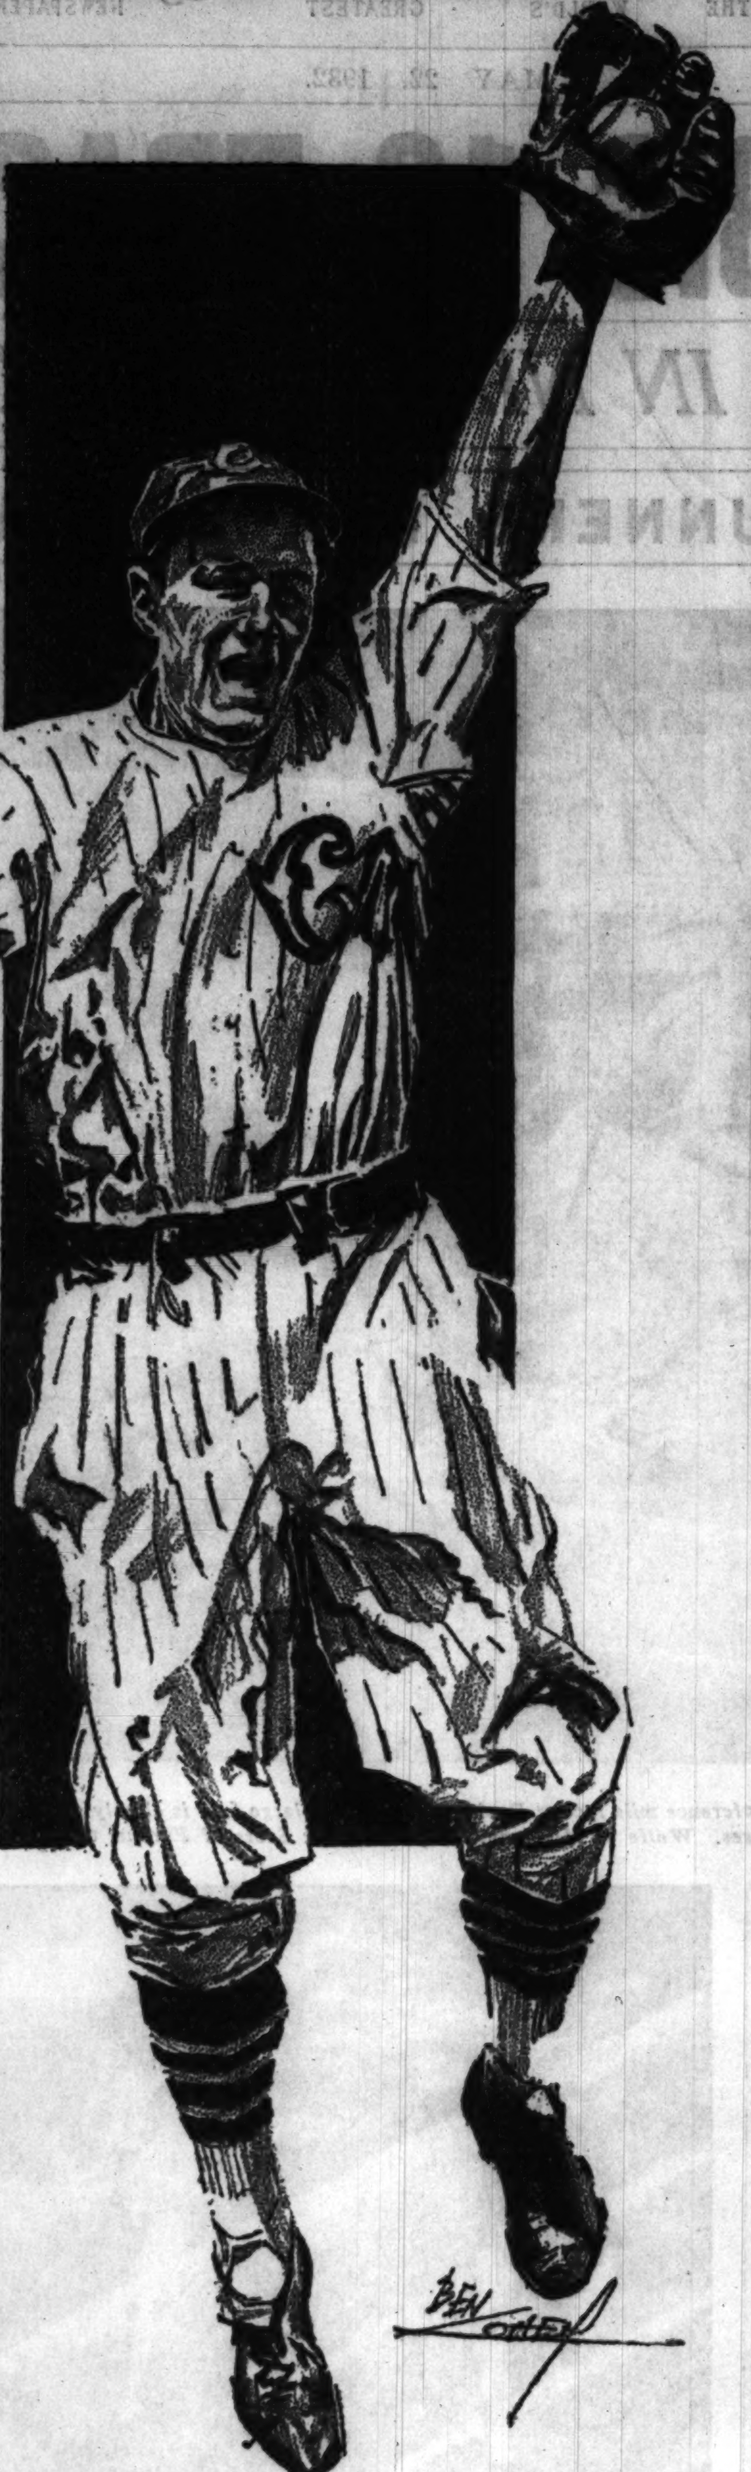
CLIMBING UP FOR ONE



Bill Jurges, hustling shortstop of the Chicago Cubs, rates as a young man who's made good in the big leagues this year. He had a 50-50 day against Cincinnati yesterday, making one brilliant play and one costly muff, but he's usually steady, and he's batting .272 as compared to .201 last season.

in the fourth. Stephenson walked and started immediately for the plate on Hemsley's two bagger to the left field corner. Grimm's sacrifice shoved Hemsley to third and he scored on Jurges' long fly which Hafey grabbed after running up onto the left field bank. Then the Rhinelanders jumped right back into a 3 to 3 tie in their half of the same inning. Lucas doubled to score Durocher, who had walked with two out.

Cubs Take 5-3 Lead.

What proved to be the last Cub runs went over in the fifth, giving the Chicagoans a 5 to 3 advantage. Richbourg led off by beating out a roller to Durocher at short. Billy Herman hoisted to his namesake in right. English stepped in with a triple to right and Richbourg scored. English scooted home on Moore's fly to Douthit.

The distress in the eighth began when Malone walked High, who batted for Gilbert. Heath got to first in the same way, and Malone was excused. Bush stepped in and found Crabtree waiting to bat for Durocher. The pinch swinger slapped a single past English and High scored. Lucas' sacrifice bunt advanced the two runners. Bush was wild in pitching to Routhit, but finally nailed him on a pop to Jurges. Then Grantham slapped a high, slow bounder over Bush. Jurges tore in, made the pick up, and shot the ball to first in time to head off the fleet footed Grantham.

LANE, BOWEN AND LINDBLOM WIN ON PREP DIAMONDS

Semi-Final Battles Go to Favorites.

The favorites in the Chicago Public High School league baseball race—Lane Tech and Bowen—took their first steps toward the finals by winning as the semi-final round play opened yesterday at Mills stadium. Lane defeated Fenger, 17 to 1, while Bowen scored two runs in the tenth inning to win from Schurz, 4 to 2.

Schurz was held to only eight hits by Jimmy McKirchy, Bowen pitcher. Bowen, which is representing the south division, scored in the second and fourth innings and were tied, 2 to 2, until the tenth, when McKirchy and Jabyczynski came home with the winning runs. Score:

Penn Defeats Badger Crew in Ohio Race

Marietta, O., May 21.—(AP)—The University of Pennsylvania eight-oared shell was triumphant today in the Mid-American rowing regatta, finishing ahead of the University of Wisconsin by two lengths and three and a quarter lengths ahead of Marietta college.

Pennsylvania covered the two miles in the comparatively good time of 10 minutes and 23 seconds. Wisconsin was seven seconds slow and Marietta 11.4 seconds behind.

Penn made a clean sweep of the program. Its junior varsity crew won over Wisconsin by four lengths and from Marietta by four and a half lengths. Penn's time for the mile and a half was 7:29.2.

Lining the shores was a crowd estimated at 10,000, while approximately 4,000 more took advantage of the traveling grandstand and followed the shells along the course.

Home Towners to See Root Oppose Cincinnati Today

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cincinnati, O., May 21.—Charley Root, whose luck has been none too good of late, will be called on to pitch to the Reds in the final game of the series tomorrow. The usual delegation from his home town, Middletown, O., is expected to attend. Ray Kolp will operate for Dan Howley's troops.

The Cubs will leave here tomorrow night for St. Louis, where they will enjoy a rest on Monday. They open a two game series with the world champion Cardinals Tuesday.

The weather was so hot today that Pat Malone had to have the services of towel swingers during his periodical rests on the bench. It was the heat that finally wore him down.

Lombardi's single in the fifth was almost a record breaker for distance. It was a terrific line drive against the left field fence. Stephenson knew he couldn't catch it so stood in his position and let the ball rebound into his hands. This wise way of handling the matter also served to keep Babe Herman from going any farther than third.

Bush is beginning to think there is a jinx operating against him here. He attempted to salvage the opening game of the season when Root's hand was injured by a batted ball in the ninth and the Reds whipped him much after the fashion they did today.

The Cubs are dandy little cousins of Lucas. He has scored three of his seven victories against them.

The battle for the various turf championships will be on in earnest tomorrow with the beginning of the metropolitan racing season in Chicago at Washington Park and it promises to be most lively and very exciting for the next two or three months.

Burgoo King, Col. Edward R. Bradley's Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner, has a good lead over his rivals for the 3 year old crown, but the championships in the other divisions are very much up in the air and it will require not only the racing in Chicago during the summer to decide them, but also the contests at Saratoga in August and at Belmont Park in early autumn.

The Chicago season, beginning with the racing which gets under way at Washington Park tomorrow, will play its most important championship rôle this year.

Strong Field Entered.

Some leading bidders for championships will come together in the Washington handicap, a $5,000 sprint at 6 furlongs which features the opening program. Don Leon, Polydorus, Pansy Walker, Tannery, Manta, Gold Step, Ladder, Camp Boss, Silverdale, Prince Atheling, Cayuga, Higher, and the Greentree entry of Surf Board and Justinian are 1 nit.

Polydorus and Silverdale most likely will rule as the choices with the Greentree stable entry also having a large following.

The other races on the opening program are also well filled. There are many promising juveniles of stake possibilities on the 2 year old number and in the other events horses from many parts of the country will be competing against each other for the first time. It is going to take a wise handicapper to pick the winners.

Kentucky Horses to Chicago.

The crack sprinters have already been fighting away against each other, but Equipoise has beaten most of them, so if he can prove later on that he is master of the older horses when he begins filling his long distance engagements he has a chance to wind up the year regarded as one of the greatest all around horses produced in America in some time.

That Chicago will be the scene of most of the important racing for the next 60 or 90 days is very evident from the way the stars are being headed this way. Many of the topnotchers from the Maryland spring season have already arrived at Washington Park. All the best horses from Kentucky, where the spring season wound up at Churchill Downs yesterday, are also to race there. More than 500 horses have been sent here from Churchill Downs. When the Belmont Park season ends early in June practically every good horse in the east will head for Chicago to shoot at the rich prizes that are offered.

Expect Best Season.

Washington Park is ready for the beginning of what many believe will be the best season of racing ever conducted there. The advance sale of box seat and reserved tickets for opening day and for the American Derby is ahead of former years. Col. Matt J. Winn, president of the American Turf Association, and C. W. Hay, general manager of the Washington Park track, have been on the job preparing for the opening for two weeks. C. W. Price, in charge of the racing, was also an early arrival. Others in the official family will be on hand today.

There will be about 2,000 horses available for the racing, half of them stabled at Washington Park and the other half at Lincoln Fields, while a few will continue to train at Hawthorne and be vanned over to Washington Park to fill their engagements.

War Saint Is Aurora Victor Before 12,000

BY FRENCH LANE.

Aurora's spring racing season, the first conducted by a member of the Illinoi Turf association this year, came to a close yesterday with about 12,000 on hand when the curtain went down.

It was a prosperous season, according to a statement issued by General Manager E. F. Carruthers last night. "Our attendance has increased 15 per cent over last year," his statement read. "The betting was off somewhere between 15 and 20 per cent.

"We have made money on our meeting, which has been a pleasant surprise, for the outlook just before opening day was none too bright. Our horses ran to form; in fact, the figures reveal our meeting was one of the most formful held anywhere in America in many years."

To Go Ahead with Improvements.

Carruthers said the Exposition Park Jockey club will go ahead with numerous contemplated improvements and that it will go through with the fall dates assigned to it by the Illinois Turf association. This means there will be 19 days of racing at the Aurora course late in October.

The final day of racing brought defeat to the Pacific coast 2 year old champion, Pana Franka. Sunnyside Up, a Kentucky filly, and Monks Bela both showed the Pacific coast horse their heels.

And there were no excuses for Pana Franka to offer except that she was just outfooted by the fleet Kentucky and Chicago color bearers. Monks Bela made all the early running, Pana Franka running second and Sunnyside Up, third.

They headed into the stretch in that order but about this time Jockey McCoy roused Sunnyside Up with a couple of smacks on the flanks with the leather. The daughter of Cherokee bounded on past Pana Franka and took after Monks Bela. A sixteenth from home Sunnyside Up had her nose in front and the race was as good as over.

Sunnyside Up Pays $14.58.

She went on to win in the good time of 1:00 2-5 for the five furlongs by three-quarters of a length from Monks Bela. Pana Franka was struggling hard to hold third place a length back of the two leaders. In the mutuels Sunnyside Up paid $14.58. Pana Franka was a heavily backed favorite.

The 18 winning daily double ticket holders each collected $441.52 and Jockey J. Neel, a Chicago kid, was in the saddle on both winners. He kicked Runar home to a thrilling neck victory over Happy Lad in the third race, then did the same thing with the long shot Tufinuf in the third race, beating out Believe It or Not and Agnes Sorel in a stretch drive that had every spectator up cheering.

War Saint won the Judge Henry Horner handicap which featured the final program, beating out the fleet War Glow by three lengths. Burning Up, which showed some nice early speed, dropped back and was content to finish third. Dr. Freeland, the short priced favorite, was fourth. He didn't run as he did just a week ago when he beat the same sort of horses handily in the fast time of 1:12.

Homework, chestnut son of Broomstick-Marchesa II., came up with a rush in the final jump to win the Au Revoir handicap, feature race of the closing card of the spring season at Sportsman's Park yesterday.

Semester was second by a head, while Polly's Folly was a close third. Fine riding by Johnny McLaren contributed to Homework's triumph.

Shasta Lad and Noon Play were the successful horses in the double, paying off at a dividend of $80.10 for each $2 invested. Shasta Lad performed in the second race of the day and was lucky to win from La Golondrina, by a head. Cloido, which lasted for third money, showed considerable early speed.

Doubles Pays $80.10.

Noon Play won the third heat, last half of the double, in cantering fashion from Nardo and Wild Child. The latter was a stout favorite and got to the front, but could not hold her advantage. Ultimate Vote unseated Jockey A. Colvin.

Southland Belle won the fourth from Marjory Nell with Don Worthington taking third money. Sawdust ran into numerous pockets and fooled those who thought he was a good thing.

Discussing the eighteen day racing session at Sportsman's Park, E. J. O'Hare, president and general manager of the National Jockey club, said:

Next Meeting Oct. 10.

"It is only natural that we should feel elated over the success of our first meeting. It has been demonstrated conclusively that the Chicago racing public likes half mile racing. The attendance exceeded our expectations, while the amount wagered daily was remarkable, considering present financial conditions.

"Our next meeting will start on Oct. 10 and run for 19 days, concluding on Oct. 31."

Jamestown First Entered in $5,000 Arlington Opener

Jamestown, champion juvenile of 1930, was the first horse nominated for the $5,000 added Arlington Inaugural Handicap, most important of the 21 stakes closing June 1, Otto Lehmann, president of the Arlington Park Jockey club, said yesterday. The entry of the George D. Widener 4 year old, which won nine of his twelve starts in two seasons, was made by A. J. Joyner, dean of American trainers who will be bringing his stable west for the first time.

The entry of Jamestown is an indication that the son of St. James and Mile. Dazie is going along smoothly again in his training. An ankle injury forced him out last season. Joyner said early in the spring that Jamestown would begin his campaigning in stakes at the Arlington meeting and the Inaugural handicap, a dash of 7 furlongs, may mark this year's debut of the colt that has the Futurity, Withers, Saratoga Special, Grand Union Hotel stakes, and United States Hotel stakes to his credit.

Jamestown also is a nominee in the Stars and Stripes handicap, Arlington handicap and Arlington Gold Cup, each a $20,000 added attraction, which will have a supplementary closing on June 1 along with the $70,000 Classic, Arlington Oaks, Arlington Matron handicap and Hyde Park stakes.

Except the Inaugural handicap, the events having a regular closing June 1 each will be endowed with $2,500 and will give Arlington park a stake feature daily during the 30-day meeting that opens June 27 and closes July 30. The aggregate added money of the 30 stakes, of which the $70,000 Classic, $60,000 Arlington Futurity and $30,000 Arlington Lassie stakes are the richest, amounts to $252,000. A total distribution of $700,000 to horsemen during the meeting is probable, Mr. Lehmann said.

EQUIPOISE WINS METROPOLITAN BY THREE LENGTHS

New York, May 21.—[Special.]—Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney's Equipoise captured the thirty-ninth running of the Metropolitan handicap at Belmont Park this afternon before a crowd estimated at 20,000, and established himself as just about the best horse in the handicap division.

The opinion was sustained by the announcement of the weights for the Suburban handicap, in which Handicapper Walter Vosburgh puts Equipoise at the top of the list with Mate second and Gallant Knight third.

The famous son of Pennant and Swinging now has won all four of his 1932 starts and seems headed toward the championship of the handicap division as he won easily by three lengths under 127 pounds. Mrs. Katherine Elkins Hitt's Sun Meadow was second and Mate, bearing the A. C. Bostwick silks, was third.

The order of finish after the three placed horses was Pilate, Osculator, Epithet, and Iron Clad. Pompeius and Flagpole were scratched. Equipoise stepped the mile in 1:37 over a fast track and earned $7,225. His total winnings now are $184,360, by far the greater portion of this total having been won during his juvenile year, when he was the leading 2 year old money winner with $156,835.

Champaign, Ill., May 21.—[Special.]—Led by Randall Herman, sprinter, whose feats included the creation of a new national record, Oak Park High school, for the third consecutive year, won the championship in the thirty-eighth annual Illinois state interscholastic track and field meet, held at the University of Illinois today under the auspices of the Illinois High School Athletic association.

Oak Park totaled 32 points to finish far ahead of Joliet, which was second with 13. Senn of Chicago was third with 10, and Libertyville was fourth with 9.

New state interscholastic records were established in seven of the eight track events and in one field event. One new national interscholastic record was made and another national mark equaled.

Individual honors were shared by Herman and Fritz Pollard, Senn's flying Negro hurler. Herman won both dashes, establishing a new national record of 9.7 in the 100 and a new state record in the 220. He also ran as anchor on the winning Oak Park relay team.

Pollard Sets Two Records.

Pollard sped to triumph in both hurdles, establishing new state records and equaling the national record of 15 seconds in the 120 yard high hurdles.

Bob Stephen of Joliet, holder of the mark in the shotput, exceeded it and also placed second in the discus.

Herman established a new national record of 9.7 in the 100 yard dash after a duel with Bob Grieve of Glenbard High, Glen Ellyn. The former national record was made by Ralph Metcalfe, running for Tilden, Chicago, in 1929, who repeated the feat in the state meet here in 1930.

Fred H. Young, referee, and the other officials, stated that Herman's performance would be certified to the national interscholastic committee as a record, as he was not assisted by the wind.

The cheering over Herman's feat hardly had subsided when the suburban star led the field in the 220 yard dash, which he won in 21.2, a new state record, displacing the old mark of 21.3, made by Metcalfe.

Easy for Mr. Pollard.

Pollard was easily the king of the hurdlers, winning both events in decisive style. He was unable today to equal his time of :15 yesterday in the high hurdles, but he established a new state record of 24.2 over the low barriers.

There was an abundance of quarter mile talent, for when Miller, Maine township [Des Plaines], ran in :48.8, breaking the former record, :50.5, four other runners in the same section also did better than the old mark.

VICTOR AND VANQUISHED IN BIG TEN TENNIS

Lejeck Beats Dennison for Big Ten Title

Edward Lejeck of Illinois won the Big Ten singles tennis championship yesterday at Northwestern by defeating Carl Dennison of Ohio State, in straight sets, 6-0, 6-3, 7-5. The doubles title went to the Minnesota combination of Charles Britzius and Paul Scherer, who whipped Lejeck and Hands, the Illinois team, in straight sets, 6-4, 6-1, 7-5.

Lejeck's powerful forearm drives were the deciding factor in his singles match. He drove Dennison to the back courts repeatedly with his bullet-like volleys. Dennison was slow to warm up, and not until well in the second set did he win a game. Lejeck came up to the net often to score.

Dennison Rallies.

Only in the third and final set did Dennison extend the Illini. With the game score 3 all, Lejeck broke through Dennison's service and forged ahead. He was enjoying a 5-4 lead, and was within one point of game, set, and championship when the Ohio player rallied and forced the match into extra games.

Illini Are Tired.

Apparently suffering from the effects of a strenuous match Friday, when the Illinois doubles team was forced to play five sets to beat Stagg and Davidson of Chicago in the semi-finals, Hands and Lejeck offered little opposition to Minnesota.

The team work of Britzius and Scherer was far superior. Britzius played particularly good tennis, while the singles champion, though fatigued from his previous play, starred for Illinois.

CORNELL SQUARE ENTRANT VICTOR IN SKATE EVENTS

Eugene Koscielski of Cornell Square, with 24 points, yesterday won the South Park association's annual roller skating meet at 51st street and Lake Michigan. Koscielski scored two firsts and two seconds, winning the coast for distance and single skate race. He placed in the 220 yard dash and one mile race. John Przybyski, also of Cornell, was runnerup with 19 points, taking firsts in the one mile race and 220 yard dash, and a second in the single skate race.

In the girls' events Grace Mentechki, representing Russell Square, was high scorer with 12 points. She won the coast for distance and placed in the 50 yard dash. Helen Peters of Bessemer won the intermediate coast for distance.

CARNEGIE TECH TO PLAY PURDUE IN 1933 AND '34

Lafayette, Ind., May 21.—[Special.]—Carnegie Tech has been added to Purdue football schedules for 1933 and 1934, it was announced today. The Carnegie eleven will meet Purdue in the Ross-Ade stadium on Nov. 4, 1933 and the two teams will meet in a return engagement at Pittsburgh in 1934 on a date yet to be selected. They met for the first time last fall when Purdue won, 13 to 6.

Fischer, Michigan Star, Wins Big 10 Golfing Crown

Minneapolis, Minn., May 21.—(AP)—John Fischer, slender 20 year old youth of Cincinnati, today outdid the Big Ten's best golfers and won the Western conference championship in his first season of varsity play for the University of Michigan.

Going back to the lead from which he was ousted on the second 18 holes Friday, Fischer maintained a steady pace today to finish with a 303 score, five strokes better than the runner-up—Earl Larson of Minnesota.

Fischer's tournament winning aggregate and low counts by his three teammates obtained the team championship for the Wolverines, with Minnesota second. The Wolverines compiled 1,248 and the Gophers 1,272.

James Reston of Illinois took third place with 309. Fred Damaske of Northwestern was a stroke behind Reston for fourth, while Jack Lenfestey of Michigan finished fifth with 312.

Bob Kepler, a former caddie pal of Reston at Dayton, O., was the leading Buckeye with 315, tying him with Ed Dayton of Michigan and Clifford Bloom of Minnesota behind Lenfestey.

Michigan's team total of 1,248 won medals for each of the four Wolverines. Minnesota took second with 1,272. The others placed as follows: Northwestern, 1,294; Illinois, 1,298; Ohio State, 1,305; Chicago, 1,333; Wisconsin, 1,349.

HANDBOOKS VS. RACE TRACKS.

FROM time to time come suggestions that handbooks taking bets on the races be recognized and licensed, both for the sake of revenue and for the sake of supervision. Naturally these suggestions arise mainly in states where betting on horse races is recognized by legislative enactment.

"We have a law in Illinois making it legal to bet on the horses if one has the price of an admission ticket to said track, and another law making it a crime to do the same thing outside the fence. This is the modern way of creating a racket.

"Before prohibition Chicago had over 7,000 saloons, each paying a yearly license fee of $1,000—over $7,000,000. Today there are presumed to be 20,000 places where drinks can be bought—and the city gets nothing.

"I don't think I exaggerate when I say there have been in the past over 7,000 spots in Chicago where handbooks were operated. Possibly one may still get a bet down. More taxes kicked out the window.

"Readers of your column, I believe, think of its conductor as a good sport, believing in fair play, and I think a word from you, in your column, especially at a time when the city needs the money, would awaken some of our lawmakers to the possibility of performing a civic duty by urging change in our law so that responsible bookmakers could, by paying a license, operate their calling and allow the city to collect some badly needed money.

"Of course, if people would quit playing the ponies except at the track, then this suggestion is out. Maybe they will—you know they quit drinking after Prohibition [?]"

To these views The Wake does not nod affirmation, although admitting their logic in many respects. Perhaps we are inconsistent, for we think light wines and beer would stifle bootlegging, another racket of graft, and produce needed federal and city income by taxation.

Now, one must admit racing cannot endure without speculation. It has been tried and invariably has failed. Yet one does not like to admit that betting is the sole purpose of racing. Discard, if skeptical, the hackneyed keynote "to improve the breed of thoroughbreds for cavalry remounts," contained in the preamble of so many thoroughbred association constitutions. Still, racing is a sport. There is genuine thrill in seeing a race between stake horses and their display of stamina and gameness in that dash down the home stretch.

Erection and maintenance of large racing plants, offering of stakes and purses to attract the best performers, involves heavy expense. That expense is met by gate admissions and by a percentage of the "handle" in states legalizing pari-mutuels. Take away that revenue and high grade tracks could not function.

Handbooks contribute nothing to racing or to the breeding industry as a business. They are parasites. It is turf history that cities with poolrooms and numerous handbooks are not good racing cities. There always have been handbooks. There probably always will be. If they were licensed, however, they would be made so attractive, in one way or another, as to attract many who might otherwise spend an afternoon in the open air at the track.

Now none of these arguments against handbooking sound especially convincing. They are ours—we ask no others to share them unless they wish. It just happens The Wake does not wager on races we do not see. We enjoy going out to pretty courses to see thoroughbreds run. When there it adds to our thrill to have down a $2 wager. We know in our heart that one can't "beat the races" any more than they can beat the stock market, the roulette wheel, or any game in which the percentage is constantly against you. So we regard our wagers as simply part of the expense of our enjoyment of a most fascinating sport.

Succeeds Henry; To Hold 1st Practice Tomorrow.

Columbia, Mo., May 21.—[Special.]—Frank Carideo, former Notre Dame quarter back and last year assistant coach at Purdue, today was named head football coach at Missouri university, succeeding Gwinn Henry, who resigned recently after nine years at Missouri.

Carideo was the unanimous choice of the athletic board and his appointment approved immediately by the executive board of the university today. Details of his contract were not revealed.

Spring practice will start Monday afternoon, said Carideo, who already has arrived here to take up his duties. "I am mighty happy with my appointment," he said.

Sleigh to Assist.

Carideo's appointment was announced through the office of President Walter Williams. His selection had been expected for a week, following his visit here to confer with Athletic Director C. L. Brewer. Elmer [Red] Sleigh, former Purdue tackle, who accompanied Carideo, will be appointed line coach and a Notre Dame man will be signed to coach the ends, Brewer intimated.

Carideo will be one of the youngest coaches in the country at a major institution. He is 24 years old and has been coaching only one year. He was quarter back on the last two teams directed by the late Knute Rockne and was an important factor in Notre Dame's nineteen consecutive victories during his last two years at the South Bend school.

He went to Purdue last fall where he coached the back field under Noble Kizer, another Notre Dame product. Purdue tied for the conference championship last year.

No Successor Yet.

Lafayette, Ind., May 21.—[Special.]—Word that Frank Carideo had signed as head fooball coach at the University of Missouri was received with considerable regret today, although it had been known for some time that Carideo was seriously considering the offer.

Carideo is under contract for another year at Purdue, but athletic authorities agreed to release him that he might accept the head coachship.

No indication was given today as to a possible successor for Carideo. Director of Athletics N. A. Kellogg and Head Coach Noble Kizer are in Chicago attending the Big Ten football schedule meetings.

Froebel Wins 5th Straight Track Title

Indianapolis, Ind., May 21.—[Special.]—Froebel High school of Gary set an all time record at the Butler university track here this afternoon by winning the Indiana High School Athletic association track and field meet for the fifth consecutive time. Prior to the present Froebel reign Kokomo won four times consecutively, and Manual Training High of Indianapolis had, prior to 1922, won eight times, but not consecutively.

A hot cross wind and an unusually dry and slow track kept down record breaking this afternoon. New marks were established in the 880 yard relay, pole vault, high jump, and broad jump. A record field of 1,591 boys competed in sectional eliminations last week.

Louisiana State Wins in Southern Conference Track

Atlanta, Ga., May 21.—[U. P.]—Louisiana State university won the Southern conference track and field meet here today with 38 points. Duke university, the runner up, had 27.

DERBY FIELD AT HALF WAY MARK AT MIDLOTHIAN

Bartholomew Holds Rail with 84-12-72.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

They're off in the twenty-eighth annual running of the Midlothian Country club's Derby, one of the oldest invitational golf tournaments in the country, and V. H. Bartholomew of Ridge is in front on the rail. Half the distance of the Derby was run yesterday and the stretch drive and finish will be consummated today.

Bartholomew was leading with a card of 84—12—72 at the end of yesterday's play. The Derby winner will be the player with the lowest net score for the 36 hole two day battle. Bartholomew also is a member of the foursome which captured the low net prize for the first 18 holes. His mates were G. Beckley and Frenk Parizek of the home club. They finished with a total of 312.

Howard [Shorty] Maguire of Flossmoor went around the course in 38—41—79 to win the low gross prize for the first 18 holes. He was pursued by a trio of 80 shooters including Percy Graham, Jimmy Garard, ex-captain of the Maroon golf team, and J. E. McMahon of Midlothian. McMahon and J. M. Timmins tied for second low net honors with 74.

The argument for the least number of putts prize ended in a four way tie among Col. Harry Foote of Evanston, and D. H. Devonald, C. J. Baker and Timmins, all of Midlothian, who took 31 shots on the greens.

BY OFFSIDE.

Two old rivals—Sparta and Olympia—will meet this afternoon in the finals for the Peter Peel challenge cup, Chicago's outstanding soccer award, at Olympia field, 19th street and Kilpatrick avenue. Proceeds of the game will be donated to the Injured Players' fund.

Sparta, winner of the National Professional Soccer league championship, has defeated Olympia several times during the season. Olympia reached the finals by defeating the Budas of Harvey, Ill., one of the strong amateur teams in the Chicago district.

The field of 800 probably was the largest which has competed in a Chicago district tournament this season.

Pursuing Finn for the gross prize were Charles Heilman, 80; John Jacobs, 80; F. G. Roberts, 84; W. F. Burch, 85, and Ralph Hoagland, 85. E. A. Froom and William Matthay tied for low net with respective cards of 86—13—73 and 85—8—73.

Other leading net scores included: Paul Blanchard, 85—11—74; Fred Hawkins, 90—14—76; E. A. Fredericksen, 88—12—76.

Johnny Dawson, one of the leading amateur golfers in the Chicago district, led a field of 163 players at the Glen Oak Country club yesterday by shooting a 73. The first club tournament of the season will be held next Saturday and Sunday.

William Rautenbush, a former star in Chicago District Golf association tournaments, tow-roped his field in the qualifying round of the Illinois Bell Telephone company's season play by shooting a score of 75—74—149 at Twin Eagles yesterday.

Rautenbush was ten strokes ahead of C. N. Call for the medal. Yesterday's play qualified 64 golfers for both A and B brackets in the match play which will begin June 5.

Mrs. Earl Dunnagan captured the Kickers' event in class A for women at Olympia Fields yesterday with a net score of 79. Mrs. Frank Kruse led class B with a 77, while Miss Nellie Hunt was the best in class C with 82. Thirty two registered for the event.

Olympia Fields golfers held their formal opening of the season yesterday and attracted 650 players aside from the women entered in the Kickers' event.

The best scores for No. 1 course were Dr. W. J. Siegler, 86—12—74; L. E. Carey, 88—14—74, and C. H. Smith, 82—5—77. Class B was headed by Ben Rockwell, 93—20—73; H. E. Dunning, 87—13—74, and R. E. Munro, 95—21—74.

West Point, N. Y., May 21.—(AP)—Winning first place in nine of fifteen events and making a clean sweep of three—the pole vault, discus, and broad jump, Army's track team overwhelmed Penn State, 91 to 44, today.

Hillberg and Epler were the winners' outstanding stars, each capturing two first places.

Pros, Amateurs to Play at Mission Hills Tomorrow

Who's Who in Women's Golf

By Betty Eckersall

JUNE BEEBE.

June Beebe, 19 year old golfer from the Olympia Fields Country club, is one of the youngest stars in the Chicago district. Her outstanding achievement was her victory in the Women's Western open golf tournament last season.

She has been playing golf since she was 14 years old, but under the rules could not enter tournament competition until she was 16. This did not keep her out of THE TRIBUNE'S driving contest for women which she won in 1927. She captured the Cook county title in 1929.

JUNE BEEBE.

Miss Beebe takes her school work as seriously as her golf. Last year she won a scholarship in the school of law at De Paul university. Because of sickness she was forced to drop out of school this year, but plans to resume her studies next fall.

She was recently chosen a member of the women's team which will represent the United States in an international match with Canada in Winnipeg June 22-24. This year she has a full schedule of competitive golf events. She will enter all of the major Chicago Women's District tournaments, the outstanding Western events, hopes to compete in the women's national championships in September at Salem, Mass.

"I guess my game is fair for so early in the season," she said yesterday. "I am still taking lessons from Al Bluhm, my uncle, and also from Jerry Grimm, the professional at the Olympia Fields Country club. I like the new ball 100 per cent and it really has improved my putting. And while my game is not steady, I am shooting down in the low eighties and high seventies."

NAPERVILLE HIGH RETAINS TITLE IN LITTLE 7 TRACK

Aurora, Ill., May 21.—[Special.]—Naperville High school today won the Little Seven conference track meet for the second year in succession, scoring 43 5-6 points to 23⅓ for Batavia, which was second. George Hazelwood of Batavia set a record of 119 feet ⅜ inch in winning the discus throw.

40 Compete in Motorcycle Hill Climbing Event Today

Loyola Academy Defeats Morgan Pk. in Track, 57-50

Loyola academy defeated Morgan Park Military academy's track team, 57 to 50, yesterday on the latter's field. McSheeley led the victors, while Dennis was the high point scorer for Morgan Park, winning the 220 and 440 yard runs and placing second in the 100 yard dash.

16 Places for Chicagoans in National Open

New York, May 21.—(AP)—Allotment of places for qualifying trials for the national open golf championship was announced today, with New York drawing the largest number, 24 of the 116 places for which 978 entrants will contest. Thirty-four players are exempt from qualifying.

The sectional trials will be contested the first week in June. The open will be played at Fresh Meadow Country club, Flushing, L. I., June 23, 24, 25.

Entries Fall Off.

The 1,012 entries for the 1932 event are 139 under last year, with most of the loss coming from central western and far western districts. Districts along the eastern seaboard generally showed an increase, New York having 203 entries this year as compared to 155 last. Washington, Boston, and Atlanta also showed an increase.

Chicago has the second largest number of entries, 134, and 16 qualifying places, but the Chicago entry list is 42 under that of 1931. There were comparable decreases at St. Louis, Minneapolis, Detroit, Dallas, San Francisco, Cleveland, and Pittsburgh.

Armour Is Exempt.

The 34 players exempt from qualifying include the two foreign stars, José Jurado of Argentina, and T. Miyamoto of Japan, Tommy Armour and the 30 low scores and ties in the 1931 national open. Armour was exempted so he might defend his British open title.

PETROLLE PURSE IS HELD UP BY LOUISVILLE SUIT

More than half of Billy Petrolle's purse which he was to receive for defeating Bat Battalino in a ten round bout Friday night at the Stadium was held up yesterday pending the result of a suit filed by the American Legion post of Louisville, Ky., against Jack Hurley, Duluth, Minn., manager of Petrolle. Petrolle was to receive more than $7,000, while the Louisville organization, which filed the suit in the Circuit court on May 19, claims $3,554.66.

Hurley, according to the Legion officials, was to have promoted a show on Derby eve, 1930, with Ray Alvis, Chicago, and was to have featured Primo Carnera and Bearcat Wright. The match fell through and Paul Swiderski and Mickey Walker were substituted. The promoters claimed they suffered a loss and filed a suit against Hurley a few days later.

"I had nothing to do with the show," said Hurley yesterday. "The American Legion says I was a partner of Alvis in the promotion of the fight, but I was not."

Princeton Track Team Beats Cornell, 84½-50½

Princeton, N. J., May 21.—(AP)—Princeton won the dual track and field meet with Cornell here this afternoon, 84½ to 50½, winning eight of the fifteen events. Two dual meet records fell. Mangan of Cornell captured the mile in 4:17.8, beating Munson's record of 4:24.4 established in 1905. Schoenfeld of Cornell broke Levy's record of 47 feet 4 inches in the shot put by winning the event with 47 feet 11 inches.

Roosevelt Captain Wins Fencing Championship

Capt. Billy Chiprin of Roosevelt High school team won the individual fencing championship of the Chicago Public High School league yesterday by scoring 24 points at Roosevelt's gymnasium. Harry Gillies of Senn was second with 21, while Raymond Hammond, also of Senn, was third with 19 points.

up the Iowa star was leading by five yards and Scheifley of Minnesota also had an advantage.

No Records Will Stand.

Last night the referee of the meet, Charles A. Rawson, said he did not believe any of the marks would stand even in the conference. It is certain applications for acceptance would not be considered by American or international committees. So the 1932 Big Ten games will be remembered only as the year of the big wind.

That same wind, which spurred the one way runners to victory, prevented all others from giving their best. Henry Brocksmith, two time champion yesterday, in the one and two mile races, as he was indoors, had real grievances. He might have set records, but even this superathlete, record for the two miles at the Drake relays, was virtually helpless against the wind in the back stretch. Brocksmith won the mile in 4 minutes 21 1-0 second and was 30 seconds over his best time in the two miles.

From all these synthetic performances, one Big Ten record was salvaged. Clarence Munn, Minnesota senior and defending champion in the 16 pound shot put, won this event with a record toss of 49 feet 5½ inches. Sammy Behr, former Wisconsin athlete, established the old mark of 49 feet 1½ inches two years ago.

It might have been expected that athletes competing in the other field events would have been favored, but strangely enough the javelin throw was the only event on which suspicion might have been cast. Here Robinson of Illinois sailed the spear 190 feet 3½ inches, his best mark by two feet in competition this year. However, Robinson alone had the wind combination, for second place went to Smith of Ohio State, at the same figure he established in the qualifying round Friday.

Brooks Flips in Jump.

Brooker Brooks of Michigan won the discus throw with 148 feet 1¼ inches, a mediocre showing. Frank Purma of Illinois, who a week ago broke the Big Ten record in triangular meet at Champaign, was second with 145 feet 9 inches. Gregory Kabat of Wisconsin, defending champion, finished third.

John [Whitey] Wonsowitz came through for Ohio State in the pole vault when he finally cleared 13 feet 3 inches for first place. Four others tied for second at 13 feet, well under their best previous efforts. They were Lennington of Illinois, Hess of Minnesota, Okerlin of Iowa, and Beecher of Indiana. Beecher won the indoor title with a vault 8 inches better than his mark yesterday.

John Brooks of Chicago, the second of the pair of title winning Negroes, won the broad jump with 25 feet, perilously near the Big Ten record which Dehart Hubbard of Michigan established in 1925 at 25 feet 3½ inches.

Four Hoosiers Crowned.

Ohio State and Indiana tied with four individual championships. Bennett, with two sprint titles, and Wonsowitz and Keller were Ohio's winners. The outstanding feature of Bennett's events other than the fast time was that the same four men placed in the same order behind the Buckeye in both events. Hellmich of Illinois finished second on both occasions with Fazekas of Ohio, Renwick of Michigan, and Thompton of Minnesota in that order.

Indiana's titles were contributed by Brocksmith, Charles Hornboestel in the half mile, and Noble Biddinger, winner of the hammer throw.

500 Mile Dawn to Dusk Circle Trip.

Here's a dawn to dusk trip for the hardier motorists who have watched the sun rise on the open road at the beginning of a highway holiday.

At the first trace of daylight, one day last week, THE TRIBUNE roadster slipped through the deserted streets of Chicago and was rolling with open throttle on the Northwest highway when a red globe rose through the purple haze on the eastern horizon. Woods and meadows sparkled with dew. Birds sang. The air was brisk and fresh.

The Northwestern highway, Ill. 19, was followed through a land of lakes, golf courses and country estates, through Barrington and Woodstock to Harvard and thence Ill. 23, Wis. 36, and Wis. 89, around the western end of the Delavan and Geneva lakes, to reach Janesville on Wis. 20.

In Southern Wisconsin.

A new picture, like a Corot, of fresh green meadows and trees with young green leaves, was presented at every turn of the road in this gently rolling farm country of southern Wisconsin. Contented livestock grazed near large barns and silos. There were few billboards to mar the views; these farmers are proud of the appearance of their properties.

At Janesville, a small industrial city on the scenic Rock river, Wis. 13 markers were picked up and followed through more rich agricultural country to Madison, 147 miles from Chicago. Wisconsin, with its popular lake resorts, appropriately has a capital sandwiched between two of its prettiest lakes. The state house is a majestic and modern building, rated by architects as one of the most beautiful structures in America. The state university, also in the city, has a well landscaped campus.

50 Miles of Smooth Gravel.

The sun was still low when THE TRIBUNE roadster headed westward from Madison over U. S. 18. Country ham, eggs and coffee were relished in a small town 209 miles from Chicago at 9:30 a. m.

On U. S. 18, there were fifty or sixty miles of broad and smooth gravel. Many Chicago boulevard drivers wouldn't care for this stretch because in passing the occasional automobile there is a few seconds of dust. It might also be well to mention, for the benefit of those who never leave the pavements, that gravel does not furnish as much traction as concrete, so that in turning and braking special care must be exercised.

About 240 miles from Chicago, the road rescends a cañon green with foliage to cross the Wisconsin river just above its confluence with the Mississippi. From the bridge, the waters of the Wisconsin are deep, clean and rapid, flowing between wooded bluffs.

New Toll Bridge.

Here at the junction of these rivers, where Jacques Marquette and Louis Joliet discovered the Father of Waters in 1673, is the town of Prairie du Chien, population less than 4,000, an important fur trading post in the last of the eighteenth century and an important military post in the Indian wars early in the ninteenth century.

From the elevation of a new bridge over the Mississippi may be seen the numerous islands and wooded swamps where various tribes battled with each other when not fighting whites during Black Hawk's time. The toll on the bridge is 90 cents for car and driver and 10 cents for each additional passenger. The span, costing $1,000,000, was opened to traffic three months ago. Formal dedication is scheduled for next month.

On the western side of the river, Ia. 13 and U. S. 18 are on a pavement at the foot of a rock precipice, near the water, for a couple of miles, passing through McGregor, and then rise through hills westward for nine miles to pick up U. S. 55 for a drive south by east to Dubuque, 62 miles, about 15 of them first class gravel and the rest concrete.

The hills are large, the grades and curves long and gentle. For miles, the pavement follows a ridge, offering broad vistas reminiscent of driving in New Mexico and Arizona except that the color scheme is the green of grass and trees and the dark brown of freshly turned soil rather than the yellows and reds of sun burned and mineral stained rocks and sand. Incidentally, Iowa marks the center of its pavements with two lines about a foot apart, rather than with one line, seemingly giving greater clearance between passing machines.

Back Into Illinois.

There's a scenic return to the Mississippi at Guttenberg, dropping from the bluff banks to the river valley, and then an ascend to the hills again for the rest of the trip to Dubuque. Here U. S. 20, the Lake street highway, was picked up by THE TRIBUNE roadster and followed across the bridge into Illinois, into the highest hills of the state.

Tucked among these hills, 163 miles from Chicago, is Galena, a small town that was one of the most important commercial centers of Illinois in 1845. It was from this town that Ulysses S. Grant, a clerk in his brother's store, went to Springfield to join the colors at the outbreak of the civil war. His home is open to visitors.

A little farther east on the Lake street highway is an unmarked dirt road that leads five miles north to the Apple River cañon. It's the third crossroads west of Stockton.

Apple River Cañon.

At the end of the five miles of dirt is a single lane plunge in second gear over rocks and then over a wooden bridge of doubtful strength to a pasture nearly surrounded by a bend in the stream. Cliff swallows flit from homes in overhanging walls of rock. Water splashes over rocks. Delicate flowers grow in the shade of hard wood trees. It's quiet—or at least it was on this week day visit.

Back to Chicago over the Lake street highway, the pavement twisted and turned on its obsolete alignment, through Freeport and Rockford to reach a forty foot pavement at Elgin. Chicago was entered at 7:30 p. m., just as the sun was setting. The mileage on the speedometer registered 509, not an excessive distance for a day's trip in one of the new automobiles for a motorist who likes to drive.

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

ABANDONED CARS.

Chicago, May 10.—There is a lot of discussion regarding overnight parking and insurance rates. The man who pays garage rent naturally feels that he should not be penalized by higher insurance rates because of the man who parks in the streets every night. [He probably gets cheaper garage rent for that reason, however.]

But what about the obviously stolen and abandoned cars on our streets, and those flagrantly violating other laws that endanger both motorists and pedestrians?

For many months a coach with Indiana license 703577, 1931, has been parked in front of 4805 Lake Park avenue, quite obviously abandoned, and, it is reasonable to suppose, stolen. Over two months ago I saw a policeman looking it over. He remarked that it was another stolen car. But it is still there, on the same street and within a few blocks of a police station, taking up space and deteriorating, while some owner or insurance company wonders why the police don't find it.

In front of 4340 Lake Park avenue there is a coupe that has been parked every morning at 8 o'clock [sometimes between "No Parking" signs] for over a month to my personal knowledge without either license plates or vehicle sticker. It is nearly always gone later in the day, so it is apparently being operated unmolested on our streets with no means of identification, a potential hit and run car menacing both motorists and pedestrians.

A walk through our streets almost anywhere reveals frequent cases of this kind and innumerable cars without 1932 license plates or vehicle tax stickers. At night cars drive everywhere without lights, or with only one head light. Also without tail lights or stop lights.

Every one knows it, except, apparently, the police. Judges, and even the mayor, break into print about accidents caused by defective lights, but nothing seems to be done about it. The newspapers are full of threats about 1931 license plates, but they are as thick as robins in the spring.

R. G. C.

MAIL TRUCKS.

Chicago, May 18.—Why all this fuss about the mail trucks not paying any city or auto taxes? I agree with the Chicago Motor club that these government chauffeurs have a lot to learn about courtesy, but the club is barking at a shadow when it protests against the motoring public having to pay for the pavements used by the mail carriers.

If the Chicago Motor club were really interested in public finance, it would raise its voice against the millions spent by the government for roads that are not needed and for roads that are not used by those who pay the bulk of the federal tax. A recent TRIBUNE editorial took the proper stand on this subject.

JOHN B. BROADWELL.

SLOW DRIVERS.

Evanston, Ill., May 16.—I was glad to see you take a rap at these slow Sunday drivers. They are the biggest menace on the highway today. They don't know it, but they are guilty of greater recklessness than the speed demons who insist upon being in front, no matter how rapidly traffic is moving.

In heavy traffic the usual accident is a collision between the passing car and the car overtaken. It's a bump between the right rear wheel of the fellow who is passing and the left front wheel of the fellow being passed. The usual result is that the slower machine goes to the ditch.

J. L. N. EVANS.

CARS ON SIDEWALKS.

Chicago, May 18.—Can you tell us by what right—or drag—can car dealers put their automobiles on the sidewalk, taking up two-thirds of the sidewalk? Isn't it enough that we have to dodge cars on the street? It takes away the only space in the block that the small children have, and boys and girls on roller skates and kiddy cars. Why don't dealers keep their cars in rented space?

Woods and Waters

By Bob Becker

Many queer looking contrivances, decorated with all kinds of flashing spoons, hooks, spinners, and gay colored feathers or deer hair, will be seen on Wisconsin lakes next Wednesday, for that day is the opening of the 1932 muskellunge season, and many varieties of lures are scheduled to get a good workout. Wisconsin fishermen not only can go after muskies, but also northern pike and pickerel at that time.

If there is any one fish that intrigues the average bait caster, it is the mighty 'lunge. Although some anglers have tried to debunk a lot of the lore and the legends that surround this big game fish, the muskie continues to be one of the most sought after fresh water species on the continent.

Year after year fishermen make long trips, work day after day casting or trolling big lures, and spend no end of money in order to tie into a 30 or 40 pound specimen. Right now the thought that a 56 pound muskie is the champion fish of the country is enough to send thousands of enthusiastic bait casters into conferences to figure where and how this fish can be beaten.

Some idea of the halo that has been placed around the head of the muskellunge [especially the northern Wisconsin muskie of the St. Lawrence variety] is found in the list of "pet" names given this fish. When fishermen are inclined to call it a "waterwolf" or "tiger," then one can understand how the savage, killing disposition of the muskie is regarded and how the stories about extra large and pugnacious specimens have been passed along.

On fairly light tackle the muskie is a formidable opponent. In recent years, however, there has been a growing tendency to use a small rope for a line and then troll, in the hopes of getting a big one, instead of sticking to sporty tackle and casting. It is simply a question of how badly the fisherman wants his fish and how quickly he wishes to finish the fight.

Although the state of Michigan has comparatively few muskie lakes, due to the fact that nature didn't give Michigan a very good break in the distribution of the 'lunge, the well spotted St. Lawrence muskellunge is found on the east side of Lake Michigan. This is interesting, because the Wisconsin form is the northern or so-called unspotted muskie, a different species. Michigan permits muskie fishing on May 1 in pike lakes, but in other lakes the muskie business does not start until June 25. Spoons and bucktails, large single spoon and hook combinations, and plugs with spinners are among the popular lures which fishermen use to get these two species.

High Speed Expected, as Only 40 Can Qualify.

BY HAL FOUST.

Qualifying trials were to start this week-end for the annual 500 mile Indianapolis automobile race on Memorial day, a week from tomorrow. A field of seventy-two entrants will be reduced to the forty fastest when the starter waves the flag for the motor classic.

The entrants this year include an unusual array of stock and semi-stock models as distinguished from the specially built racers.

The entry list, 72 cars, breaks all records, despite the stiffening of restrictions. The entrance fee this year was raised from $100 to $200. The minimum qualifying speed has been increased from 90 to 100 miles per hour.

Studebaker is in the field with a five car team, the largest since the war. The cars have been in the experimental stage throughout the winter and the first of the new cars made its appearance at the track early in April. Early in May it was returned to the bricks and put through a 660 mile run, a mileage much greater than the regular race. Several pit stops were made for adjustments and its actual running time showed an average of better than 102 miles per hour for the distance, although it was apparently being run under wraps. Pete De Paolo's record for the 500 miles, made in winning in 1925, still stands at 101.13 miles an hour.

Two Hudson Speedsters.

Buddy Marr gave a Hudson motor a thorough test last year when Chester Miller drove his semi-stock job into tenth place and money. This year, flying the Hudson banner, he is back with two spanking new speed creations that are pleasing to the eye and apparently very quick.

Russell Snowberger, who led the way back to the semi-stock cars when he took advantage of the lifting of the piston displacement limits two years ago and placed with a rebuilt motor which cost him approximately $1,500, is behind the wheel of a new Hupp Comet. Snowberger laughed at the expensive cars for two years with his second hand Studebaker motor, and knows about all there is to know about converting stock jobs into fast speedsters.

There are at least four other jobs, powered with semi-stock motors but racing under nom de plumes, which will assist in the standard car challenge.

But with so many sturdy popular make cars in the field, there will be no lack of rip-roaring, fast-stepping, expensive special mounts. The Millers and the Duesenbergs, aristocrats of the speedway, will offer their usual dizzy speeding.

Harry Hartz Now Owner.

Harry Hartz, who retired from racing after hanging up a record of consistency in the Hoosier event, will be back again as a car owner with a pair of new racers. The first will be practically a new car for Billy Arnold, 1930 winner and race leader at the 400 mile post last year before he crashed through the retaining wall in the northwest turn.

Louis Schneider, last year's winner, will be back with an improved job hoping to duplicate Tommy Milton's record of two wins. Louis Meyer, 1928 winner, will have a 16 cylinder car in the competition. Leon Duray, the heavy-footed giant who drove the fastest lap ever turned at the Speedway, 124.18 miles per hour, brought one of the fastest cars of his experience to the track last year, a 16 cylinder, two cycle job that was too speedy for its own good. It buried itself shortly after the start when its oiling system went out. Duray's job this year is equally as fast, he says, and with improved lubrication he will be fighting for the post position.

55 Eight Cylinder Cars.

Eight cylinder jobs, as usual, predominate. There are 55 cars with eight cylinder motors; 10 with fours; four with sixteens and two with sixes. Seven front wheel drives are entered.

The trio of four wheel drives have been entered by the Four Wheel Drive Automobile company, Coleman Motors corporation and by Harry Miller, the old master. Miller has closely guarded the secrets of his new creation and the racing world will watch his performance with interest.

A group of new four cylinder Millers have been going hot on the west coast during the winter and their owners believe that they will make a satisfactory showing on May 30. Egbert "Babe" Stapp, Ernie Triplett and William "Shorty" Cantlon have a trio of four cylinders entered. This trio of drivers were outstanding in the winter contests.

Moore in Pole Position

Indianapolis, Ind., May 21.—[Special.]—Lou Moore, Los Angeles, nosed out Billy Arnold, Chicago, for pole position in the Memorial day 500 mile automobile race today when he drove four laps at an average speed of 117.363 miles per hour. Earlier in the day Arnold had taken the lead with 116.290 miles an hour, one-fifth of a mile better than last year's qualifying time.

Twenty-one of the field of 72 qualified within the 100 miles an hour requirement today. Elimination tests will continue through next Saturday.

Arnold, who won in 1930, required an elapsed time of 5:09.57 for ten miles. His last lap was his fastest, averaging 116.686 miles an hour. Moore turned his last lap at better than 118 miles an hour.

Bryan Saulpaugh, Rock Island, Ill., after a bad spin on his first trial, qualified with 114.369 miles an hour.

The Tribune's 1932 Chicagoland map has a complete place finding system, with indices to 677 towns, 305 lakes, 46 forest preserves, 47 airports, 24 points of historical interest, and 301 golf courses adjacent to Chicago. The map is now on sale at Chicago Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn; Tribune Tower lobby, and 1101 East 63d street.

TAX REVOLT CAUSES SOME CUTS IN RATES

Benefit Felt in Both East and West.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

Nation-wide uprisings against high taxes and high governmental costs are producing some results, reports received from all parts of the country indicate. Local politicians in their campaign speeches are taking up the cry of the taxpayers for economy. In many cities and towns officials are actively engaged in paring down expenses.

If the present widespread outcry for tax relief is to bring forth any real fruits, however, in the way of governmental economy, there must be no letup in the taxpayers' demands on their public servants. That is the advice of the leaders in the tax campaign. "The only way to curb public expenditures is through the maintenance of relentless pressure," one authority writes.

Newark Offers Example.

Newark, N. J., where the chamber of commerce has been waging a fight against confiscatory taxation, provides one example of what can be done. The following is gleaned from a recent report on the activities of the organization:

"The storm of protest which was engendered by the presentation of facts concerning the cost of county and municipal government resulted in an 18 point reduction in the 1932 tax rate—a saving of something in excess of $1,500,000 to the taxpayers of Newark."

Fred J. Paddock, mayor of Phoenix, Ariz., recently told citizens of his town that he has set a goal of $225,000 as the amount to be saved in city expenses during the coming year. He estimated that this would mean a reduction of between 22 and 25 cents in the tax rate. Robert L. [Bob] Stevens, who is seeking the Republican nomination for sheriff of Multnomah county, Ore., in which the city of Portland is located, is telling the citizens there that he will save them $100,000 annually, if elected, through elimination of duplicated services.

Offers Saving on Elections.

In Los Angeles, City Clerk Dominguez has submitted a plan to the council whereby he says the city can save $20,000 yearly on election expenses. Elsewhere in California 300 members of the Santa Barbara County Taxpayers' league at a meeting demanded the resignation of three members of the board of education for raising the salaries of teachers. The league also is demanding that the county board of supervisors effect economies in operation at once.

Across the continent in Middleton, Conn., a taxpayers' committee has been organized preparatory to the formation of a permanent organization. This committee proposes to make a full study of the tax situation in the city with a view of finding how to reduce expenditures and consequent lower taxes.

At a recent meeting of the Nevada Taxpayers' association it was disclosed that of the 17 counties in the state, 10 have reduced their tax rates for the current year as compared with last year. Elko county taxpayers, in the same state, will form an association of their own shortly to participate in the movement for lower taxes.

Blames Minnesota State Taxes.

Speaking in St. Paul recently, J. F. Reed, president of the Minnesota Taxpayers' association, told his audience that savings effected by villages, townships and school districts have been nullified because state taxes have been nearly doubled this year. "The tax rebellion has forced cuts in the local units of government," he said, "but state tax increases have prevented the taxpayers from benefiting."

A. C. Rees, secretary of the Utah Taxpayers' association, told a group of citizens in his state that taxes are growing more rapidly than the ability of citizens to pay. He traced the rising trend in schools, cities and counties. He warned that "less money must be spent by the government if it is not to go into bankruptcy, although resistance to economy will be made by those who are profiting by the present extravagance. Utah must balance its budget in every taxing unit."

In Portland, Ore., the Civic Economy league is carrying an advertisement in the local papers in which it endorses a number of candidates for the state legislature. The advertisement includes this paragraph: "The candidates submitted herewith have not been pledged to any special measures by us and are expected only to labor for sweeping reductions in the cost of government."

Ohio Governor Cites Burdens.

Back in Ohio, Gov. George White recently wrote an article on economy in government which sounds as if it might have been composed by the militant president of a crusading taxpayers' association.

"Throughout the nation the people are in rebellion against tax burdens and unnecessary governmental expenditures," says the governor. "In towns, cities and states they are clamoring for economy in administration of public affairs. Here and there in recent months we have witnessed vociferous demonstrations by militant citizens protesting against mounting costs and imposition of new taxes.

"As the national congress has grappled with its problems we have seen popular attention directed to budget balancing as the most important of all these problems.

"This public interest is an encouraging and helpful thing to the elected officer sincerely intent upon devising ways to save money; it is an ominous warning to those who have not sensed the need of economy, or have deferred curtailment in the mistaken idea that the taxpayers' demand merely reflects a passing whim."

Gov. White then tells how cost of government has risen, particularly in

How Income Falters While Racing Taxes

BY SCRUTATOR.

The tax on incomes has passed the point of diminishing return. Figures show this to be true, although it has not yet dawned upon the tax spenders.

If you want to get an idea of what is happening in the ring-around-a-rosy of lower income, higher taxes and then still lower income consider the steady falling off in dividend payments.

According to the best estimates available corporation dividend payments in the first four months of this year were about one-third lower than in the corresponding period of 1931.

What Tabulation Shows.

The New York Journal of Commerce publishes each month a figure showing aggregate dividend payments by railroads, industrial concerns, traction companies, banks and trust companies. According to this source such dividends in the period from Jan. 1 to April 30, 1932, totaled approximately one billion 41 million dollars, or about 335 million dollars less than were paid in the corresponding period of 1931 and 507 million dollars less than in the first four months of 1930.

And that is not all. The New York Journal of Commerce figures do not pretend to be all-inclusive. In previous years this publication's compilations have represented about a third of the nation's total dividend payments as shown by the treasury department's income tax records.

Thus, it seems reasonable to conclude that nearly one billion 200 million dollars in dividends that appeared in the incomes of taxpayers in the first four months of 1931 failed to appear in the first four months of 1932. It was dried up, gone, vanished into thin air.

As to Next Year.

You cannot multiply by three and estimate what the total decline for 1932 will be, because it probably will be more than that. Omissions and reductions of dividends continue and the total income from dividends dwindles accordingly. Next year the amount paid in dividends will be considerably below this year's figure.

This is significant, for as dividends run so run the incomes on which the treasury leans heaviest.

Experience has shown that the trend in dividend payments is usually about a year behind the trend in corporate profits. In 1929 corporation profits were high; in 1930 they were lower. But dividend payments were much higher in 1930 than they were in 1929.

Then when 1931, an exceedingly lean year, came along income taxes were not a heavy burden, because individuals were paying with their 1930 dividend money, which represented their share of 1929 winnings.

With the Ebbing Tide.

Now the tide is going the other way. According to a survey prepared by the National City Bank of New York—which shows the same trends as compilations by other agencies, but is somewhat more detailed—1,620 leading corporations, including railroads, utilities, insurance, finance and industrial companies, last year had aggregate net profits of only one billion 328 million dollars. This was a drop of 56 per cent from 1930 and 74 per cent from 1929.

This year there will be still less to pay dividends to be milked by the tax spenders. The National City bank in its current bulletin shows that 170 large industrial concerns which have reported results for the first quarter had an aggregate net income of less than 22 million dollars, compared with about 107 millions for the same group in the first quarter of 1931, a drop of 80 per cent.

The Threat of Taxes.

The downward trend in dividend payments soon will slice through another layer and cut deeply into interest payments, if the threat of confiscatory taxes persists. To date there has been no comparative tabulation of interest payments which excludes the misleading item of interest on public borrowings or which includes the important item of interest on real estate bonds and mortgages.

The federal deficit for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1932, six months ago, was estimated at $2,123,000,000. Now the nation learns that the guess was wrong and that the deficit will be 3 billions. The treasury's estimate for the 1933 fiscal year has already had to be revised upward.

In view of the trend of dividends and earnings it is logical to believe that the tax spenders' hopes of squeezing more money from incomes is based on similar miscalculations. It isn't there to be got.

CHICAGO BANK STOCK PRICES SAG FURTHER; TWO BREAK SHARPLY

Northern Trust and Harris Trust and Savings bank shares featured bank stock trading last week with a sharp sell off. The remaining issues showed easier tendencies. Northern Trust, which earlier in the week was in demand at 275, broke to a low of 238 bid, 245 asked; off 37 points for the week. Offerings of Harris Trust and Savings depressed the market to low and final quotations of 210 bid, 215 asked; off 28 points.

Continental Illinois Bank and Trust in a heavy trade established new low quotations of 75 bid, 77 asked; off 9. First National at the close of 151 bid, 154 asked, reflected a loss of 3 points for the week. Central Republic Bank and Trust was traded at lower levels and at the close was wanted at 56 with offerings at 58; off 3 points. Offerings of Peoples Trust and Savings at 50 failed to attract buyers.

In the miscellaneous group, prices were steady with few changes being recorded. Chicago Title and Trust, after being wanted earlier in the week at 134, eased to low sales of 131 and improved to the close at 133 bid, 136 asked, off 1 point. Chicago Daily News common was easier at 7 bid. The preferred was 1 point lower at 41 bid, 42 asked.

OUTWARD MOVEMENT OF GOLD CONTINUES; FRANCE TAKES MORE

New York, May 21.—(AP)—The outward movement of gold continued today with shipments of $2,605,900 to France. This export together with a $3,499,700 increase in earmark account resulted in a further loss of $6,105,600 in the country's monetary stock of metal.

Europe has already drawn down her balances here very substantially and bankers feel that exports from now on should be smaller, since it is necessary for foreign nations to maintain some funds here for commercial purposes.

A six point drop in Dutch guilders to 40.52c, which is the current outgoing gold level, featured foreign exchange trading today. Holland has been a large taker of our gold in recent weeks, but this reaction indicated that the movement might be coming to an end.

German marks sagged 4 points, but otherwise changes were narrow and irregular. Sterling cables eased ⅛ to $3.67¼, while French francs made a nominal gain to 3.94 13-16c, which is still above that currency's dollar gold point. Swiss francs and the belga were about unchanged.

TRANSFER THREE RAILROADS TO SOUTH. PACIFIC

Washington, D. C., May 21.—(AP)—The interstate commerce commission today issued an order formally transferring three railroads from the Illinois Central to the Southern Pacific system under the 1929 consolidation plan.

The order is an outgrowth of the acquisition of the St. Louis-Southwestern railway by the Southern Pacific. In the decision authorizing this acquisition the commission included a proviso that the Southern Pacific also agree to purchase the Paris and Mount Pleasant Railroad company and the Waco, Beaumont, Trinity and Sabine Railway company, both located in Texas.

The Southern Pacific has accepted all conditions of the plan for acquiring the St. Louis-Southwestern, and today's order was issued to clear the commission's records.

SEABOARD PUBLIC SERVICE CO. NOT IN RECEIVERSHIP

Seaboard Public Service company, part of the Middle West Utilities system, is not in receivership, as was erroneously reported yesterday. The company is a unit of Middle West's eastern group and a subsidiary of National Electric Power.

The receivers named Friday were for the Federal Public Service corporation, a utility holding concern with headquarters in Chicago. Its operating properties are located in Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota, and other states. The company is directly controlled by the Union Power company. Receivers named by the federal court in Delaware and Chicago are Perry O. Crawford, president of the company, and Clarence S. Sutherland of Wilmington.

RECEIVER SUIT RAPS OFFICIALS OF FOX THEATERS

Conspiracy to Divert Assets Alleged.

New York, May 21.—Charging a conspiracy to mulct the Fox Theaters Corporation of its assets, for the benefit chiefly of General Theaters Equipment Inc., Jacob L. Rubenstein has brought suit in the Supreme court against the two companies. He asks for a determination of the losses to the Fox Theaters corporation and appointment of a receiver for that company. This was disclosed today.

Rubenstein holds 10,000 shares of class A common stock of Fox Theaters corporation. He named also as defendants ten officers and directors of Fox Theaters. They include Winfield R. Sheehan, former associate of William Fox, and Harley L. Clarke, president of General Theaters Equipment, Inc., and until recently president of Fox Theaters. Clarke bought control of Fox Theaters and Fox Film corporation for the General Theaters Equipment, Inc., two years ago from William Fox, at a price said to be $18,000,000.

Motion Reveals Suit.

The suit, which had previously been served but not filed, was disclosed when a motion was made by the defendants to vacate a notice of examination before trial.

The answer of the defendants, while admitting some of the transactions referred to in the complaint, denied that there had been any misappropriation of assets or that the transactions in question were for the benefit of any one but the Fox Theaters corporation.

The complaint declared that General Theaters Equipment owned all the voting stock of Fox Theaters, and charged that the defendants had conspired among themselves and with General Theaters Equipment to defeat the best interests of Fox Theaters and to commit acts of waste, misappropriation and mismanagement. Rubenstein said he brought suit on behalf of himself and other stockholders and on behalf of the Fox Theaters corporation itself.

Basis of the Suit.

The defendants, the complaint declared, caused Fox Theaters to pay more than $1,500,000 in attorneys' fees for services rendered in part to General Theaters Equipment and its other affiliated companies. General Theaters Equipment secretly was allowed to receive profits and commissions on sums which were due to Fox Theaters from other companies, the complaint charged, and the defendants sold 1,600,000 shares of Fox Film class A stock owned by Fox Theaters below the actual market value when a greater price could have been obtained.

Through the interrelation of the two companuies and the fact that Clarke was president of both, the assets of Fox Theaters were manipulated and transferred to General Theaters Equipment and affiliated companies, the complaint charged. The relations between the two companies, he also alleges, were kept deliberately secret so as to permit the wrongful diversion of assets and to enable General Theaters Equipment to "dress up" its financial statements. Other charges were that Fox Theaters bought equipment from the parent company without the usual allowance for old material, that directors received excessive sums, and that adequate financial reports were not furnished.

Receiver for United Stores Realty.

Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey today appointed the Irving Trust company as receiver in bankruptcy for the United Stores Realty corporation, a real estate operating subsidiary of the United Cigar Stores Company of America.

The naming of a receiver followed a voluntary petition. Schedules filed listed liabilities at $8,116,589, including $7,900,000 owed to United Cigar Stores company for advances, and assets at $1,543,625.

Asks Receiver for Republic Gas.

Wilmington, Del., May 21.—(AP)—Application for the appointment of a receiver for the Republic Gas corporation of Chicago was filed in Chancery court today by Doris L. Charing of New York, a bondholder. The bill states that as of Jan. 8 there was $4,333,356 past due on current and accrued liabilities.

It was stated in the bill that the company is not insolvent in the bankruptcy sense but is seriously handicapped by inability to obtain sufficient capital to operate its business profitably and by the loss of earnings and decrease in demand for its products.

April California Crude Production Shows Gain

The daily average crude oil production in California for April was 517,481 brls, compared with 502,449 brls in March, according to the American Petroleum institute.

SENATE GETS BILL FOR FEDERAL GUARANTEE OF BANK DEPOSITS

Washington, D. C., May 21.—(AP)—Federal guarantee of deposits in state and national banks was called for today in a bill introduced by Senator Fletcher [Dem., Fla.] providing for a guarantee fund of $367,000,000.

Supervision of the guaranty fund, which would go into effect July 1, 1933, would rest with a board of five members, four to be appointed by the President and the fifth to be the controller of the currency. It calls for the fund to be supplied as follows: From the treasury, $167,000,000 [estimated] paid as franchise tax by Federal Reserve banks; from the Federal Reserve banks surplus, $100,000,000; a premium of 5 cents per $100 deposits from the depositors, estimated to yield $100,000,000.

A similar measure has been introduced in the house and probably will be taken up next week for a vote.

Bank Failures Less Numerous.

New York, May 21.—Bank suspensions during the last week numbered 12 compared with 15 in the previous week, according to the "American Banker." Three banks reopened during the period. Total suspensions for the year are now 653 affecting deposit liabilities of approximately $287,255,000.

STOCK VALUES VARY LITTLE IN WEEK'S TRADING

The decline in speculative activity in the security markets last week was reflected in the extremely narrow price range in which shares on the Chicago exchange fluctuated. The actual net change in the quoted market value of 30 representative stocks was the smallest in several weeks.

During the week the market value of the 30 representative depreciated $1,890,212 or less than one-half of one per cent of the total market value. The change was negligible compared with the declines recorded in recent weeks.

A compilation, made by Paul H. Davis & Co., shows the 30 issues had total market value of $416,059,422 at the close yesterday. This compares with $417,949,634 at the end of the preceding week. The same 30 stocks had a quoted value at this time last year of $1,428,254,150. This means a depreciation during the last twelve months of $1,012,194,728 or nearly 71 per cent.

The week end session yesterday proved a repetition of the dull trade earlier in the week. Transactions amounted to 21,000 shares and prices showed only nominal changes. The leaders, Commonwealth Edison and the Swift issues, were slightly higher on a limited volume of sales.

The preferred stockholders committee of the Middle West Utilities company headed by C. F. Childs is understood to have secured the support of the large American and foreign holders of this issue.

R. C. A. Communications, Inc., Assets $13,809,861

New York, May 21.—The balance sheet of R. C. A. Communications, Inc., shows total assets of $13,809,861 at the end of 1931, against $14,852,367 the year before, according to Dow, Jones & Co. A reduction in surplus from $1,285,923 to $1,065,273 indicates that the company operated at a loss in 1931. Reserves of $274,245 at the end of 1930 did not appear the following year, and securities owned declined from $3,730,044 to $2,043,221. Cash was $459,279, against $459,703. The statement shows $12,277,011 capital stock, represented by 300,000 no par shares, for both years.

BANK CLEARINGS DECREASE AGAIN AT LEADING CITIES

Bank clearings show some further recession this week, the total at all leading cities in the United States, as reported to Dun's Review, of $4,451,305,000 being 48.4 per cent smaller than last year. At New York City, clearings were $2,910,404,000, a reduction of 51.7 per cent, while the total for the cities outside of New York of $1,540,901,000 was 40.5 per cent less.

The decline was mainly at New York City, where financial settlements are greatly reduced. Some of the larger eastern and western centers also show considerable losses. Furthermore, clearings this week were $131,552,000 below those of last week, whereas a year ago there was a gain of $650,147,000 over the preceding week.

URGES U. S. TAKE WAR DEBTS IN FUTURE GOODS

Du Pont Would Wait Favorable Time.

New York, May 21.—(AP)—The plan of two prominent American industrialists for solving the war debt problem, without reductions or cancellations, but by transfers of goods when needed, was made public today by Magnus W. Alexander, president of the national industrial conference board.

It is the plan of Irenee Du Pont, chairman of the finance committee of E. I. Du Pont De Nemours company, and George H. Houston, president of the Baldwin Locomotive works.

Those industrialists "start with the recognition of the fact that intergovernmental debts were incurred in abnormal times and that in normal times repayment cannot be made without dislocating the commerce among nations," Dr. Alexander said.

For Payment in Goods.

"The problem of transferring the sums from the debtor countries to the United States is the main, if not the only, difficulty. Since we do not wish at the present time to accept payment in commodities and since outright cancellation is not in the interest of the United States they [Du Pont and Houston] suggest that our government should not give up its claims, but should not call upon its debtors to discharge their obligations to use until the payment can be made in the form of goods and services.

"The money that the foreign countries borrowed from us was used to buy our goods, and the problem of transfer did not exist. At some time in the future the United States may be faced with a critical situation when it may urgently need the materials and services of our foreign debtors.

Easier to Pay Later.

"At such a time, payment on account of war debts could be made to us without creating the transfer problem. Our debtors would then be called upon to deliver to us such goods and services as we may require up to the amount that enabled them to buy in the United States with the help of our loans.

"In this manner the United States would not cancel or reduce its present claims, but it would recognize the impossibility or the undesirability of demanding payment now and would expect our foreign debtors to discharge their just obligations by sending us their goods at a time when we should be willing and glad to accept them."

The plan was presented by Dr. Alexander in a speech before the private annual meeting of the board last week, and was made public after industrialists attending the meeting suggested its release.

Dr. Alexander urged that "something definite must be done and done quickly" about war debts, since only a little more than a month intervenes before the end of the Hoover moratorium on June 30.

Interested in Coming Parley.

While the United States is not one of the creditors of Germany, it has a deep interest in the coming meeting of the Lausanne conference on June 16, because the United States receives about $23,000,000,000 of the total payment of $27,000,000,000 to be made by Germany to her creditors.

If the Lausanne conference should fail, Germany almost certainly will default on reparations obligations, Dr. Alexander said.

"Without receiving payment from Germany, many debtors of the United States would find it necessary to default on their debt payments to us. Such default would undermine the economic and financial structure of the world.

"It would imperil or destroy the credit of defaulting countries and might result in almost universal departure from the gold standard and even in default of payments on private foreign debts."

SCOTCH TRADING SHIP LEAVES WITH BUSINESS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTREAL, Que., May 21.—After serving for a week in Montreal as a floating exhibition ship of Scottish products, the SS. Letitia sailed away from Montreal today back to Scotland. It marked departure of the second inter-British empire trade argosy in the last six months, Canada having sent one to the British West Indies during the winter. The latest link in the new empire method of promoting trade was overwhelmingly successful. Forty thousand people visited the exhibition ship during the week. Hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of business was done.

Arkansas Bank Head Given Stay of Sentence

Little Rock, Ark., May 21.—(AP)—A thirty day stay of sentence by order of Gov. Parnell was granted A. B. Banks, former head of an Arkansas banking chain and a group of insurance companies, as he was about to begin a year's prison term today for the acceptance of deposits in an insolvent bank. The governor issued the stay in order to give the former financier time to wind up his business affairs and make provisions for his family.

Lumber Orders Third Less Than Same Time Last Year

Though lumber orders for the week ended May 14 exceeded production by approximately 13 per cent, they were more than a third below the volume of new business received during the same period a year ago. Shipments for the week exceeded the cut by 13 per cent.

NEW YORK OIL DEALERS FOLLOW GASOLINE CUT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 21.—All the leading marketers in the metropolitan area of New York today met the cut of 4 cents a gallon in the service station prices of gasoline as announced late Friday by the Standard Oil Company of New York, Inc., a subsidiary of the Socony-Vacuum corporation.

The new prices of 9½ cents a gallon at service stations, exclusive of the state tax of 3 cents, is the lowest at which the largest marketers have sold their regular brands of gasoline since the world war.

The companies that have met the new price schedule in the metropolitan area include the Texas company, the Colonial Beacon company, a subsidiary of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey; Shell Eastern Petroleum corporation, a subsidiary of the Shell Union Oil corporation; the Richfield Oil company of New York, and the Warner-Quinlan company.

Although the officials of the Standard Oil Company of New York refused to make any comment on the reductions, it is understood that the price cutting by independent service stations was largely responsible for the reduction.

ASKS RECEIVER FOR MAY-MALONE JEWELRY FIRM

Equity receivership proceedings were instituted in the United States District court yesterday against May and Malone, 37 South Wabash avenue, wholesale and retail jewelers. The petition was filed by the law firm of Goldman, Allshouse and Healy on behalf of Goudvis Brothers of New York City, having a claim of $4,308. The petition states the liabilities are approximately $350,000 and the assets, if sold at a fair valuation, would bring $400,000.

An involuntary bankruptcy petition was filed against the World Battery company, 1241 South Michigan avenue, operators of a broadcasting station at 1250 South Michigan avenue. The bill was filed by Attorney Maurice Kamenear on behalf of the Metals Refining company and two other creditors with total claims of $7,000.

New York, May 21.—Thanks to an utter lack of public interest in its doings, the share market was able to maintain an even keel in today's curtailed operations, for not in many months has business come so near to a complete standstill.

Only 302,470 shares changed hands in the whole two hours. A week ago today the turnover amounted to 600,010 and brokers thought that pretty small shakes even though they had seen the ticker toil to a no more brilliant end through numerous other Saturdays since the stalemate began.

Feature Hard to Find.

It would take the proverbial Philadelphia lawyer to find a real feature in today's listless give-and-take idlings. The oil shares threatened to get upset for a while in the early dealings over the so-called gasoline price war in the New York district, but thought better when it was realized that the competitive price slashing was a purely local affair and therefore not of a scope to greatly affect the earnings of the participating companies. The close therefore found the petroleums no worse off than the rank and file.

Some selling came into the market for American Telephone and Telegraph among other utilities in the first hour, but the group likewise rallied with sufficient vigor to record its quota of unimpressive plus signs in the final tables.

United States Steel was conspicuously firm and most of the other issues by which the trade is accustomed to judge market tone finished slightly above their previous closing levels.

Talk of further price reductions in theater price admissions reacted against the amusements to some degree for a short time, but Loews wound up showing a small gain and Fox managed to emerge unchanged.

Tobacco shares were inclined to sag. Statistics made public earlier in the week showing a sharp drop in cigaret output is weakening some of the friends of these issues away from them. Liggett & Myers lost nearly 4 points and the B stock dropped 1½.

Await Further Plans.

Overnight news was not significant and the street's attitude toward Washington, that of watchfully waiting for congress to do something or go home, remained unchanged. The opportunities popularly supposed to be confronting the so-called coalition committees now being formed to help the federal reserve put surplus credit to work came in for some discussion among the few frequenters of the board rooms, but inasmuch as no plan of operation has yet been suggested, commentators found it difficult to guess how the matter would have any effect on stock market affairs, for a time at least.

B. AND O.'S FIRST AIR CONDITIONED TRAIN IS READY

The first air conditioned long distance sleeping car train will be operated today by the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. The Capitol limited, equipped with the automatic regulating instruments, will make the run between Chicago and New York.

The system is much the same as that used in public buildings in theaters. Each car is a separate unit, sealed in order that air enters only through the filter of the conditioning system. The air is cleaned and washed and its temperature and humidity fixed automatically in the refrigerating and conditioning plant.

BETTER SIGNS OF BUSINESS RALLY APPEAR

Bradstreet's and Dun's Give Views.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 21.—Necessity buying apparently was the cause for the upturn in retail buying a week ago, according to the trade reviews of the current week. This now is reflected in spotty increases, while in many areas the upturn passed its peak. The upturn a week ago was temporary, according to the reviews, which find that it had little if any reflection in wholesale or manufacturing lines.

"The general state of trade is illustrated in the Boston wool market, Bradstreet's says in part, "where the price for Texas wool has reached the lowest level known in thirty-eight years.

Indianapolis Affairs Brighter.

"One bright spot is in the report from the Indianapolis district, which shows that the employment situation has been somewhat improved. This is materially aided by the fact that the Ford Motor company plant there has gone on full time and is working at capacity.

"This, though, is countered in the news from such cities as Louisville, showing that unemployment has become a distressing problem.

"Except in the citrus growing sections of California and Florida and in certain wheat sections, the crop reports are fairly hopeful. From Jacksonville comes the report that the quality of citrus fruits generally is somewhat below normal, and from Los Angeles it is disclosed that the shipments of lemons, oranges and grapefruit are lower than in previous years."

Upward Trend Observed.

Dun's review, in commenting on the condition of business, says that in spite of irregularities, with the margin of profit close and competition keen, an upward trend is becoming apparent in widely diversified commercial fields. The review reads in part:

"Deferred commitments have held inventories to such low levels that demand for replenishing and fill-in needs is gaining from week to week. In dry good and furnishings, sales have been running somewhat in excess of the decline represented by price recessions thus far this year.

"Women's apparel and accessories continue to make the best relative showing, but increased sales also are reported of sumer furniture and housefurnishings, sporting goods, luggage and vacationists' supplies. In fact, the advent of warmer weather has imparted vitality not only to the movement of most seasonal lines but has spread the buying interest to a number of staple lines.

"Retailers who have been holding promotions in various parts of the country report volume of goods sold exceeding expectations; in some instances, the results have surpassed any similar events in the last two years."

Real Estate Bonds.

There is no especial reason why the real estate bond issue on the big office or apartment building shouldn't have been set up on just as sound a basis as if it had been an individual mortgage, but in too many cases it wasn't.

In the first place, the manner in which real estate bonds were sold tempted the underwriter to load the property with more funded debt than it should have carried.

This was not hard to do. One had only to draw a little on one's optimism, let hope elevate the appraised valuation, and bank on future appreciation of real estate values.

The real estate bond buyer wasn't likely to check up on the appraisal. After all, the appraisal represented an opinion and any opinion can be supported by argument. The people who bought real estate bonds didn't look into the speculative features of the bond. It was the record of the underwriter rather than the quality of the bond that interested them.

Six per cent came to be regarded by many real estate bondholders as the normal conservative earning power of money. If a bond paid 6 per cent, was labeled a "real estate gold bond" and was offered by a house that boasted of so many years of business with never a loss to an investor, that was enough. Even construction loans on buildings not yet built were gobbled up.

Insurance companies and other conservative investors followed a different procedure. They first investigated the earning power of the property and established a fair value for it. And they didn't seek high yield.

The security feature was stressed in selling 6 per cent real estate bonds. But when such an issue gets into default the very provision which was supposed to be the bondholder's main protection—the foreclosure privilege—turns out to be his worst worry. He can foreclose, yes. But that is poor consolation when there are no buyers. And, furthermore, he can't act alone, for he is only one of a scattered multitude of holders. The business of getting all these people to act together costs money and opens the door to various rackets.

If the real estate bondholder had held preferred stock instead of bonds he would have been better off, provided, of course, no securities had been slipped in ahead of his preferred stock.

Not all real estate bond issues in default were improperly financed. The weaker ones went first. Better issues were sucked into the maelstrom when receivers began to slash rents on buildings having bonds in default.

his own state; how the tax situation has become the most pressing problem before the American people and then he asks this question:

"Shall we balance our budgets by taxing something new, or shall we try to keep our expenditures within the incomes we still have?

"Experience leads me to believe that the possibilities of the latter course have yet been only dimly explored. Bureaucratic government tends always to expand its functions, while a personnel enjoying permanent tenure frequently lacks most of the efficiency which private industry demands.

"Periodical, even continuous, checking is needed to secure the elimination of dead wood and of obsolescent functions. But this check is hard to get. An officer or employé who has been in a section or division very long generally comes to regard its methods and processes as the best obtainable. Scrutiny from the top or from the outside is usually necessary to obtain improvement."

Gov. White after telling how economies amounting to many millions were effected in his state says:

"Government is only an agency for spending people's money. It is given money to spend only because the people believe it can provide for them certain services better than they can provide those services for themselves. Every dollar it takes from their pockets leaves that much less for them to spend. There is no magic about public finance.

"For a decade, as a people, we mortgaged our future and the mortgage was foreclosed. The result was the depression. Sound economy is the only sure road to recovery. Most of us are having to practice it whether we want to or not. Government should be no exception to the rule."

Prepare Tax Conference.

Here in Chicago the Association of Commerce is busy with preparations for a nationwide tax conference which is to be held at the La Salle hotel on June 2 and 3. Last week it received many more pledges of support, either in pledges to have representatives at the meetings or through proxies.

The Illinois Manufacturers' association, which has been waging a campaign among industrial interests throughout the country to win support for its anti-high tax movement, continues to receive encouragement. A letter received from W. C. Francis of the Manufacturers and Merchants' association of Oregon is typical. After telling about the efforts to organize the 36 counties of the state to fight high taxes, he says:

"We believe that the only way business can be revived, prosperity be returned, and unemployment be reduced is for the business and industrial elements of the community to take more interest in their local politics."

LONDON STOCKS STEADY UNDER PROFIT TAKING

Yankees Reported Buying British Bonds.

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, May 21.—There are signs that the boomlet in the gilt-edged market is waning.

Considerable fluctuation has taken place in government securities. With any sharp advances, profit takers now immediately step in, taking advantage of higher levels. In the majority of cases early improvements are lost.

Renewed foreign buying—substantial amounts are reported for American interests—shot the 4 per cent funding loan to well over par this week, but local profit takers were immediately busy.

Offer Less on Deposits.

Following the recent reduction of the bank rate joint stock banks now are offering only ½ per cent on deposits which has naturally tended to drive funds into the gilt-edged and higher yielding securities. But unless there is a world revival of trade the rise in gilt-edged can proceed only for a limited period and as long as the phase lasts there will be a tendency for activity to broaden in all classes of fixed interest bearing securities with a wide margin to cover.

Recently the Indian and Australian loans, whose economic prospects look rosier and are talked of in better light, have risen considerably. The front rank industrial and electricity prior charges have been marked up, but still are mostly cheaper than the gilt-edged stocks at the present levels.

Bank and insurance shares are becoming increasingly popular. It is argued that those concerns are substantial holders of gilt-edged stocks. In most cases their dividends are assured at current levels. Public utility equities also have begun to benefit from cheap money.

Britain Buying More Gold.

England's recent gold purchases have excited much interest in the bullion market. Nearly $15,000,000 of bar gold has been added to the bullion held against the note issues. The reserves of the central institution has fallen unduly low in recent weeks and the ratio is now only 31.1 per cent against 56.4 per cent a year ago. This presumably is one reason for the acquisition of gold.

It can be only a matter of conjecture as to where the gold is to come from, but it is believed it will be drawn either directly or indirectly from accumulations of South African or Indian gold in this country. Also it is obvious that the operation is connected with the establishment of new exchange equalization accounts and probably is only the first of a series of similar operations.

Change in the security item of this week's Bank of England return also indicates that assets held in the gold standard countries may have been exchanged for bullion. The bank recently acquired considerable holdings in foreign currencies which are liable to fluctuate.

By mixing these assets with gold the bank may be following a prudent course.

Foreign Bonds Weak.

General depression was characterized in the foreign bond market this week with continental political and financial conference uncertainties again causing uneasiness. The approaching Lausanne conference brought selling of the German loans. Austrian sterling loans also were marked down sharply on fears that a moratorium will be necessary, although the latest advices from Geneva intimate that interest on the external debt due June 1 will be duly met. Weakness spread sympathetically to Czech, Hungarian, Polish, and Rumanian issues. Argentine loans rallied and Brazil and San Paulo issues received more speculative support.

PARIS MART WEAK

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, May 21.—After a three days' Whitsuntide holiday the Paris bourse was feeble this week. Speculation was discouraged by political uncertainty which will continue until a new government is formed. An interview between Edouard Herriot, leader of the majority group, and President Albert Lebrun encouraging hopes of a union cabinet brought some activity to the market, which grew steadier Thursday but dropped off again Friday.

The dollar slipped a bit again at the opening, then improved, remaining firm in the immediate vicinity of the gold point. Repatriation of French gold from America continues, but there was little trading in dollars and practically no speculation on the market here. Sterling rose slightly.

Insurance companies are feeling the political uncertainty particularly acutely since one of the minimum demands of the Socialists, if they are to collaborate with the radicals, is the nationalization of insurance companies along with railroads.

The $120,000,000 issue of treasury bonds already is oversubscribed and financial circles generally approve of the government's action although deploring the treasury situation which necessitated it. Oversubscription of the bonds was without significance, as it was issued only in cuts of $20,000 as investments for private banks.

CROP DAMAGE REPORTS HELP PRICE OF WHEAT

Felt Most West of the Missouri.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Bullish sentiment is on the ascendancy in wheat. Crop damage reports from both east and west of the Missouri river are increasing in severity and attracting more attention as traders see the prospect of the coming private and government returns suggesting a smaller yield than the 440,000,000 bu forecasted on May 1.

In addition to the crop damage reports, the prospects of the so-called relief measures now being discussed at Washington are regarded by some interests as likely to result in material inflation in the currency which may be reflected in a higher level of commodity prices.

There was scattered selling of wheat early Saturday due to unresponsive cables from Liverpool and easiness in stocks, but the July ran into support around 58¼, which checked the decline ½c under Friday's finish. Later there was an increase in outside and professional buying, and pit observers said they saw evidence of short covering for a leading local professional.

A noticeable lack of pressure was apparent when the wheat market started upward and prices advanced around 1½c from the early low, with the July touching 59⅝c on the bulge, a new high for the week and the best figure since April 27. The finish was at the top with net gains of ⅞@1⅛c, with May 58⅝c; old July, 59⅝@59¾c; old September, 62½@61⅝c; December, 64⅝c.

Heavy Damage in Kansas.

Crop Expert George M. Le Count, who is out for Stein, Alstrin & Co., in a report covering part of Kansas wired that there was heavy damage from Hessian fly and many wheat fields were being plowed. A representative of a Kansas mill who covered the state estimated the yield at around 60,000,000 bu, or 25 per cent of the 1931 harvest. However, the prospective damage east of the Missouri river due to fly and the effect of the March freeze is now taking the place of the loss west of the Missouri as a market influence, as the former area has heretofore been reporting favorable conditions.

No rain of consequence fell over the winter wheat belt up to the time the market closed, and the forecast indicated Kansas would remain dry over the week-end. Winnipeg failed to follow the upturn in Chicago and closed ½c higher, with July at 64⅝c in Canadian funds. The latter were around 12⅝ per cent discount. Liverpool was ⅛@⅝c lower for the day due to a slow demand for cash wheat. Buenos Aires closed ¼@⅝c lower, with July at 49⅝c.

Export Demand Slow.

Kansas City wheat made a better response to the bullish crop comments from the southwest than did the local market and the July delivery there went to 5c under Chicago, the smallest difference on the crop. There were sales of around 400,000 bu cash wheat to mills in the southwest yesterday. The foreign demand was slow, with sales of 400,000 bu in all positions, including 100,000 bu hard winter. The trade paid little attention to a report Greece had been offered nearly 10,000,000 bu wheat, half of which was to be paid for in cash and the other half in tobacco.

Trade in corn was light, but the strength in wheat could not be ignored, and the close was ¼@⅝c higher, with May, 31c; July, 33¼@33⅝c; September, 35½c, and December, 35⅝c. Country offerings to arrive were not large and the shipping demand was slow.

Oats were unsettled, a selling movement developing in the May in the last few minutes of trading and the nearby future closed ⅛c lower at 22⅝c. Other months were ⅛c lower to ⅛c higher, with July and September at 22⅝c, and December at 24⅝c.

Rye sympathized with wheat and gained ½@⅝c for the day. May was 38⅝c; July, 41c; September, 41⅝c, and December, 44c at the last.

COTTON PRICES IRREGULAR

First prices in American markets were generally lower, being 2 to 4 points off at Chicago, followed by further declines. New York and New Orleans closed slightly net lower an hour earlier than the Chicago market. The latter firmed before the finish, which was irregular from 2 points net higher to 4 points net lower, the latter on March. Liverpool was closed. Further precipitation is forecast for the belt generally, which is not particularly needed. Hester estimates a decline of almost 20,000 bales in the into sight movement for the week. He predicts 71,810 bales, compared with 70,516 bales a year ago. For the season to date into sight movement aggregates 15,100,244 bales, compared with 13,677,796 bales a year ago. Spot sales in ten southern markets declined the last week, being 19,098 bales, against 28,817 bales the previous week. Last year for the like period they were 26,580 bales. Spot prices were unchanged to 5 points off at the close, the latter at New Orleans, which was 5.85c, while New York at 5.85c was unchanged. Houston finished at 5.65c and Galveston 5.70c. HIDE FUTURES

Prices on the New York Hide exchange moved irregularly but generally downward the greater part of last week, and for the period ended May 20 hide futures registered net losses ranging from 5 to 20 points. Futures trading was along conservative lines and operators appear to be adhering to a waiting policy pending stimulating developments in the hide and leather situation, spot hide markets being quiet and colorless. There were no sales of futures on Saturday, with prices nominally unchanged to 10 points higher. Closing bids, old contracts: June, 3.92c; September, 4.60c; December, 5.27c; March 5.75c. The exchange will be closed May 24 and May 30.

RESERVE BANKS' CREDIT PROGRAM AIDS U. S. BONDS

Strength of Federals Buoys Market.

New York, May 21.—(AP)—A rally in United States government bonds, which have been somewhat heavily liquidated recently, today had a steadying effect on the bond market. While corporate issues did little better than hold their own on the average, the majority did not, at least, extend their losses.

The greatest volume of trading was in the federal department. The recovery in the government section was attributed partly to improved sentiment regarding the federal reserve system's credit expansion campaign. Four of the treasury loans advanced a point or more, while the Liberties moved fractionally higher.

Rail Issues Strong.

The railway liens showed a modest recovery. Included among the mild gainers were Santa Fe general 4s, Baltimore and Ohio first 4s, Canadian Pacific 5s, St. Paul 5s, Rock Island 4s and 4½s, Erie convertible 4s and consolidated 4s, Hudson and Manhattan refunding 5s, Illinois Central 4¾s, Kansas City Southern refunding 5s, two of the Missouri Pacific 5s, Pennsylvania debenture 4½s, Frisco 4½s, Southern Pacific 4½s and Texas Pacific 5s.

The utilities and industrials were practically unchanged. Power and light company liens were easy. There were a few outstanding slumps. Lehigh Valley Coal 5s lost 37¾ points and Kresge Foundation 6s dropped 25⅝ points on the sale of two bonds in each instance. Loews 6s rallied moderately, but most amusement company loans were soft. The oils generally improved. German government 7s drifted to a new low, but the reich's 5½s came back for a fractional gain. French and British loans were steady. Japanese bonds declined.

More Public Financing.

A further gain in new bond financing was noted this week. New issues aggregating $20,890,000 were marketed, compared with $17,502,000 last week and $16,409,000 the previous week.

During the corresponding week last year new financing reached $93,235,000. All of this week's financing was in the municipal field.

The major issues floated this week included $5,000,000 state of Missouri 4½ per cent road bonds, $5,000,000 New York City 5½ per cent home and work relief bonds, $3,986,000 city of Newark, N. J., 5¾ per cent street bonds, and $3,000,000 state of California 4½ per cent veterans' welfare bonds. A block of $2,500,000 New York City 5½ per cent notes, due June 15, 1933, was also marketed. Most of these issues were quickly sold.

Offering of bonds in the New York market, by groups, for this and last week follow:

	This week.	Last week.
State and municipal	$20,890,000	$16,502,000
Public utility	....	1,000,000
Total	$20,890,000	$17,502,000

New York Curb Stocks Weak.

The New York Curb market drifted irregularly lower in an extremely apathetic week-end session today. The turnover was the smallest in a month. A number of the more active issues held up well, but offerings in thinly traded shares still found nearby bids lacking. Standard Oil of Indiana was an active feature and encountered some week-end liquidation which sent it down ⅛ point at one time, but at the close its decline had been reduced to ⅛. Gulf lost 1½ points, but Humble advanced ½.

The utilities group firmed in spots. Electric Bond and Share and United Light "A" were up minor fractions at the finish. American Gas dipped ¾, then recovered most of its loss. United Gas preferred was a soft spot, dipping to a new low at 15⅛, and closing at 17, off 3 points net.

Aluminum common lost a point and the preferred sagged ⅝. Shaffer Pen sold at 10, off 2 and a new low. Pittsburgh and Lake Erie railroad declined a couple of points to a new minimum at 25.

LIGHT TRADE IN BUTTER

Butter and egg futures were quiet on the Chicago Mercantile exchange yesterday. May butter gaining ¼c, November losing ⅛c and the egg deliveries closing unchanged. Improved storage news in eggs failed to stimulate much buying, although October firmed up slightly. The net inward movement of stocks in the four markets was less than 20,000 cases or nearly 15,000 cases under last year. The movement of butter proved heavy, the four markets storing over 500,000 lbs or 8,000 lbs more than last year. Sales, butter, 6 cars; eggs, 15 cars. Deliveries, butter, 2 cars; eggs, 2 cars. HAY DEMAND SLOW

There was a fairly good sized run of hay on track for a Saturday, with 13 cars of timothy, 1 alfalfa, and 1 each of wheat, oat, and rye straw. Top quality alfalfa is said to be moving in some quarters but anything except the most choice is very hard to sell. Local dealers reported a draggy undertone to the market as a whole.

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

Foreign demand for wheat was reported as relatively slow but sales of around 400,000 bu were finally estimated in all positions, including 100,000 bu hard winter. There was an active milling demand for cash wheat in the southwest with a leading interest selling 400,000 bu.

Chicago handlers sold 17,000 bu wheat, 12,000 bu corn and 34,000 bu oats to the domestic trade with 125,000 bu oats sold to go to store. Deliveries on May contracts aggregated 75,000 bu wheat, 40,000 bu corn, 40,000 bu oats and 5,000 bu rye.

Offerings of cash wheat remain small with the basis firm at 1@1¼c over May for No. 2 red, while No. 2 hard was 1¾@2c over and No. 2 yellow hard and No. 2 mixed, 1¼@1½c over the future.

Cash corn was in fair demand and the basis firm. No. 2 mixed was July price, yellow July to ¼c over and white ¼@½c over. No 3 mixed was ⅛@⅜c under, yellow ¼@½c under and white July price to ⅜c under.

Demand for cash oats was sufficient to absorb the offers with little change in the basis. No. 2 white was ¾@1c over and No. 3 white May price to ⅜c under. No. 2 rye was nominally 1@2c over May.

Official receipts of grain at Chicago Saturday: Wheat, 15 cars; corn, 56 cars; oats, 62 cars; barley, 1 car.

LARD, MEATS HIGHER

Lighter offerings, with the exception of September lard, which was sold freely at one time combined with the strength in grains and a general absorption of the offerings by local and commission house interests, brought a net gain of 7½@10c on lard futures. Prices of dry salted bellies were unchanged. Cash business was about seasonal, especially in hams and dry salted meats, which were wanted by the south. Hog prices were down to the lowest of the season and since 1898, with the day's average $3.25. Hog receipts in the west were smaller than a week ago, but larger than last year, and a good run is expected for the coming week, despite the low prices. Prices follow:

HEAR N. Y. BANKS FORM A $100,000,000 POOL TO PURCHASE BONDS

New York, May 21.—On the heels of announcement Thursday evening for organization of a committee of industrialists and bankers to help put idle funds in the banks to work, there came late yesterday informal word of the formation among leading banks of a $100,000,000 pool to purchase bonds.

This bond pool, according to the program, is to initiate buying very shortly of high grade bonds yielding 5 to 8 per cent. Selected industrial issues, and probably a few of the rails, will be considered. The banking group consists of virtually the same banks that entered the bond market last December. The advance in prices at that time prevented the carrying out of the program to the full degree of expectations.

NEWS OF THE CROPS

Corn planting in Iowa is half finished, except on low ground in some sections. There work has been delayed, but the soil is drying rapidly and should soon be ready for planting, says the Illinois Central railroad's crop report. "Acreage planted is about normal. In Illinois good progress was made with 50@75 per cent of the corn planted completed. The earliest is coming up to a good stand. Warm weather was favorable to all crops," says the report.

"Throughout the southern states corn planting was practically completed. Oats were benefited by warm weather and made good growth in Illinois and Iowa."

"During the coming week Hessian fly damage to wheat will start in to be more noticeable than at any time so far during the crop period," says H. C. Donovan, Logan & Bryan's crop expert. "Damage will develop from the breaking over of straws which will continue more or less until harvest, and because of their prevalence through a wider than usual section of the belt damage promises to be greater than in any season since 1915."

COTTONSEED OIL.

NEW YORK, May 21.—(AP)—Bleachable cottonseed oil was steady today, closing 1 point lower with sales of only 1 contract. Steadiness of lard was the main influence. Crude oil was 2½c bid in the southeast and the valley and 2⅝c in Texas. Bleachable spot closed 3.15c, May 3.35c, July 3.60c, September 3.66c, December 3.84c. There were no sales of prime summer yellow with closing prices as follows: Spot 3.15c, May 3.10c, July 3.45c, September 3.50c.

PIT NOTES

With drought in the southwest said to be getting worse and the crop going backward in western Kansas, combined with discovery of Hessian fly in Illinois and Indiana, the wheat trade has become more bullish than at any time so far. Operators showed enough confidence in their position to remain long over the week-end and to buy offers freely for Monday. Close observers said that there was more evidence of a real bull market starting than at any time since the crop news became effective. The short interest was cut down and the technical condition possibly weakened.

Corn specialists are following the wheat market and buying on breaks and looking for larger offerings from the country on any further advance. It was said that there was considerable corn offered at prices higher than the current market, and any further bulge is likely to run into increased sales.

Bids on new No. 2 red and No. 2 hard and yellow hard for shipment by July 20 track Chicago July price with a few sales made. For August to Sept. 15 shipment bids were 1c under September.

1. Each evening for 42 consecutive evenings (not including Saturdays) W-G-N will broadcast a melody dramatization. On each day following the broadcast the Chicago Tribune will print a Crossword Puzzle containing the name of the melody. You are invited to listen to the broadcast, solve the Crossword Puzzle in the next day's Tribune and name the melody.

2. The Chicago Tribune will pay $2,500.00 in Cash Prizes to the persons who send in the nearest correctly solved and neatest complete sets of answers in accordance with these rules.

NOTE: You do not necessarily have to solve each of the 42 Crossword Puzzles correctly to win. The prizes will be paid to the persons whose entries rank highest. (See prize list at right.)

3. This offer is open to everyone — men, women, boys and girls—except employes of the Chicago Tribune and their families. You pay nothing. Just prove your skill.

4. The Puzzles are to be submitted only in complete sets. Do NOT send in each puzzle separately. Hold all puzzles until you have the complete set of 42. 5. Each entry must be sent by First Class Mail, Postage Prepaid. Entries with insufficient postage will be returned by the Post Office Department.

6. Make your entry simple and neat. Neatness will count. Elaborate entries will receive no greater consideration than simple ones.

7. You need not buy the Chicago Tribune. You may copy or trace the puzzles and send them in. The Chicago Tribune may be examined at any of its offices or at Public Libraries free of charge.

8. The judges will be appointed by the Chicago Tribune. Entrants agree to accept their decision as final. In case of ties a duplicate award will be paid to each tying contestant.

Miscellaneous.

Men—Chicago South Side.

On account of the steady progress and growth of our company, we are in a position to take on a few additional men from time to time; the requirements for these positions are quite reasonable so that the average man of good habits and clean-cut appearance living in the southern section of the city will stand a fair chance of being employed.

This company has been uniquely successful throughout this depression, in fact, 1932 will be our third successive record sales year. In line with our steady gains in business, the earnings of our men are higher; not only are more men earning $50 and $75 a week, but in recent months we have issued many weekly pay checks, running between $100 and $250 throughout the entire country; these earnings, of course, are generally made by more experienced men, but there are exceptions where new men have very quickly advanced themselves to the higher incomes.

Similar positions are available in our local office to a few more men who are qualified to learn this work and who would be satisfied with earnings of $125 to $150 monthly while learning, provided they saw opportunities for increases with experience. The men accepted for these positions will be given a very thorough course of training free of charge.

For personal interview call Monday morning, 9 to 12, at Suite 430 Hyde Park National Bank Bldg., 53d and Lake Park-av.

MEN

PERMANENT, IMMEDIATE POSITIONS ARE AVAILABLE AT OUR WEST SIDE BRANCH OFFICE TO MEN WHO ARE QUALIFIED TO LEARN HOW TO SUCCESSFULLY REPRESENT THIS COMPANY.

These positions pay $5,000, $6,000, $7,000, $10,000 and more a year regularly to men who learn how to do this work successfully.

1931 was our biggest year. 1932 will be our third consecutive record sales year. The reasons for this unique record are: 1. Our men are taught in a practical manner how to do this work. 2. They are honorably treated. 3. Our product is so revolutionary in its service superiority that it is changing the course of an entire industry. 4. The present and potential market is absolutely unlimited.

The product itself reveals a picture which the prospect can never forget, and an inimitable method of presenting it is now being introduced with dramatic effect. Applying this method of work, C. J. Erckman, a former supt. of bldg., earned $45 his first 3 days, while another new man in our West Side office, Stanley Laszewski, a former health inspector for Cicero, earned over $45 his first two days in this work, while A. H. Anderson earned over $90 the same week and H. W. Sprague, formerly in the insurance business, made $115 and R. C. Allen, previously a Cadillac salesman for years, earned well over $200 for the same week. Throughout the entire country men are making more than they ever made before as clerks, salesmen, bookkeepers, mechanics, engineers, etc., due to the amazing and compelling value they can offer in this new Electrolux product [not refrigeration].

The work is not "easy," yet it is not difficult. Average men master it when they set their minds to it and really study and practice to acquire skill. Immediate earnings to more than meet your living expenses are available, and those who learn how to do the work successfully and apply themselves earn regularly from $5,000 to $12,000 a year.

If you are qualified to learn this work, the opportunity is permanent and unlimited. There is no investment, no deposit, no charge for instruction.

These positions are for responsible, adaptable men who live in the West Side of Chicago, or in Will or Kankakee county. Apply in person at once, Monday morning, 9 to 12, suite 11-14 Austin-Madison Bldg., 5967 Madison street.

PRICE OF HOGS FAIRLY STEADY; RECEIPTS LIGHT

Market Here Is Benefited During Week.

Yesterday's meager supply of hogs sold on an undependable market that ruled steady to a shade lower considering the poorer quality of the week-end supply. Not enough stock was here to put prices up to a test yet some of the best grades were carried over for Monday because of the unreliable outlet. The highest sale made was at $3.50, which was off 10c from Friday's peak. The general average moved down 5c to $3.25. The top is steady and the average 10c lower compared with a week ago.

Only mild price changes were made in the hog market during the week. The high and low spots were only 10c apart. A group of adverse factors stood in the way of a rise. Whenever strength appeared support proved too flimsy to back up even a slightly higher level of quotations and weakness soon crept in again. Prices were whittled down until they were back on the bottom.

Average 5c Lower.

The week's general average price moved down only 5c to $3.50, but established a new low that goes back to December, 1898. Prevailing quotations are $1.50@1.75 under the high spot of the year in March. Receipts were only moderate, but the larger proportion of heavy stock increased the tonnage of pork and added to the pressure on the market late in the week. The estimated average weight at 242 lbs stands heaviest since September and 5 lbs. above a year ago. The summer movement of packing sows has started and the initial shipments show plenty of signs that they have had more than the usual amount of grain. They are fat and heavy, averaging about 50 lbs. to 100 lbs more than the first shipments last season. This substantiates the theory that packing grades are being held back on cheap grain. Many expect to carry their old sows over the summer for another litter, selling young gilts instead, because of the current low prices for "packers." Most 400@600 lb old sows sold at $2.40@2.70 during the week.

Cheering Cattle Factor.

A cheering feature in the cattle trade last week was the exceptionally small supply. It served to buoy the market and prices were pushed ahead against declining wholesale quotations and discouraging reports from hogs and lambs. Weighty beeves arrived in small numbers and this lack of tonnage served as a prod in sellers' hands. Prices were forced up 25@35c. The general average for the whole week showed a gain of 15c at $6.00. Receipts for the week at 36,900 were 1,000 above the smallest since middle of March. More cattle weighed 600@900 lbs and fewer above 1,100 lbs. Stock weighing 1,300@1,500 lbs were exceptionally scarce all week.

Lambs registered the sharpest break of the year during the week. Prices dropped $1.35@1.50, going to the lowest levels since 1911. Usually there is such a break about this time of the year when consumer demand swings to the new crop of springers. The earlier movement of both the old and new crop brought the change in buying orders and the revision of quotations was made earlier than ever before this year. Quotations took a "going over" almost a month earlier than in 1931.

Supplies ran light, which is usual during this "in between" season. Southern lambs have commenced to move and this has shut off eastern demand. Shipments were lightest in almost a year.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 15,000 cattle, 35,000 hogs and 15,000 sheep, against 11,568 cattle, 30,208 hogs and 15,360 sheep a year ago and 17,838 cattle, 44,018 hogs and 13,715 sheep a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 37,000 cattle, 12,500 hogs and 60,000 sheep, against 36,869 cattle, 133,011 hogs and 69,327 sheep a year ago and 42,668 cattle, 143,173 hogs and 53,101 sheep two years ago.

THE SUN- THE WARM SHOWERS- SOON, FROM A TINY BUD, I UNROLLED INTO A BRIGHT GREEN LEAF- AND EVERY DAY I GREW TILL I WAS AS FINE A SPECIMAN AS ANY ON OUR TREE-
THROUGH ALL THAT SUMMER I WAS ONE OF THAT VAST GREEN ARMY- DROUGHT CAME AND WENT- MANY OF MY COMRADES WITHERED AND FELL, BUT WE SCARCELY MISSED THEM.
THEN CAME GLORIOUS AUTUMN AND THE FIRST FROST- WE THREW AWAY OUR OLD GREEN UNIFORMS AND DONNED BRIGHT GARMENTS- NOT ONE OF US THE HUE OF ANY OTHER- WHAT SPLENDOR- WHAT RADIANCE!
AH, ME- WE WERE GAY- WHAT A JOYOUS SPECTACLE! FOR A WEEK OR TWO WE DANCED MADLY IN THE RISING BLAST OF WINTER- THEN, AT FIRST BY TENS, THEN BY TENS OF THOUSANDS, WE BEGAN TO FALL- ALL BUT A FEW OF US WERE GONE IN A MONTH.
ALL THROUGH THE WINTER I CLUNG THERE- MY FEW LONELY COMPANIONS DROPPED, ONE BY ONE- I WAS ALL ALONE- SPRING AGAIN- NEW BUDS- I AM RUDELY PUSHED ASIDE- I, TOO, GO TO JOIN MY FALLEN COMRADES-
OF COURSE I HAD STAYED TOO LONG- IN THE NEW GENERATION THERE IS NO PLACE FOR DRY AND WRINKLED AGE- THEY ALL ARE STRANGERS AND I WILL BE HAPPIER TO GO- STILL, I AM GLAD I WEATHERED THE STORMS AND LASTED SO LONG- IT IS GOOD TO HAVE TASTED LIFE FULLY, EVEN TO THE LAST BITTER DROP-

DICK TRACY
DISGUISING HIMSELF AS A BE-WHISKERED NEWSPAPER HAWKER, DICK TRACY LEARNS THE IDENTITY OF THE PARTY WHO COMMITTED THE HUGE JEWEL ROBBERY. HE ALSO LEARNS THE WHEREABOUTS OF THE STOLEN GEMS.
CHESTER GOULD
YOU SAY THIS "DUKE, THE LIFTER" COMMITTED THE ROBBERY - AND HAS THE GEMS IN HIS HOTEL ROOM?

AS YOU BOYS KNOW - THIS BIRD "DUKE" IS CLEVER ON DISGUISES AND IMPERSONATIONS - SO BE ON YOUR TOES. WE DON'T WANT 'IM TO SLIP THROUGH OUR FINGERS.
POLICE
MILLIGAN, YOU STICK AROUND THE LOBBY, PAT'LL GUARD THE ELEVATOR, AND I'LL GO UP TO DUKE'S ROOM.
NOW, REMEMBER, WATCH FOR ANYBODY IN DISGUISE.
SAY, LISTEN - YOU SAID THAT BEFORE! DON'T WORRY, WE'LL NAB 'EM.
THREE EIGHTEEN - THAT'S HIS ROOM NUMBER - MM - I WONDER IF HE'S IN.
318
YOU BET HE'S IN - AND WAITING FOR YOU - MR. DETECTIVE.
TWENTY MINUTES LATER
DON'T YOU THINK WE'D BETTER GO UP AND LOOK FOR TRACY? HE'S BEEN GONE QUITE A WHILE.
YOU GO UP - I'LL WAIT HERE.
HE SAID IT WAS THREE EIGHTEEN LET'S SEE - THREE EIGHTEEN.
WHAT IN ? - HOLY MACKEREL! - TRACY!
TRACY'S BEEN KNOCKED OUT - HE'S ON A BED, UP THERE! COME ON - LET'S DO SOMETHING!
I BEG YOUR PARDON - I'M NOT KNOCKED OUT - I'M RIGHT HERE - AND SO ARE THE JEWELS. THAT'S THE "DUKE" KNOCKED OUT UP THERE ON THE BED. THIS BELLHOP'S OUTFIT IS ONE OF HIS DISGUISES I FOUND UP IN HIS ROOM AND I THOUGHT I'D JUST TEST OUT YOU GUYS' SENSE OF OBSERVATION BY COMING DOWNSTAIRS IN IT.

GASOLINE ALLEY
By King
COME INTO MY STUDY, BOYS. YOU HAVEN'T SEEN MY SHIP MODEL, HAVE YOU?
YES, WALT, THAT'S THE MODEL OF AN OLD THREE MASTER MAN O' WAR THAT OPERATED ABOUT 1870.
KEEN!
THE CLOSER YOU GET TO IT THE BIGGER IT LOOKS.
SHE CARRIED 62 GUNS. I WISH I'D LIVED WHEN SHE WAS AFLOAT.
CAN'T YOU IMAGINE BOARDIN' HER IN THOSE GOOD OLD DAYS—WITH THE WIND WHISTLIN' THROUGH HER RIGGIN'!
AND FIRIN' HER GUNS ONE AFTER ANOTHER AN' SEEIN' THE CANNON BALLS GO SKIPPIN' OVER THE WATER.
AN' GOIN UP IN THE SHROUDS AN' CLAMBERIN' THROUGH THE RIGGIN'.
AN' IF SHE BURNED TO THE WATER'S EDGE TO DRIFT FOR DAYS IN AN OPEN BOAT.
WOULDN'T IT BE FUN TO HEAD HER SOUTH AN' GO AROUND THE HORN LIKE THEY DID BEFORE THERE WAS ANY PANAMA CANAL.
IF SHE WAS MINE I'D PICK A CREW—LONG JOHN SILVER AN' THE REST AN' GO AN' HUNT FOR TREASURE.
I TRIED HARD NOT TO ASK MR. WICKER IF I COULD TAKE HER DOWN TO THE POND AN' SAIL HER—AN' I DIDN'T.
YOU DID VERY WELL, SKEEZIX.
NOW WHAT? BUILDING A SHIP MODEL LIKE MR. WICKER'S I'LL BET.
I STARTED TO BUT I'VE JUST DECIDED TO MAKE A ROWBOAT INSTEAD.

A MAN'S ADVICE on washing clothes — by C.A.Voight

DO YOU MIND STOPPING IN HERE FOR A MINUTE? I WANT TO SPEAK TO THE MAN WHO SOLD ME MY WASHER
WHAT SOAP SHOULD I USE IN MY NEW WASHING MACHINE? I CAN'T SEEM TO GET RICH SUDS
USE RINSO, MRS. FRANK. THE MAKERS OF 40 LEADING WASHERS RECOMMEND IT
I COULD HAVE TOLD YOU THAT! I'VE USED RINSO FOR YEARS. IT GETS CLOTHES MUCH WHITER THAN ORDINARY SOAPS
I'LL CERTAINLY GET SOME RINSO ON MY WAY HOME
SO THIS IS THE SOAP THAT SALESMAN RECOMMENDED. IT FEELS LIKE A GOOD, HEAVY SOAP I HOPE I'M NOT DISAPPOINTED
Rinso
NEXT WASHDAY
GRACIOUS—WHO'D EVER BELIEVE A SOAP COULD MAKE SUCH A BIG DIFFERENCE! I NEVER SAW THE SUDS SO THICK—OR THE CLOTHES SO WHITE RINSO IS WONDERFUL

"Surprised to see how far it goes," says Mrs. R. Roberts of Detroit

"I USE Rinso for everything and I find that a large box goes a long way. Its wonderful for the laundry work because it gets clothes snow-white without scrubbing or boiling. With one big package I did three weeks' wash for three people. Here's a list of the clothes:

1 bed spread
6 bureau scarfs
4 doilies
17 face cloths
12 napkins
7 pillow cases
7 sheets
7 table cloths
24 towels
27 dish towels
75 handkerchiefs
3 men's pajamas
15 aprons
12 dresses
3 nightgowns
4 men's underwear

"I did a lot of general cleaning with it, too. Cleaned the woodwork in two rooms, did the kitchen floor three times, and washed the dishes after thirteen meals. That's why I can't help being enthusiastic about Rinso."

Rinso gives a lot of thick suds—even in hardest water. Safe for your finest cottons and linens—white or colors. Try it. See how much work Rinso will do for you.

Millions use Rinso in tub, washer and dishpan

A WIFELY SCHEME —that worked . . . by ALBERT DORNE

THOUGHT SURE I'D LAND A JOB TODAY BUT—THE OLD STORY! CHANGED HIS MIND AT THE LAST MOMENT—SAID HE'D HAVE TO THINK IT OVER
IT'S SO DISCOURAGING. I WISH I COULD DO SOMETHING TO HELP YOU
NEXT DAY—SHE READS AN AD
I KNOW HE IS FREQUENTLY A LITTLE CARELESS ABOUT 'B.O.' BUT CAN THAT BE WHAT IS HOLDING HIM BACK?
Always "just missed" success
TWO DAYS LATER
SAY, I CERTAINLY LIKE THIS NEW SOAP YOU'VE GOT—LIFEBUOY. IT GIVES A GRAND LATHER. AND BOY, DON'T YOU FEEL CLEAN!
IT'S FINE FOR THE COMPLEXION, TOO. MY SKIN ACTUALLY SEEMS FRESHER AND CLEARER ALREADY
NO 'B.O.' NOW to spoil his chances!
FINE! WE'LL EXPECT YOU IN TOMORROW
GOOD NEWS
A JOB AT LAST—AND WAIT TILL YOU HEAR THE SALARY!
SPLENDID! I KNEW YOUR LUCK WAS GOING TO CHANGE

Don't let "B.O." (body odor) cripple YOUR chances

A "LITTLE" thing, perhaps, but what harm "B.O." (body odor) can do us in our business and social contacts! We don't know when we're guilty, but others do—instantly! Play safe—wash and bathe regularly with Lifebuoy. See how much lather it gives, even in cold or hard water. This creamy, searching, purifying lather deodorizes pores—stops "B.O." Gets germs off hands—helps safeguard health. Lifebuoy's pleasant, hygienic scent, that vanishes as you rinse, tells you you're cleaner—safer!

Dull skins freshen

This same bland, deep-cleansing lather purifies face pores, too—makes dull complexions glow with new, healthy radiance. Adopt Lifebuoy today.

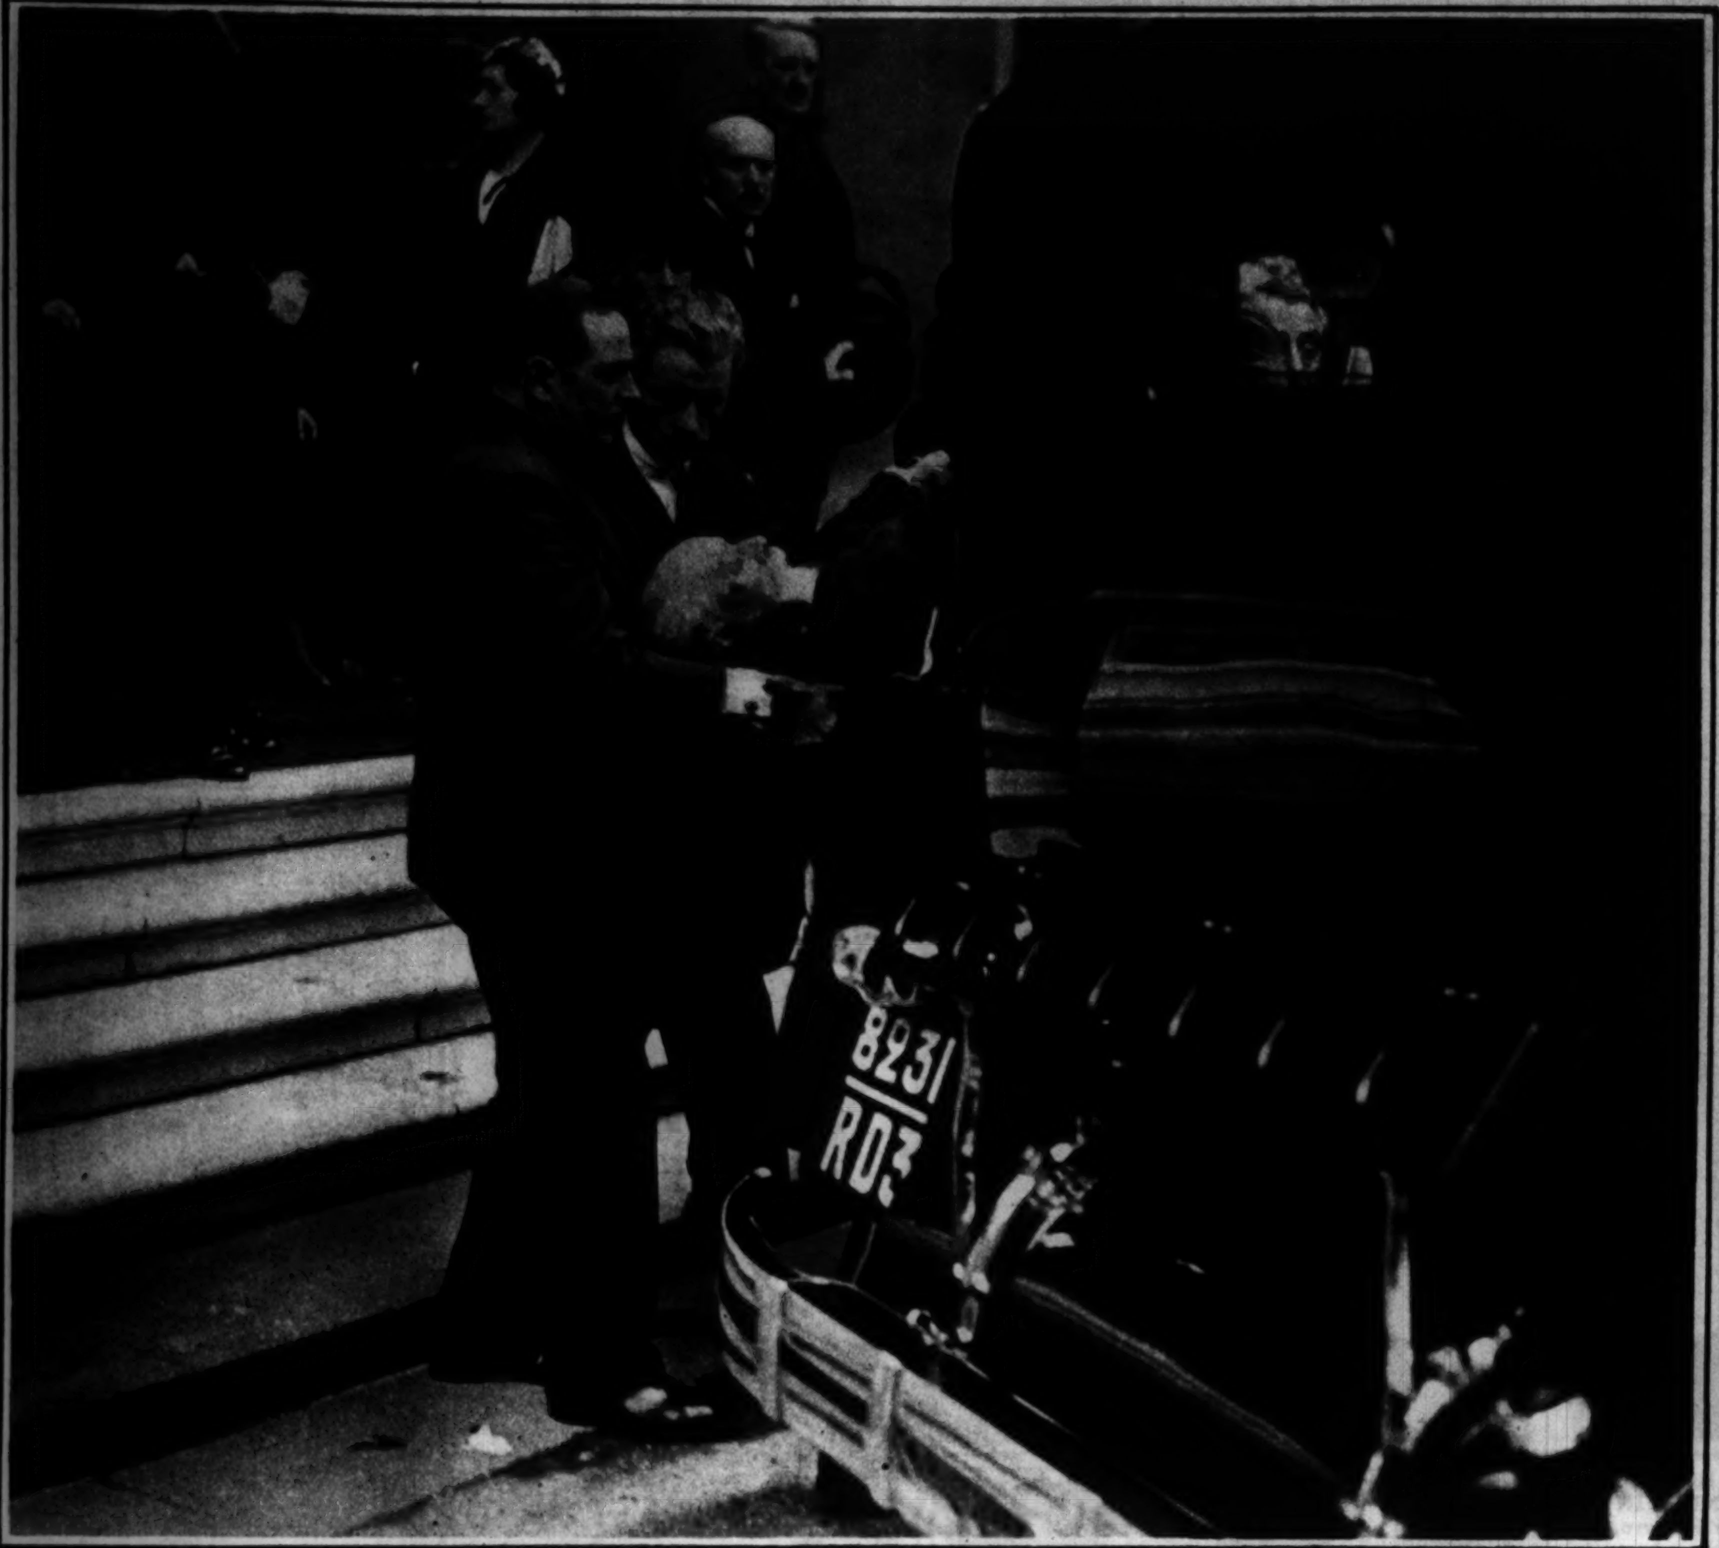
THE ASSASSINATION OF THE PRESIDENT OF FRANCE

Seldom, in cases of sudden and unexpected happenings, is there so complete and timely a photographic record as that presented in these pictures of events, most of which followed by but a few seconds the actual assassination of President Paul Doumer, in Paris, on May 6.



MORTALLY WOUNDED, Paul Doumer, thirteenth president of the republic, was placed in an automobile and rushed to the Beaujon hospital in Paris, where he died the next morning. (Associated Press photo.)

STYLES PLAY AN ACTIVE PART ON THE TENNIS COURT

Paris Creates Clothes for Athletic Gals

Newest Sport Togs Are for Spectators as Well as for the Participants

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Active sports fashions and the regular round the clock mode are the parallel lines of Paris chic which never meet, though they evolve side by side. For period influence may come and picturesque styles may go, but clothes for the days of real sport keep right on taking practical comfort as their sartorial ideal.

I don't mean that the two styles have nothing in common. On the contrary, when Paris says narrow shoulders we find the tops of our sports bodices reduced to mere shoulder straps; when wide shoulder effects and high sartorial interest are in vogue [as they so certainly are this season] tennis frocks take unto themselves little jutting or epaulette sleeves and sweaters accentuate the width of the upper silhouette by gay arrangements of horizontal stripes.

Famous sportsmen or sportswomen are responsible for a great many active sports style trends. You remember how Borotra's sport sleeved jersey swept from coast to coast, being worn by all the girls as well as all the boys, and there are dozens of other examples you can think of for yourselves.

Paris couturiers keep in close touch with the events of the sporting world and the majority of what we call sports creators are themselves ardent devotees of outdoor games and they try out their new sartorial ideas before offering them to their clients.

Reaction Against Pajamas.

For some reason there seems to be a reaction against pajamas this season. Perhaps, because they were so extremely rampant in the stylescape last year. Even Schiaparelli, who was the first and strongest supporter of the trouser skirt for sports, is neglecting them in favor of the hundred per cent feminine variety.

One piece sports frocks are being worn by many smart women this season. They eliminate any possible difference of opinion between waist and skirt as to territory boundaries. A rather high waistline is indicated by cut or separate belt. These frocks are designed to allow perfect freedom while conserving a straight and narrow aspect, and their skirts usually achieve the necessary width by diagonal or circular fullness or gores rather than plaits, which are such a nuisance to keep in press.

High waisted suspender skirts worn with short sleeved gingham or crocheted cotton or fine wool blouses combine the advantages of one piece and two piece outfits. They are favored by a number of Paris creators, notably Vionnet, who has designed a particularly attractive version of the idea in her slim princess skirts, held high by wide suspenders and made to mold the hips and waist by a zipper fastening up the left side front at the top.

Guimpe dresses of wool with washable blouses are present in the active sports mode of Jean Patou, Jane Regny, and others.

Coat Lengths Vary.

Coats range from hem length to just below the bust—it's largely a question of geography and climate. The snug fitted or belted line is favored on this as well as on the more formal style parallel.

Washable chic is the active sports sartorial slogan, and that means cotton in all its new disguises—wool weaves, silk surfaces, open mesh patterns, tweed, crash, et al. Schiaparelli's washable silk crêpesse is unexpectedly practical, not to mention her uncrushable linen or her paper straw cloth that washes like a handkerchief.

Lots of sportswomen will tell you that wool is at the same time cooler and warmer than cotton, and for such there are the handknit woolens in all weights, the jerseys, flannels, wool muslins, etc.

As usual the active sports scape is gay and colorful. Bright orange and madder reds, vivid blues and greens, warm medium browns predominate. Light neutrals—gray, beige, putty and cream—rival pure white for frocks on whole ensembles, enlivened by gay accessories, including from one to five colors.

Pink and other lively pastels are sponsored by Schiaparelli. Copper color is one of Lelong's new sports shades. Really, though, you may indulge in any color you like on the sports parallel, this summer, provided you choose it in its freshest tone.

Stripes appear as the outstanding signposts of 1932 sports chic and the varieties and colors of them invented by Paris textile creators would make Blake's "Tiger, tiger burning bright" slink into his jungle to hide in shame.

The artist has sketched for you today some of the latest Paris sports outfits. These girls are playing tennis, but costumes are equally good for all around outdoor wear also.

Double Duty Togs.

The Bruyere ensemble is specially recommended to girls who belong to tennis clubs in town, for it enables them to look in perfectly good form, going to and from the courts as well as on them.

Special Filling Turns Puff Into Luncheon Dish

Creamed Vegetables, Meat in Crisp Brown Shells Tempting Surprise

By Mary Meade.

I LONG tremendously to write an ode to a cream puff. The crisp winsomeness of it! The great, mellow heart of it which hides demurely under rounding, warm, brown sides in unforgettable wisps! Its versatility and coquettish temperament! Its—but cooking editors must not write odes, either to puffs or pastries, salami or sassafras. They must discourse on spoonfuls and oven temperatures. They must glorify leftover liver and menus for two. They must——

But—what's a May morning good for if one has to walk the straight and prosaic? Let's talk cream puffs!

Just in the last few years we've had a really exciting revolution in puffs. Of course, we can still find vanilla or chocolate cream puffs at our favorite tearooms, but on the whole puffs are out for tricky new fillings—and they're finding them, too. Today there's a special family of them I want to talk about—fillings that have taken cream puffs out of the dessert class and turned them into—what do you think?—the tastiest and heartiest of luncheon dishes!

Tempting Combinations.

For instance, why not a crispy brown puff filled with spanking hot creamed diced tongue, and served with a horseradish sauce? Of course, a crisp sprig of parsley dresses up the dish and another sits on top of the puff hiding the secret of the filling. Or there are creamed oysters to do duty as a filler, although you'll get just as many ohs and ahs from the family if you make it a thick creamed clam mixture, chicken à la king, or even—don't dare turn up your nose!—a good old fashioned mulligatawny stew, spooned piping hot into never so crisp puff shells.

And don't stop with these few suggestions. In fact, there never is a place to stop as long as there are tasty meats and vegetables in the house to lend themselves to creaming. The following combinations have proved favorites at our house. I'll pass them on to you, with a wager that they'll start even better brain throbs and cream puff inspirations in your own kitchen.

Crisp puffs are filled wth creamed diced veal, chopped celery, and minced parsley; creamed peas and minced ham served with pineapple sauce; creamed asparagus and chopped celery leaves; creamed salmon, codfish, giblets, sweetbreads, or shrimp; creamed diced beef heart with chopped okra; and creamed mushroom and pimento.

Well, you think of the rest! I'll guarantee the goodness of these. But one warning—luncheon cream puffs require flavorful fillings, either a rich, savory meat mixture or a well seasoned vegetable one. A medium white sauce proves most successful, for the thin variety will too quickly soften the puff, and the pasty, thick sauce refuses to let the luscious inside flow outside as we wish it to when we first cut through the crisp crust.

Tried and True Recipe.

Do you have a tried and true recipe for the puff shell? While no recipe I have ever seen is entirely foolproof, this one, I believe, comes as near to it as any. Also meet the direction for creamed onions à la puff:

ONION PUFFS

Shell.

1 cup boiling water.
1 cup flour.
¼ teaspoon salt.
4 eggs.

Filling.

3 tablespoons flour.
3 tablespoons shortening.
1 cup milk.
½ teaspoon salt.
⅛ teaspoon pepper.
1 cup chopped cooked onions.
1-3 cup chopped steamed cucumber or green pepper.

To make the puffs, place the butter, water, and salt in the top of the double boiler and cook, stirring constantly until the mixture ceases sticking to the sides of the pan. Do not heat an instant beyond this point or the fat will separate out and the paste will not puff. Remove from the fire and cool to room temperature. Now beat in the eggs, one at a time, and mix thoroughly. Drop by spoonfuls or with a pastry tube on to a greased baking sheet. Allow about two tablespoons of batter to each puff, and shape each one up so that it stands a little higher in the center than at the sides. The puffs should be one and one-half inches apart. Bake in a hot oven [425 degrees F.] for fifteen minutes, turn the heat down and bake for at least one-half hour more at about 325 degrees F. Before taking the puffs from the oven be absolutely sure they are completely dried out. Otherwise they will be sad, tumbledown affairs before you have a chance to fill them.

For the onion filling, merely make the ingredients into a cream sauce and add the cooked, chopped onions and cucumbers or peppers. Crack open the tops of the puffs as little as is necessary to spoon in the creamed vegetables. Serve at once.

Satisfying Dessert Puffs.

But, now, if you're as great a lover as I am of feathery, dainty cream puffs for a splendiferous topping off at Sunday dinner, you're wondering whether I'm going to forget altogether the ever growing family of dessert puffs—those satisfiers for something at once cool, pleasantly soft, yet satisfyingly crisp.

One of the best of these scrumptious creations is filled with whipped cream with firm quartered strawberries. Crushed strawberries are also delightful in whipped cream, or a mixture of crushed and quartered. When

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

WE keep hearing through the years that "experience is the best teacher." But any intelligent mother looking back on her mistakes realizes that experience is not always the best teacher, unless we broaden that old saying until it includes other people's experiences, too.

When the gay social whirl begins for your little boy and girl, and invitations to birthday parties are being given and received, too, I hope you will be willing to profit by the experience of mothers who have been through the mill. There's more to this birthday party business than meets the eye of the young mother who is new at the game. Hearts may be broken, stomachs, sleep, and disposition made to suffer, and self-confidence and social poise may be affected.

"Horrors!" you probably say at this point. "What nonsense—all that fuss over a children's party!" Or, if you're more serious minded you may think, "Good gracious, I guess I won't let Jane and Jack have anything to do with parties or have anything to do with them myself." Well, you needn't go that far, if you're open minded enough to take a little practical advice from two sources—namely, from mothers and teachers.

Expert's Advice.

Since I have expressed myself strongly but generally on the subject of parties a number of times, I am going to give some detailed suggestions today from the wide experience of a teacher who has to bear sometimes with the aftermath of the aforesaid social whirl.

"I feel terrible today—I went to a

Watch the necklines on the sports dresses this season. You'll find many new tricks.

The waistline question is far from settled. Some like it low, some like it high, and some like it natural.

Parisiennes are carrying Worth's flat envelope purses made in the new angora felt—and with belts to match.

Yellow is often the accessory color they wear with these blues in sweaters, and berets and turbans.

Afternoon ensembles that have elbow length sleeves or cape sleeves are the smartest seen at these southern resorts.

Short broadcloth gloves with a flaring ruffle of polka dotted crepe de chine are the newest fantasie gloves in Paris for summer.

Porcelain straw is the very latest in millinery news. It is used by Reboux and looks as though it were covered with a china glaze. It comes in all colors and white.

Which Is Cheerful Sex Now? Women, Not Men, Says Doris

By Doris Blake.

WHO'S the the cheerful sex now? Who's the cheerful sex when there's a big depression on? Who's the cheerful sex when there is a minor depression on, a mood depression, any kind of depression?

Don't you believe it, you big strong gentlemen. It isn't your sex at all. It is that sex that for generations and generations you big hearties have regarded as the weaker half of the human race.

You don't believe it? Well, who did more jumping out of windows since the big drop of '29? Who has done more grumbling about conditions generally? Which sex has been busier trying to adapt itself to the reduced mode?

You men have been getting away with murder for generations. It took an emergency such as we are passing through to rediscover who buckles on the armor when emergency calls. And the vitriolic pen of an irate Englishwoman, Elizabeth Craig, to broadcast this fact known to every woman.

Why Not More Cheerful?

"I really cannot understand men," Elizabeth Craig volunteers. "They say women are incomprehensible, but I think men are more so. Why can't they be more cheerful, more adaptable? Why can't they submit to new conditions more gracefully? Why do they have to be blackmailed, coaxed, or flattered into a yielding mood by the average woman when she wants her way? Why can't they pay the woman the compliment of having brains of her own, or at least a certain amount of intelligence? Why can't they meet a woman half way in questions that affect both? . . . The fact remains that today both men

Summer Frocks of Pique, Cotton Mesh, Silk Crepe Are on the Fashion Scene

There's a Gown for Every Day in Active Week

Crisp, Airy Dresses Adorn the Tennis Courts and the Sidelines, Too.

By Rhea Seeger.

LEAN and hungry budgets, pocketbooks, and even clothes allowances are going to have a great chance to recuperate during the summer shopping season. The daily drain on their contents will probably be a slender trickle compared with the terrific onslaughts that threatened their complete extinction when full, generous sums were spent for the necessary early coats and suits of wool.

Summer frocks of cotton and other wash fabrics are so low in price that even an experienced shopper gasps with delight and stunned surprise. A wide awake, fashion wise clothes hound can collect a wardrobe of summer dresses that will make a summertime that will linger long in feminine memory as the one utterly perfect and most plentiful assortment she ever hung on a lot of hangers!

These crisp, cool cottons and clinging mesh weaves are easy to sell and far easier to buy. They are irresistibly swank for sportswear, for every daytime hour, and there are many unbelievably lovely affairs of pique, wide fishnet like weaves and shadow-sheer voiles and embroidered eyelets for evening. You can tub any of these models with refreshing frequency. The colors refuse to dim, the crispness remains unwilted. Now, how could anybody ask for more? Summer clothes are really something to get excited about, for you can reasonably slip into a bright new dress every morning of the week without making any appreciable dent in your dollar deposits.

Backless Models.

There are all sorts of airy versions of sports dresses and daytime cottons. The greatest successes are coolly sleeveless and audaciously backless. If this back to nothing movement becomes any more popular the soapmakers and washrag designers can climb out of the red, for the expanse of backbone vertebrae that must be exposed to sight and comment necessitates liberal and many ablutions.

You'll dress in cottons, but the kind of cottons that smartly masquerade as fabrics of wool. Some of the smartest frocks are clever copies of serge or nubby tweeds and reps. Distinctive clinging models copy the delicate meshes and patterns of Irish and other laces. Piques start with fine narrow welts or wales that are as narrow as pencil lines, then grow bolder and bigger until they look at least a quarter of an inch wide. These generously wide wales have cunningly learned the art of remaining smooth and unwrinkled, something to remember when you shop.

Colors continue in their mad march around the town. There isn't a shy and retiring color to be found. Even the watered tints whisper wickedly for notice, and bold splashing shades rival tropic gardens for brilliant tones. Every shop screams with stripes. You can be conservative with dainty hair lines, or devil-may-care with stripes that are closely related to those of the zebra. And when the stripes are not printed they are woven right in the material and some stripemakers go so far as to drop stitches and thus achieve fashionable striped effects.

Style Notes.

Double breasted closings are still the accepted method of showing wide lapels to the best advantage. Epaulet shoulder effects maintain the smartest width for summer shoulders, and the waistline decides to stay normal.

Four distinctive models showing the newest arrivals for summer shoppers are sketched today. At the upper left is a piece ensemble developed in colored cotton, with a frock of brown and white inch-square cotton mesh. It has cap sleeves and is cut in slenderizing diagonal sections. The short coat is most unusual with the double row of four metal buttons. The fitted snugness and curving slimness is particularly necessary this year if you know your coats and jackets.

This flannel coat can be used for contrast over any other frock, or skirt and blouse combination that your wardrobe may boast, and though it has been sketched in brown, the same model can be procured in scarlet, green, or blue.

Seated at the lower left is the newest wide wale pique dress that is washable, sunproof, and practically unfadeable wherever you wear it. It is cleverly contrasted with another color of pique. This model is made for either active or spectator sports wear.

On the seated figure at the top the clinging frock of cotton lace closely copies the mesh and patterns of Irish lace. The color is a soft powder blue, the sleeves being short and puffed. A V neckline displays wide revers, and large pockets are features of the skirt.

Summer golfers will be enthusiastically efficient with driver or putter if they wear this new golf dress of tailored white silk crêpe, shown at the lower right. Golf-going experts surely must have designed it, for it is generously supplied with inverted plaits in the skirt and blouse, assuring plenty of freedom. The cuffs are particularly noticeable, as they can be turned back and pushed about wherever the owner of good swinging arms wants to wear them. The pockets are huge. In them you can carry a supply of tees that will last through eighteen holes or more. A brilliant red tie is the only decoration of this model.

Stenos Are Hardest Hit by Current Depression

Stenographers are the hardest hit by the present economic disturbance in New York City, according to the emergency relief committee. Seamstresses are next, and clerical workers third.

Handicapped by blindness, Miss Delphine Desio of Philadelphia, Pa., is a composer of musical scores. She thinks out the music, then when it is clear in her mind dictates the complicated score, in all its parts, note by note.

All Set for Active Outdoor Days Ahead

Bright Sayings of the Children

Mary's mother had bumped her "crazy bone" and Mary thought she could make it quite all right by giving it a vigorous rubbing.

Her Aunt Grace spoke up and said: "When you grow up, Mary, you ought to be a good osteopath."

But Mary answered indignantly: "No, thank you. When I grow up I'm going to be just a plain woman with some children." M. M. N.

My 3 year old niece from Denver had gone to the zoo with her dad, mother and grandfather. On the way home her grandfather asked her how she liked the monkeys and other animals. Patsy thought all the animals were just fine. Then, quickly looking up said, "I like you, too, grandpa." J. L. D.

Richard, age 8, was fond of using large words. One evening his father asked him if some children in his room at school who had been absent because of scarlet fever had returned to school yet.

He replied, "Yes, they came back today after the house had been circulated and the kids had been shellacked." W. G. R.

One day while little Betsy, not quite 5, and I were getting gas at a filling station, a young girl, very much rouged and powdered, wearing quite a frown, a very long dress, and high heels, walked through the lot. Betsy studied her until she passed out of sight, and then turned to me and asked, "Do you suppose that is her all-the-time look?" C. J. M.

My little nephew was on his first visit to his grandmother, who lived in the country. Being used to electric lights, the kerosene lamps were new to him. He looked and looked after they had been lighted, and finally said, "O, grandma, there's a fire in the milk bottle!" C. J.

My sister's little girl, aged 2, was in the habit of getting up before the rest of the household and going to her playroom in her nightgown. One morning her mother, fearing she might take cold, called, "Margaret, what have you on your feet?" Without hesitation, she answered, "Toes." B. E. T.

My father-in-law often goes walking with "Fritz," his German dachshund. On one such occasion he was met by a little neighbor girl, who, after gazing long and earnestly at the dog's legs, innocently inquired: "O, Mr. H——, did your little doggie get runned over?" W. W. H.

Grandfather was getting feeble and often had to make two or three efforts before he could rise from his chair. Little Betty was watching him one day and turning to her mother, said sympathetically, "Mother, grandpa never ups on the first up, does he?" M. B.

Fairy Treasure

By Eleanor Jewett.

There is a rush of miners
Every month of May
To dig the fairy gold up
Before it slips away.

But every May it's always
A little bit too late;
The fairy gold is restless
And never will it wait.

The fairy gold comes spilling
In pennies bright and new
Wherever grass is greenest,
To tempt the eyes of you.

It may be dandelions,
Or perhaps a buttercup—
But the children know it's treasure
Of the fairies, growing up!

Who's Cheerful When There's a Depression?

Not Men, Says Doris, for All Their Time Is Devoted to Grousing.

and women are up against abnormal circumstances. The question is how they are both meeting the crisis.

"Woman seems to be making the best of the situation. She is cutting down expenses cheerfully. Often she boasts of how she is doing it. But man, in the mass, is grumbling about having to buy cheaper cigars or do without them."

Mrs. Craig mentions other deprivations or cheaper substitutes which man, in the mass, suffers with a loud groan.

"He is making, in short, a great song and dance about doing the equivalent of what most women are doing with a smile. . . . Which brings me to the fact that we are the cheerful sex. We are the ones to submit to economies, pinpricks, and sacrifices without grumbling. I admit it takes a man to go over the top to certain death without flinching, a man is better able, as a rule, to cope with great emergencies than a woman. But in the small everyday happenings which every woman who runs a household has to face, in the routine of daily life, it is my sex that goes over the top."

Women Really at Fault.

Mrs. Craig thinks perhaps it is because women have made so much of men that men are so secure in their masculinity. Man's single track mindedness, she thinks, may be because women have done too much for them. Anyway, the fact remains that the average man makes more fuss about trifles than the average woman; that the average man can make a bigger mountain out of a molehill than a woman, and they lack the ability to see things in their proper perspective.

Remark to the average man that we are going to have a glorious day and he will answer that tomorrow it will probably rain. Not content with the gift of the moment, says Mrs. Craig, he must cavil at what may come next.

While the woman's soul is raking the heavens, the husband scuttles it to earth.

"Men are doleful as well as queer creatures," opines this female analyst. "I sometimes wonder what would happen if you put a man on top of St. Paul's, all alone, with no one to help him down, no woman to listen to his troubles, to tell him how much he is misunderstood, to smooth his descent to the pavement."

And that ought to just about put this party of the second part, known as the male sex, where he belongs!

But there's more truth than writing fancy in Mrs. Craig's observations. We've met up with considerable evidence in this department here of man's dolefulness as opposed to woman's willingness to make the best of an emergency.

Grumbler's Reaction.

Time and again we have been told about men who take their salary cuts or unemployment out on their wives in grumbling or sullen moodiness. There's a letter before us at the moment from a wife who went out and got a job to help out with expenses. She keeps house, prepares the meals, and says she has tried to cheer the man at every meal they sit down to. But never an encouraging response is she met with. The man is engulfed in gloom from morning until night, day after day, week in and week out.

There is the wife who moved out of a $35,000 dollar house into a $60 apartment. Dismissed all servants, even to the washerwoman. She made the change with infinite grace. But the clothes washing is an easy duty compared to the job this woman has of trying to cheer her man.

How many women have had to work overtime cheering their men out of actual suicide may only be guessed at.

However, we're not suggesting that you start any argument in the family over the question. If woman's job is being cheerful in emergencies, let her be thankful that there is a great big important place for her in the domestic scheme of life. Let her be glad that man needs a woman to listen to his troubles, to tell him he is misunderstood, to take over the cheering burden. Our stock, en masse, has been pretty badly deflated of recent days as gilt edged matrimonial investments. Rather should we be rejoicing that these trying days are giving us a chance to strut our stuff; to prove how impossible it is to get along without us—in emergencies.

Similar Treatment for Two Rooms

The clever amateur decorator remembers that when a dining room opens directly off the living room, either with or without doors, it must follow the decorative scheme of the latter, in a large degree. A formal living room cannot well be part of or immediately next an informal, simple little dining room. The two should be one in spirit if not in letter.

That is, the same colors that are used in the larger room should be carried over into the smaller, and the same type of furniture, as well. Woods do not need to be identical, of course, but the lines any styles should be similar.

When the dining room is small, care should be taken to select furniture that is fairly delicate in line. It need not be spindling, but neither should it be bulky. Larger rooms call for proportionately larger tables and chairs and for massive woods such as oak, if one is fond of that particular wood.

Scarf of Evening Frock Ends in Twisted Girdle

PARIS.—(AP)—Countesse de Robilant is among smart Parisians who are choosing dark blue instead of black for evening frocks this spring. She attended a recent dinner wearing a frock of deep blue crinkly crêpe with a long scarf brought from the shoulder line and twisted about the waist to form a girdle. The scarf was lined with a lighter shade of blue.

the puffs are full add a rosette of whipped cream, piling it on with a teaspoon, or, better yet, a pastry gun.

There's a French cream puff filling which makes a tasty variation from the usual custard and yet isn't too rich for most tastes. Here is the recipe:

FRENCH PUFF FILLING.

¾ cup rich cream.
¼ cup milk.
¼ cup powdered sugar.
1 egg white, beaten stiff.
⅓ teaspoon lemon extract.

Dilute the cream with the milk and beat until very stiff. Add the sugar, flavoring, and egg white. Whip together until light and squeeze into fresh, crisp puffs. Top with a spoonful of shredded pineapple or chopped nuts.

For tiny tea puffs, when you don't want a whole meal or you're particularly considerate of your friends' waistlines, the puffs themselves may be made small merely by using less batter per puff. I like these wee ones filled with sweetened whipped cream plus a sprinkling of minced dates and almonds.

Ice cream puffs may not be new to you, but have you tried all the interesting possibilities in this line? Pistachio ice cream makes a fetching flavor and color combination with the golden brown puff. Strawberry ice cream topped with a small mound of powdered sugar and a large strawberry is good. A fluffy sauce made of two beaten egg whites, two tablespoons of melted cooled butter, and one-third cup of crushed strawberries may be poured over or around it.

Or, for a change, it's fun to serve fresh fruit in baked puffs. Sliced quinces, fresh peaches, sweetened berries of all kinds—they're all delicious topped with whipped cream or with toasted cocoanut. Some cooks with particularly fastidious tastes even make thin icings and frost each puff.

Now for a final cream puff treat. This one is really a fruit gelatin mixture, to be poured into the puffs when the mixture is cold but only partly jellied.

PUFFS WITH FRUIT GELATIN HEARTS.

2 tablespoons gelatin soaked in 1 cup cold water.
1½ cups boiling water.
½ cup lemon juice.
¾ cup sugar.
⅛ teaspoon salt.

Dissolve the soaked gelatin in the boiling water and add the sugar and salt. When the mixture has cooled and is just beginning to set, stir in the lemon juice, nuts and fruit, and pour into the waiting puffs. Serve with a tiny ball of ice cream atop or beside each puff.

SIMPLICITY dominates in this navy blue Milan straw hat, shown today, which spurns elaborate tendencies in milady's millinery. Note how the brim has a slight upward turn all the way around, which reminds us of the chin-chin hat of a few seasons ago.

It is about the home made trimming on this hat that I want to call your attention to. Small disks of varicolored silks are set on the top of the crown and over the left eye in clusters to give the effect of a flower trim. In the millinery scrap box or basket are usually found small pieces of silk too small for any other use, but which can be worked up in the making of these disks.

To make the disks, use white crinoline, 1½ inches in diameter. Cut this silk in bias strips, ⅝ of an inch wide. It takes from three-quarters to a yard of silk for each disk. Begin on the outer edge by putting the silk over the edge to bind it and give it a finish. The next row of silk is laid flat about 1-16 of an inch from the outer edge. The next row the same, and so on, until there are 8 or more rows in each disk.

Finish in the center with green chenille, silk French knots, or the different colored flower stamens. There are such soft, alluring pastel shadings shown that a group of these disks made up in orchid, beige, jonquil yellow, pink, dove wing gray, the soft greens, and light tones of brown make a wonderfully inexpensive trim for an old or new hat.

Narrow lace can be used in the same way. Do not make the disks any larger than the directions given, or they will look too bulky and detract from the smartness of the hat. Combinations of white and black disks work up well on a black hat, while red, white, and navy are attractive on many.

Answers to Love Queries

Lonesome Sixteen.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 16 and my parents are very strict. I have no friends and don't dance, and I am very lonesome. Please help me. "LONESOME."

Your parents should let you have boy friends and you should learn to dance.

White or Black?

"Dear Miss Blake: My girl lies to me. Should I give her up. FRANK."

What kind of lies? White ones or hurtful ones? You'll have to be the judge.

Should Return the Ring.

"Dear Miss Blake: Please inform me if it is proper for a girl to return the ring after telling a fellow not to darken her doorstep again. "THANK YOU."

The girl should return the ring, if she's the one to do the dismissing.

Objects to Six-Mile Drive.

"Dear Miss Blake: My friend has to drive six miles to see me. He feels that this is too far. Does he love me? "MISS E. S."

If he motors, his love isn't one of those things of which marriage announcements are made.

Keep Him Guessing.

"Dear Miss Blake: I love a fellow but I never tell him I do. How should I prove it? ELEANOR."

Don't tell him. It's best to let him find it out.

Not Improper.

"Dear Miss Blake: Is it wrong if a girl has two boys and another girl stop at my home after school? "ADELE."

Not if some member of the family is at home.

Afraid to Show Ring.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am soon to be engaged, but I will be afraid to show my father the ring. "WONDERING."

Why hold out on father? Fathers are very human and understanding.

Seventeen Rebels.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 17 and my parents do not permit me to go with boys. Please advise. BLUE EYES."

Parents might be more generous. That's about the time most girls begin going out.

Bright Red Wooden Pins Trim Jacket of Gray Suit

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Wooden pins are fashion's newest trick for trimmings. The jacket of a little gray wool suit has a horizontal slit on each side of the chest marked by cartridge tucks filled with bright red wooden pins. The effect is similar to a soldier's cartridge belt.

There's Right, Wrong Way of Giving Party

Little Children Will Have a Grand Time if Parents Plan It Carefully.

party last night!" may be accepted by grownups, but it's not the effect we want a party to produce on the children!

The director of the nursery school of the Demonstration Children's school in the National College of Education at Evanston has some excellent and definitely helpful comments to make on children's parties. She says:

"In the first place, there is the matter of guests. The mother is apt to go over her list of friends who have children and invite those children to the birthday celebration. Perhaps the little guest has never seen the child before, which immediately brings about a strange social situation. Perhaps none of the children know each other. And yet the adults expect the same social spirit and give-and-take relationships that they, as adults, would assume when attending a social affair.

"Ask any kindergarten or first grade teacher how much social ease her children show the first day or even the first week of school. She will tell you of the long, slow period of adjustment or getting acquainted that it takes for some children. And yet at a party in some one's home, grownups expect children to exhibit as much poise in a strange social situation as if they had been in the world twenty-five years.

"Have you not known children who would beg to stay home from parties, having had one or two sad experiences of being hauled out of their corner and made to pin tails on mysterious donkeys?

Cause for Aching Hearts.

"Have you not known children to come home broken hearted because they didn't win a prize, or because he or she could find only two peanuts in the hunt? Is it a sign of poor sportsmanship? For a child of 14 or 15 such reactions would be considered in that light, but let us put ourselves in the little child's place—the child of 4, 5, or 6, and consider how little contact he has had in 'stepping out,' and let us then not overwhelm him by inviting a lot of strange people whom he cares nothing about and probably will not see until his next birthday party!"

I wish each line of that might be underlined.

"Shall we forego parties, then, for the very young child? Not at all. But may we not give serious thought to making the party as worthwhile as possible from every standpoint?

"Invite those children who are the child's playmates in the neighborhood, or his best friends in his own little group at school. He will let you know the children he wishes to have included. After all, it is his party and he will feel that this is so if he has a voice in making the plans. Much emotional strain will be eliminated if the child and his guests are acquainted.

Don't Ask Too Many.

"A wide age range in a group always makes for difficulties. The 8 year old has little in common with the 4 year old, so if you would make your party a success keep the age range of your guests within about two years. It is almost impossible to plan games and activities that will suit all ages if you have a great mixture of ages.

"The size of the group depends on the space the home offers and the amusements you have planned, as well as the number of adults who will assist. It is far better to have a few children have a good time than a large group of youngsters gather together for an uproarious pandemonium and have all go home excited, overstimulated and be out of sorts with their families and themselves for a day or so afterward."

I have seen this happen again and again, with all the parents repeating the arrangement when their turn to give a party comes.

Avoid Prize Giving.

"Whatever the amusement, beware of prizes for young children. They are too young to enter into competitive games and understand the whys and wherefores of prize awarding. Often there is resentment among those who do not win prizes and who knows what harboring of unhappiness? Help the children of this age to do things for the fun of doing and not for a prize."

Can't you remember the parties you went to where almost always the same boy or girl won the prize? Some children are like that. And can't you remember the parties at which you—some of us are like that, too—simply never won anything? And how you used to mind it—not because of the prize, but because it made you feel so awkward and "dumb"? At least for the little ones, let's surely omit the prizes.

Styles Play an Active Part on the Modern Tennis Court

linen band, shades the eyes sufficiently for watching the game on an outdoor court and is not too sporty for town wear. The gloves are those adorable white cotton crochet affairs of Bruyere's. They're as cool as no gloves at all, and twice as pretty.

The dress of this ensemble is seen on the first player on the other side of the net. It's in white sinellic with a double big fichu edged with tatting recalling the gloves, that ties at the nape, as you can see by the seated spectator. Note the asymmetrical, diagonal cut of the skirt, one of Bruyere's favorite tricks for giving fullness without apparent width.

Her partner is wearing a Schiaparelli frock of creamy crêpasse with gored skirt mounting in high incrustations in the front of the bodice, which has a little shoulder yoke in back. Like almost all Schiaparelli's new models, this is a wrap around, only it opens up the left side of the back instead of in front; it's fastened by three leaf shaped clips on the shoulder yoke and is held in place by the twisted belt of red and brown crinkly ribbon. The striped scarf is of red and brown crocheted silk.

On the near side of the net you can see for yourself the high waisted suspender skirt preferred by Paris. This one's hand knit in cocoa brown wool worn with a little hand knit short sleeved shirt of much finer white wool, whose stripes in vermilion, cocoa brown, yellow, and white supply the high accent referred to above.

The stripes turn diagonal in the trig jacket worn by the other girl. The same colors—vermilion, yellow, white, and cocoa brown—are used in a different rhythm. The buttons are "all in gol', baby!"

The visored cap, featuring still another variation on the stripes theme in hand knit wool pique, is the latest thing in Paris sporting headlines.

Bible Schools Are Planned by Chicago Churches

By the Rev. John Evans.

THE fact that there are 9,500,000 children of the 'teen age and under living in American cities who have no organized or directed recreational opportunities during the summer vacation months was the basis of discussion yesterday of more than 100 Protestant vacation school workers at the Central Y. M. C. A., 19 South La Salle street. Plans were laid for the largest daily vacation Bible school enrollment for the coming summer in the history of that work in Chicago.

It was pointed out yesterday that last year more than 1,000,000 of these otherwise neglected children were given constructive leadership by daily vacation church schools in American cities. In Chicago 25,000 were cared for last year. The program for this summer provides for an enrollment nearly double that number. Conferences for the training of teachers and leaders of the summer schools will be conducted at the Central Y. M. C. A. on the next four Saturday mornings.

In a formal announcement from the office of Dr. Emerson O. Bradshaw, secretary of the Chicago Council of Religious Education, a department of the Chicago Church federation, it was stated that only 41 per cent of the children in America are receiving any religious instruction whatever. In addition to this, the announcement said that more than one-half of the children of Protestant families receive formal religious instruction.

A comparison of the amount of religious instruction given to youth by Jewish, Catholic, and Protestant faiths given in the announcement reveals the fact that a Jewish child receives 335 hours each year of religious instruction. The average Catholic child receives 200 hours, while the Protestant youngster receives but 50 hours.

"Idle churches, idle children, and idle teachers are being organized into vacation schools which will help eliminate spiritual illiteracy," said Dr. Bradshaw. "A vacation school is a happy fellowship during the summer for boys and girls. It is a daily series of experiences in which character is developed. Service projects teach the art of sharing with others; study brings fruitful knowledge of the Bible and lessons in Christian living; recreation and fair play make life more zestful and build habits of team work."

The biennial conference of Community Church Workers of the U. S. A. will be held in Amherst Community church of Snyder, N. Y., near Buffalo, May 18-20. The Rev. Orvis F. Jordan, pastor of the Park Ridge Community church, will preside over the conference this year. He is editor of the news organ that serves community church interests throughout the United States. The Rev. R. E. Shields and the Rev. Oliver C. Weist, secretaries of the organization with offices in Chicago temple, will report their activities for the last biennium.

There are over two thousand union, community and federated churches in the United States. This number is more than double that announced when the first conference of Community Church Workers was held at St. Paul's Union church of Chicago nine years ago.

Several pastors from this area will be in attendance at the Buffalo meeting. The Community Church Workers is an association of individuals which seeks to promote practical Christian unity and social Christianity in local communities. It has been recognized by the Federal Council of Churches as an affiliated organization.

Patriotic Scenes and Old Fashioned Floral Bouquets Run Riot on Newest and Prettiest of Summer Fabrics

Washington Bicentennial Inspires Designers and Manufacturers of Chintzes and Cretonnes.

By Edith Weigle.

SUMMER fabrics are nothing if not patriotic this year. Manufacturers, mindful of the Washington Bicentennial, have brought out any number of perfectly charming chintzes, cretonnes, and linens bearing replicas of patterns popular in eighteenth century America. Ideal for use with federal furniture, which also has experienced a decided increase in favor during the last twelve months, are these scenic and patriotic materials reminiscent of another day.

A visit to the showrooms of one of the most famous fabric manufacturers—15,000 varied designs are on hand—proved the fact that these materials, and patterns appropriate for use in Biedermeier, Empire, and Directoire rooms, are the most called for at the present time. Also that the demand for attractive fabrics for slip cover use was never greater than this year, due, perhaps, to the economy most people are practicing. Instead of reupholstering their furniture they are having slip covers made for it. Then, too, the usual summer demand for slip covers is on.

Out of the wealth of patriotic chintzes and cretonnes we saw several especially attractive designs. (And they may be had at the large Chicago department and furniture stores.) One, in soft shades of red, white, and blue, showed Washington's head in an oval in a small repeat pattern. The same chintz comes in about six other varied color combinations.

Paul Revere's ride is illustrated on another in bold tones of blue-green, browns, and yellows, the effect being that of a wood cut, and exceedingly artistic. Stunning curtains could be fashioned of this fabric and hung in a room filled with early American maple furniture.

"Stars and Stripes" is the name given another chintz. We have seen it made up into window draperies, and it is unusually smart. It has a satin-like sheen that is most deceiving; one can hardly believe it is chintz. The design shows stars on vari-colored stripes. It is 36 inches wide and comes in six colorings: one with a white ground has red and blue stripes and white stars; another, with blue ground, has red and white stripes and white stars; still another, yellow ground, shows peach and light blue stripes and light blue stars, or a periwinkle blue ground with coral and daffodil yellow stripes has yellow stars. But the best looking combination of colors in "Stars and Stripes," to our way of thinking, shows buff stars against henna and buff stripes on an eggplant ground.

As for other, non-patriotic summer chintzes, they are as lovely and as colorful as an old fashioned garden planted with phlox, verbenas, larkspur, Canterbury bells, and roses. The most attractive floral chintzes and cretonnes are two or three tone—that is, only two or three colors are used in the entire design. We saw one favorite of the decorators, an utterly beautiful faded blue (lighter than a powder blue) ground with a design of flowers and wheat in soft beiges and whites. Blue is considered a chic color just now, if you can get it in a particular shade which is hard to describe because it is so subtle. It is light in tone, but has a lot of gray in it and achieves that soft, mellow feeling that creates atmosphere. Combined with daffodil yellow or with touches of cherry red, it can make any room charming.

We were told that greens, rusts, and hennas are definitely passé. Dark browns, walnut shades, eggplant are very good. Ever so many smart chintzes and cretonnes are showing floral designs against a very dark background of one of these colors. The gay tints of the flowers stand out with great clarity.

Perfectly plain white is also a modish shade. Draperies of white glazed chintz with wide ruffles piped in a color that picks up the dominant color of the room and used with decorative holdbacks are considered terribly chic. So also are fabrics showing large white flowers on a black ground with touches of blue-green or yellow, or modern patterns of spiky black wheat or cattails against a pure white background. Black and white is one of those cool combinations that is ideal for summer use and that is just as good looking and sophisticated at the window as it is in women's apparel.

Another extra nice summer fabric shows reddish brown flowers in a small bouquet effect against a soft, pale blue ground. This carries out the two tone idea that is so good, as already mentioned.

Putty colored grounds display old fashioned garden blossoms in all their beauty, and a light green ground is used with more flowers, which, oddly enough, twine around swirling ostrich plumes in an artificial but captivating manner.

Polka dots are very good for summer draperies. Gay and debonair, they give any room cachet. Some curtains come already made up in blue with white dots—quite large ones—trimmed with white ball fringe. Other ready to hang draperies may be had in almost any of the wide variety of glazed chintzes now on the market.

This company is bringing out a new material—a glazed linen that comes 50 inches wide and is really lovely. It is patterned after old Spanish leather in its rich, mellow colors and shows a floral design in shades of blue-green, old yellows, and rose against a ground of walnut brown. Something different and distinctive.

There is a whole field of fabrics, planned especially for children, that we have not time to touch on today, except to say that all youngsters must delight in the kittens, puppies, and ponies we saw pictured on glazed chintz when we were looking at the new materials.

The pictures today show a window dressed in its summer clothes and one of the popular patriotic drapery fabrics.

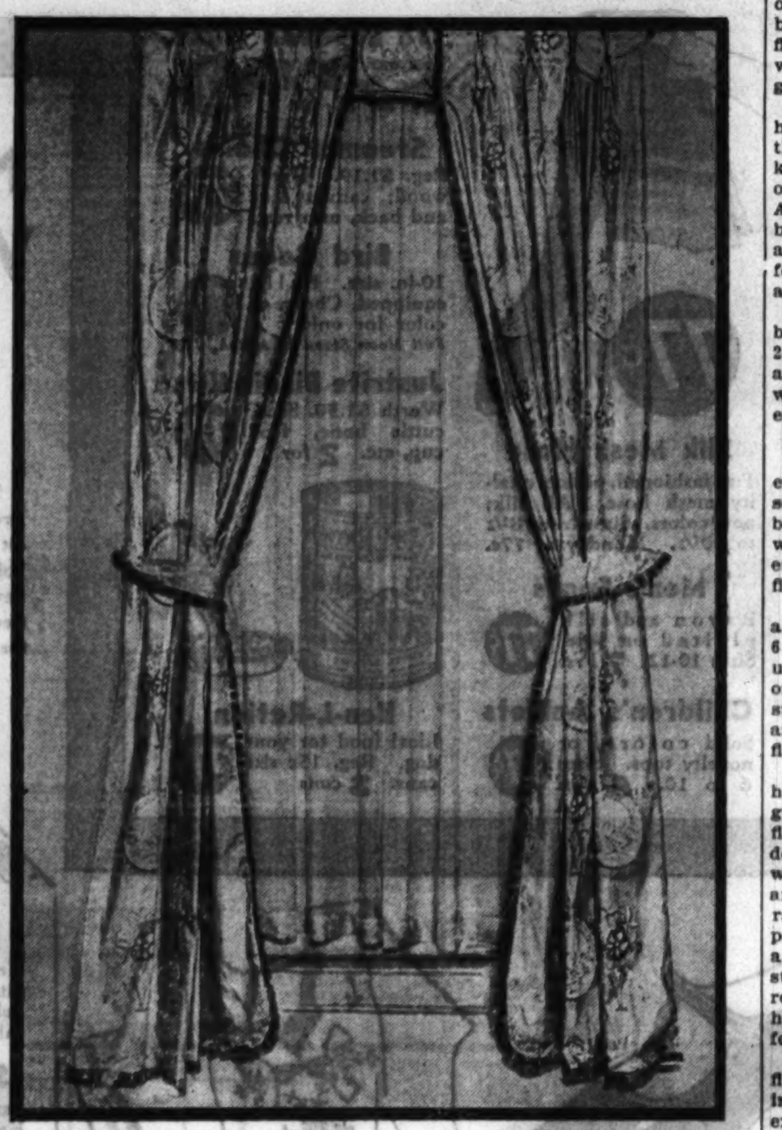
The window draperies are ones that come ready made and are glazed chintz with ruffled edges. The design shows a pair of cooing doves in a wreath, and quaint little baskets of flowers in a fairly small repeat pattern against a light putty ground.

The other picture shows the pattern of one of the patriotic printed fabrics and is called the John Paul Jones. The engravings and ancient documents that inspired this design are now in the British museum. In the medallion is a portrait of the American hero and in the floral wreath a picture of a naval battle in which he participated. The colors are soft blue-greens, dull rose, white, etc., on a beige ground. Other color combinations are also to be had.

A most interesting material that goes by the name of "dourette" and "raw silk" attracted us particularly because it comes in such luscious colors and is so refreshingly different from many upholstery and drapery fabrics. It has a weave a little like monk's cloth and a finish like suede, but is silky and rich in appearance and comes in beautiful shades of pinks: coral, watermelon, rose; and in dull blues, greens, and yellows.

It is not an inexpensive material but wears like iron, so we're told, and it certainly has a great deal of artistic beauty and heaps of style. It would be stunning as a covering for a modern sofa, or for chairs in the modern manner.

Modern chintzes are colorful and lovely, too. One design called the tennis raquet showed lines of varying thickness in black on a ground of lemon yellow, lavender, orange, etc. These lines built up squares in a very clever way. Another modern pattern showed gay phlox in all their brilliant colors and mass effects against a neutral background, and a third sketched a file of amusing deer cantering across the width of the material.



Curtains, showing a basket of flowers and doves in a wreath, come already made. Colors are greens and pinks on a putty ground.

French, Early American or Cape Cod Style

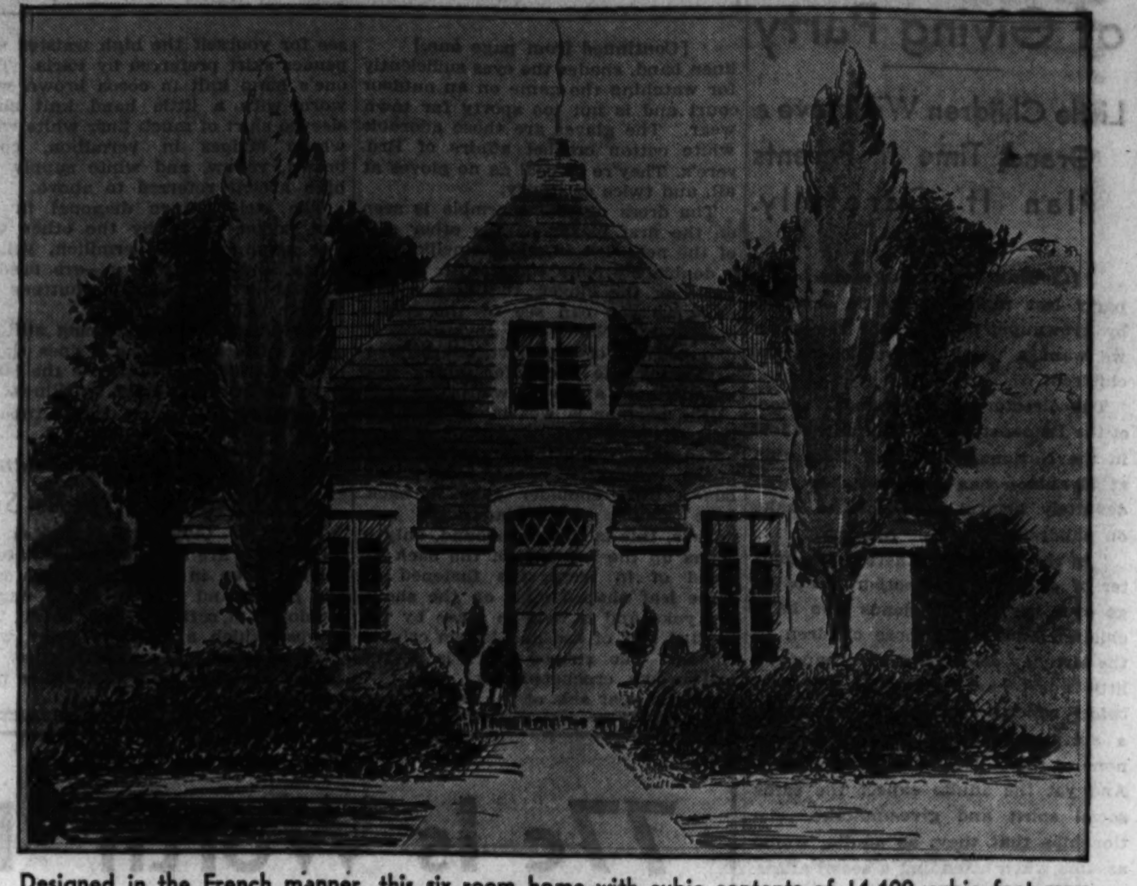
Floor Plans Are Identical for Each Type and Utilize Every Bit of Space.

[Proofs of floor plans of these houses may be secured by sending stamped, addressed envelope to Louise Bargelt, Home Builders' Editor, The Chicago Sunday Tribune.]

By Louise Bargelt.

WE are showing something a little different this week! Three different exteriors or elevations have been drawn, but with the floor plans identical. That is, a prospective owner may choose one of three possible exteriors for his home: a French type of dwelling, an Early American, or a Cape Cod colonial.

The architect of these designs is Frederick E. Sloan, 513 Oakdale avenue, Chicago. The houses can be built along the lines suggested in this article for approximately $5,300 each. Their cubic content is 14,400 cubic feet and the plan of the houses is in each case a perfect square of thirty feet. Each of them is adaptable to a forty foot lot.



Designed in the French manner, this six room home with cubic contents of 14,400 cubic feet may be built at an estimated cost of $5,300. Architect, Frederick E. Sloan, 513 Oakdale avenue, Chicago.

New Feature.

To build a six room house in the $5,000 class, even in these days of reduced costs, the architect has felt that a slight departure from some of the features of the ordinary six room house of the past was desirable. Three of these outstanding features, are, briefly, as follows:

No basement is built, thus cutting out the cost of excavation, concrete basement floor and four walls. The first floor of this house is a five inch waterproof slab of concrete laid on ground level with a cinder base.

The second feature is a sizeable heating and storage room placed on the ground floor accessible from the kitchen entry. [Hot water heat with oil burner or gas boiler is suggested.] And, of course, if one really wants a basement it can easily be provided and the extra heater room employed for library, regulation dining room, or additional bedroom.

The third feature is a large combination living room and dining room, 28 feet long, 12 feet wide in the front, and 13 feet 6 inches wide in the back, which is utilized as the dining room end.

Floor Plan Explained.

At the right of the central hall is a door which leads into a room 10 feet 6 inches by 11 feet. This room may be used as a study, library, card room or bedroom. Being at the foot of the stairs it is quite direct to the bath at the head of the stairs on the second floor.

The kitchen, at the back of the house, 11 feet by 8 feet, has the suggested layout of furnishings on the floor plan. These are to include a double drain board sink, three cabinets with work tops, a cabinet for brooms and mops, a refrigerator, and a gas range. At the kitchen entry is a pantry or store room, needed where a house has no basement, and two steps down from this is the heating room, which contains boiler, hot water heating and storage tank, and space for laundry equipment.

The boiler flue and the fireplace flue are separate flues, but are built in one chimney coming up at the exact center of the house. This central location of the boiler is an economical arrangement as it means short runs for all the heating pipes. This cannot always be done as the design of a residence governs the location of the boiler, but in this case the solution has been a fortunate one.

Above, on the second floor, are two bedrooms, one 10 feet 6 inches by 13 feet 6 inches, and the other, 9 feet by 12 feet. There are also a bathroom, three clothes closets, two storage closets, one at the rear of each bedroom, and a linen closet.

List of Specifications.

The exterior walls of these homes are of solid brick and the roofs of wood shingles stained brown-blue-green, but not spotted. Below is a brief list of specifications:

Masonry—The concrete foundations to extend 3 feet 6 inches below the grade. First floor a concrete slab over a cinder base. Finished floors of oak, linoleum and composition. The chimney is common brick with cement cap and terra cotta flue linings.

Carpentry—All the framing and structural timbers are to be of yellow pine, while the exterior frame, doors, and windows are of white pine. Interior trim and doors to be birch. Floors of oak in living room, bedrooms, and closets. Linoleum in the kitchen. Colored composition floor in bathroom and colored concrete floor in heating room. Stair treads to be oak.

Insulation—Exterior walls and roof. Roof is doubly insulated.

Plaster—Metal lath and plaster.

Plumbing—Colored or white; six foot double drain board kitchen sink, automatic hot water heater and tank, floor drain in heating room.

Heating—Hot water boiler fueled with oil or gas.

Electric Wiring—Ceiling outlets, base plugs, switches, and wall plugs for appliances such as refrigerator, oil burner, curling irons, and kitchen exhaust fan. Thirty-two outlets contemplated.

Sheet Metal—Galvanized iron gutters and down spouts and flashings where dormers and roof join.

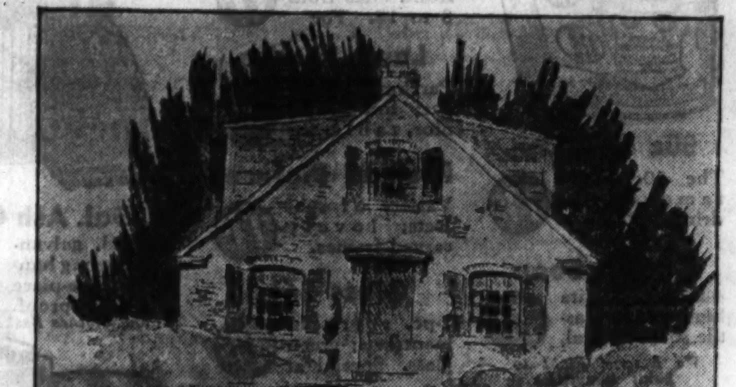
Decorating—Walls in living room, kitchen, heating room and bath to be painted. Walls in bedrooms to be papered with wall paper to cost not less than 80 cents a roll. Ceilings in living room and bedrooms to be calcimined and in the kitchen, bath and heating room to be painted.

All Space Utilized.

Many conveniences, one can see, may be purchased here for within a budget range of some $5,000. The cubage of the house is kept low and the construction and equipment specified are excellent. Simplicity, moreover, is firmly adhered to throughout and the floor plan utilizes practically every square foot of floor space for living purposes.

Whatever the architectural style of the house may be, according to individual preference, purse, and house site on which it is to be built, the house is primarily to be lived in. Floor plans are therefore vastly important and it goes without saying that they can make a house a success or a failure.

Many different opinions prevail at the present time on the subject of the basement. Some claim it is disappearing and frankly say they hope it is. Others view in alarm certain modern tendencies and frankly declare they "never would have a house without a cellar."

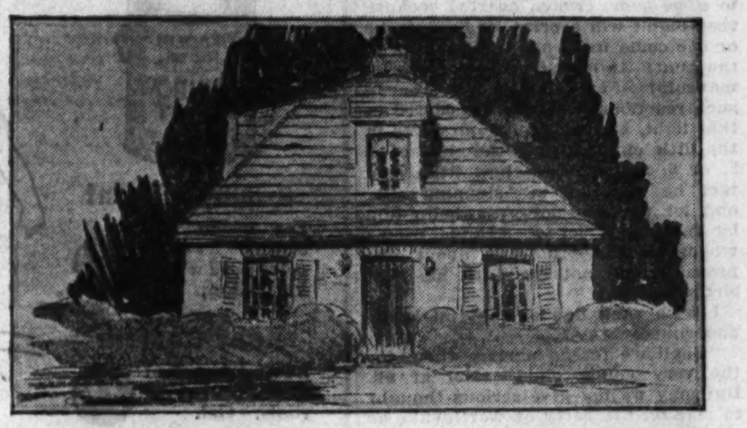


Another exterior rendering of the same house, this time designed in the spirit of the Early American dwelling. The floor plans of all three homes are identical, as are costs and cubic contents.

For some years many architects and builders have insisted that we were building too much basement, that we build them three and four times larger than necessary and that a basement under only a fourth of the house is large enough. With the high costs prevalent a few years ago attention was called to utilizing the basement area for various much discussed uses. Then began discussion, serious discussion, of eliminating it altogether.

Money Saved.

Naturally, money is saved by doing away with it entirely. Laundry equipment, hot water heater, incinerator, and storage space may be contained in a large heater room above grade, this heater to be fueled with oil or gas. And, in addition to money saved, think of the steps and the work saved; the cleaning, the firing, the numerous trips to the basement in the course of the days and the weeks.



Suggestive of Cape Cod is this dwelling. The heater room has been placed above ground and basement eliminated. If preferred, of course, a basement may be put under the home.

Moreover, when the heater room is large enough space may be salvaged for the storing of tools, screens, storm windows, and so on.

Now, this is no argument for or against the basementless house, but merely a pointing out of the various arguments in its favor which its defendants put forth. It's decidedly a new idea.

It will probably be some years before we see basements in any great numbers disappearing from our midst. That remains for the home building public to decide and for each individual family to determine for itself. We show houses from time to time in this department, minus that old and established cellar-basement. We are all interested in economies of one sort or another these days, and in new ideas, too, whether we are ready to adopt them into the bosom of our home and families or not.

But we say, too, that if any one has his doubts as to whether he wants a basementless house or not, he had better have a basement and not take the chance until he is a little more certain of whether or not he would like it. A basement is a simple thing to put under a house and because a house is shown as basementless does not mean you can't have one for the asking!

Wait until you have some definite opinions on the subject. If you are sold on the idea, and it's a great little idea, go ahead. Otherwise just be bold enough to say the few words necessary to putting the basement in your house and wait until you really are convinced of what you want before you pioneer!

Appropriate Fences.

There are many types of fences which one might erect around small houses such as these and this is the season of year when the subject of fencing is considered anew, especially where there are small children and the need for safety is uppermost in the parents' minds. Besides this safety angle, fences afford privacy to any home, large or small, with children or without.

Naturally a fence should be chosen with a view to the architecture of the house. For the two colonial homes shown today the picket fence is always in good taste and effective.

Then, too, there are the many interesting varieties of wire or lawn fencing. The meshes into which the galvanized wire is woven may be oblong or square with a double number of wires sometimes at the bottom, so that youngsters' toes cannot slip into the holes! The posts which support this type of fence may be of wood or metal. And since this lawn or wire fencing is one of the most inexpensive types, and also durable, it is a popular method of "hedging" in one's home. Painting when necessary is important, as the galvanizing will not stand up indefinitely and should be watched and painted when needed, if such a fence is to last its allotted span of life, that is from ten to twenty years.

Woven Wood and Chain.

Besides the picket fence, well known to us from colonial days, there are woven wood fences, rustic in effect, which are of comparatively recent manufacture. These fences made of chestnut or cedar saplings and bound together by wire are more expensive than the simple lawn fences, but with this woven wood fence no upkeep is necessary in painting. They weather a soft brown with the years. One point to be mentioned is the the fact that it insures much the same privacy as does a brick or stone wall, for it is a veritable screen, shutting one in from the passing world.

New Styles for Sun Rooms and Terraces in American Homes Call for Wide Variety of Furniture and Fabrics

By WillElla de Campi.

SINCE sun rooms and terraces have become important adjuncts of our American homes [whether they be country houses or city apartments], designers and manufacturers have busied themselves with the creation of wide and varied selections of furniture fabrics and accessories to fit every need and purse. Practically all the necessary appointments are chosen with a view to decorative qualities as well as utility.

Furniture of reed, willow, fiber, rattan, wrought iron, or any of the metals so effectively used in the modern manner, may be employed to excellent advantage either in the wholly enclosed sun room or on the terrace which is partially exposed to the elements. Terra cotta and glazed Ital- delightful wall brackets make fasci- ian urns, interesting metal stands, and nating repositories for the growing plants and flowers which are so essential to the maintenance of a summery atmosphere. Tables with tile or glass tops [the newest ones in colored glass to match part of the color scheme of the room], add to the feeling of comfort and decorative charm.

As for suitable fabrics, there is no end to the variety of alluring patterns, gay stripes, plaids, and plain materials which may be had now in sunfast and waterproofed quality. In a sun room which directly adjoins the living room by means of a wide open doorway or arch, the choice of fabrics and colors must be governed, of course, by the decoration of the inner room. One or two of the warmer tones used in the adjoining room may be repeated in the sun room draperies and upholstery, with accents of vivid contrasting color.

Because so much space is taken up by windows, the choice of curtains and draperies is of utmost importance. In some instances, glass curtains may be supplanted by Venetian blinds. Draperies hanging at the ends of window groups are optional. As a general rule it is best to hang plain materials at the sun room windows, since patterned fabrics at so many windows are liable to present a sense of overbalance and confusion. Leave the figured stuffs to upholstery and floor coverings.

White lacquered stick reed furniture contrasts with the coral rough plaster and green and white rug of this interesting little sun room.

A novel window treatment which is most attractive, and which could easily be carried out in any color scheme, curtains the windows in the sun room of a country house. The curtains are of loosely woven net hung in three layers. The first is corn yellow, the second dull turquoise, and the third pale coral. They are joined together only at the top, then looped back for the color effect. This arrangement gives a decidedly pleasing impression of coolness.

The continuing vogue for white extends now to sun room and terrace furniture. Rattan, stick reed and iron pieces finished in white are especially effective. In the sun room illustrated today the furniture is of stick reed, lacquered gleaming white. Fitted, removable cushions are covered with waterproofed chintz with a design of coral and white flowers and deep green leaves on a sage green ground. Conveniently placed about the room are several metal tables with dull green tile tops and wrought iron lamps with shades of white parchment decorated with flowers copied from the chintz.

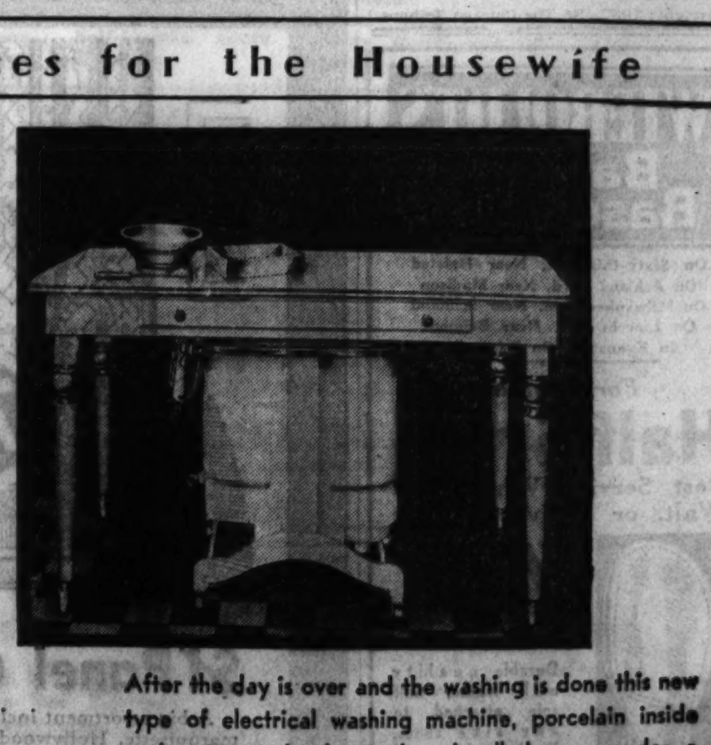
Wrought iron flower stands in front of the long windows are finished in dull green. These stands, especially designed for the small plants so much in vogue at present, offer possibilities for creating delightfully individualized effects—each one a complete little garden in itself.

Glass curtains at the windows are of pale coral square meshed net, made quite full and hanging straight. Long draperies at the ends of the window groups are of a shiny white water proofed fabric, finished with coral and sage green bindings.

Affording an excellent background for the whole scheme are walls of semi-rough plaster, tinted pale coral color. Woodwork is painted sage green with a line of white. On the dull green tile floor there is a green and white fiber rug, treated with a new lacquer finish which harmonizes especially well with the ensemble.

Two Modern Conveniences for the Housewife

No worries here for the housewife who must hold meal until some belated family member arrives on the scene. This kitchen utensil contains units in which not only an entire meal may be cooked, but in which the food may be kept hot and tasty until time to be served.



After the day is over and the washing is done this new type of electrical washing machine, porcelain inside and out, can be lowered and rolled away under a table or into a closet corner. A valuable piece of equipment for apartment or small home dwellers.

Graceful Flare Marks Skirts of New Patterns

By Clotilde.

THIS new bolero dress made by pattern No. 484 is one you can't afford to be without, for when the warm summer days come it will be just what you will turn to.

The dress and little jacket are as easy as can be to cut and make, and the cost will be surprisingly low. The front of the waist and skirt are cut in one piece, and there are two side sections, and a back one. The side sections have perforations showing where a plait is to be laid on each front edge. When joined to the front, an inverted plait is formed each side of the front, giving the skirt a graceful flare at the hemline.

Before putting the skirt together, it will be easier to baste the underarm and shoulder seams, try on, and when right stitch. Remove the bastings and press well. The side sections of the skirt are joined to the bottom of the waist at the hipline. Turn under the bottom of the waist and set the side sections under the turned up edge a seam's width. Pin, baste, and stitch twice, once close to the edge, then about one-fourth inch above. When the plaits are laid, baste them from the top, down, and leave these bastings in until the dress is done.

There are two welted pockets each side of the front. Directions for making and setting them in place come with the pattern.

Bind the neck and armholes with a narrow bias binding, and finish the bottom of the dress with a narrow hem.

There is almost nothing to making the jacket. The shoulder and under arm seams are finished, and the fronts and bottom of the jacket hemmed. The sleeves may be bound, or finished with a narrow fitted wrong side facing. A chic bow is sewed to the left side of the jacket near the shoulder.

A navy blue and white dotted silk crêpe will make a smart costume, and cotton mesh, silk piqué, linen, silk broadcloth, or sheer pastel woolens are all lovely for summer wear.

Here is an adorable little French frock for small maidens, and the pattern, No. 3254, is as easy as possible to use. There is quite a deep yoke, front and back, and to this the little straight skirt is gathered, but at each side of the center front the skirt is pressed into an inverted plait. A deep hem finishes the dress at the bottom, and a plaited collar finishes the neck. The tiny puffed sleeves are set into narrow bands.

French blue dimity showing white dots, with the collar of white plaited organdy, will be dear. This plaiting may be bought ready to sew on. However, the pattern provides for a plaited collar, if you wish to make it of the dress material.

The lines of the frock made by pattern No. 2662 are slenderizing and kind to the mature figure. As you can see, the wrapped treatment of the bodice narrows its breadth. The side buttoned closing of the hip yoke is another becoming detail, and the gracefully cut skirt is set on to the hip yoke in a scalloped outline. Each circular gore widens into a gracefully flared hem.

For size 36, the skirt measures at the bottom about 3⅝ yards. After the skirt and waist are joined the dress had better hang for several days. This allows it to stretch, for anything circular will sag.

Any of the new day fabrics will be suitable, such as flat silk crêpe, crinkle crêpe, and the sheer woolens.

Unwanted Ounces Banned by Captivating Women

Meals Planned with an Eye on Caloric Chart Insure the Trim Silhouette in Demand Today.

By Antoinette Donnelly.

TODAY I offer you a table of calories with the request that you cut this out of the paper and tack it upon the wall. This, not so much to set you calorie counting at your meals—but as a food educational feature. When in doubt about this vegetable or that being less fattening, look at the table. So with meats, fruits, fish, and so on.

With this table before you, you can plan menus without having to adhere to a monotonous diet, so varied is the foodstuff with low calorie value. All of this for the leaner limb line and more neatly indented waistline required for the slender supple dress mode.

If the dressing should be too thick it may be diluted with white distilled vinegar. If a tart taste is desired, add six teaspoons of lemon juice, or an amount of vinegar that will give the required tartness. This dressing should be flavored to taste, just as is any mayonnaise.

This dressing may be used freely and the caloric content disregarded.

Adrienne Dore, above, and Evalyn Knapp, below, possess the trim gures demanded by the dictates of modern fashion and beauty, and which are attained by careful attention to diet.

Answers to Beauty Queries

J. P.: I COULDN'T POSSIBLY analyze the ear symptoms, but any ear trouble is too serious not to be submitted at once to an ear specialist.

MARY C: TO GIVE BODY TO that extremely soft fine hair, I don't know anything better than the good old hairbrush used morning and night. You might put a little brilliantine or olive oil on the brush, but not enough to make the hair greasy.

LEE: WASH THE FACE FIRST with the soap and water. Rinse this soap off with clear warm water and then use the cold. The soap wouldn't cause blackheads, but it will help eliminate them.

ELLEN: IN TWO SMALL BAKING powder biscuits there are one hundred calories; a half cup of baked beans has a hundred calories; a tablespoon of jelly is one hundred; and a third of the average ice cream soda portion has one hundred calories.

LYDIA: ONE OUGHT NEVER BE ashamed of one's hands. The care of the nails is now a simple home treatment with the aid of the efficient little manicuring sets we have and the fine hand skin food products on the market.

FIFTEEN: AT 15 DON'T GO ON any kind of strenuous reducing diet. You need good meals to grow on but if you're overeating sweets and starches you could eliminate these for a while with benefit to your figure.

BETTY R.: WHEN THE HAIR becomes dry the scalp is itchy and usually the hair falls out. You need a course in scalp stimulation. This you can do at home, if you will send a self-addressed, stamped envelope for my pamphlet on hair.

ALMA: SCARS THAT ARE LEFT from boils and other eruptions had better be treated by a skin specialist.

T. M.: IT MAY NOT BE A TONIC you need for your weight increase. You may not be eating rightly or living to give yourself a chance to put on weight. Please send for my booklet on weight gaining which covers all of the angles of weight increase.

ELSIE: BRUSHING DAILY, AS you say, will increase the growth of hair because you stimulate the glands and blood vessels that contribute to growth. Also, healthy diets are beneficial.

MRS. J. H.: YOU WANT TO LOSE thirty pounds in as short time as possible? Don't think of weight loss, please, in terms of quick reducing. Two pounds a week is the safest amount that can be lost in recovering the old girlish figure.

J. M.: THE UPPER PART OF the back and across the shoulder line is a common gathering place for pimples, due generally to the failure to reach this section with scrubbing brush and soap when bathing.

MRS. H. J.: ONE HUNDRED AND sixty-five pounds at your age is just about 20 pounds more than you need. Don't bother with those baths you ask about. Go on a sane diet and exercise program. Mine is yours for the asking and a stamped, addressed envelope.

Fur Scarcity Sends the Eskimos Back to Primitive Life

ANCHORAGE, Alaska.—(AP)—It's back to their primitive ways of living for many natives of Alaska. Scarcity of furs in the interior is compelling the Eskimos to give up habits acquired from the white man.

Without furs the natives are unable to buy food and other niceties introduced to the frozen northland by advancing civilization, and the Eskimos must revert to living on the country again.

Aviators who visited numerous trapping districts said the Eskimos evidently were not suffering from the change.

Bolero Suit Is Fashion's Edict for College Girl

PARIS. — (AP) — Bolero suits are fashion's spring edict for the college girl. One of the smartest designs is of green faille designed with a high-waisted skirt and a straight long-sleeved bolero which is short enough to reveal several inches of a crisp white dotted swiss blouse flecked with green dots. It is worn with a green straw sailor hat.

Two Women's Combined Ages Are 202 Years

With combined ages of 202 years, Mrs. Bridget McLaughlin, 100, and Mrs. Catherine Kerick, 102, are believed to be the oldest living sisters in America. Both were born in Ireland and are residents of Belleville, Ill.

Miss Lea Hing is believed to be the first woman of China to pilot an airplane. She is training for a license at Portland, Ore.

Did You Know!

That the Washington Monument was originally intended to be an equestrian statue of the great American patriot, and stands on what would have been a site of an equestrian statue of George Washington had the vote of the Continental Congress in 1783 been carried out to the letter?

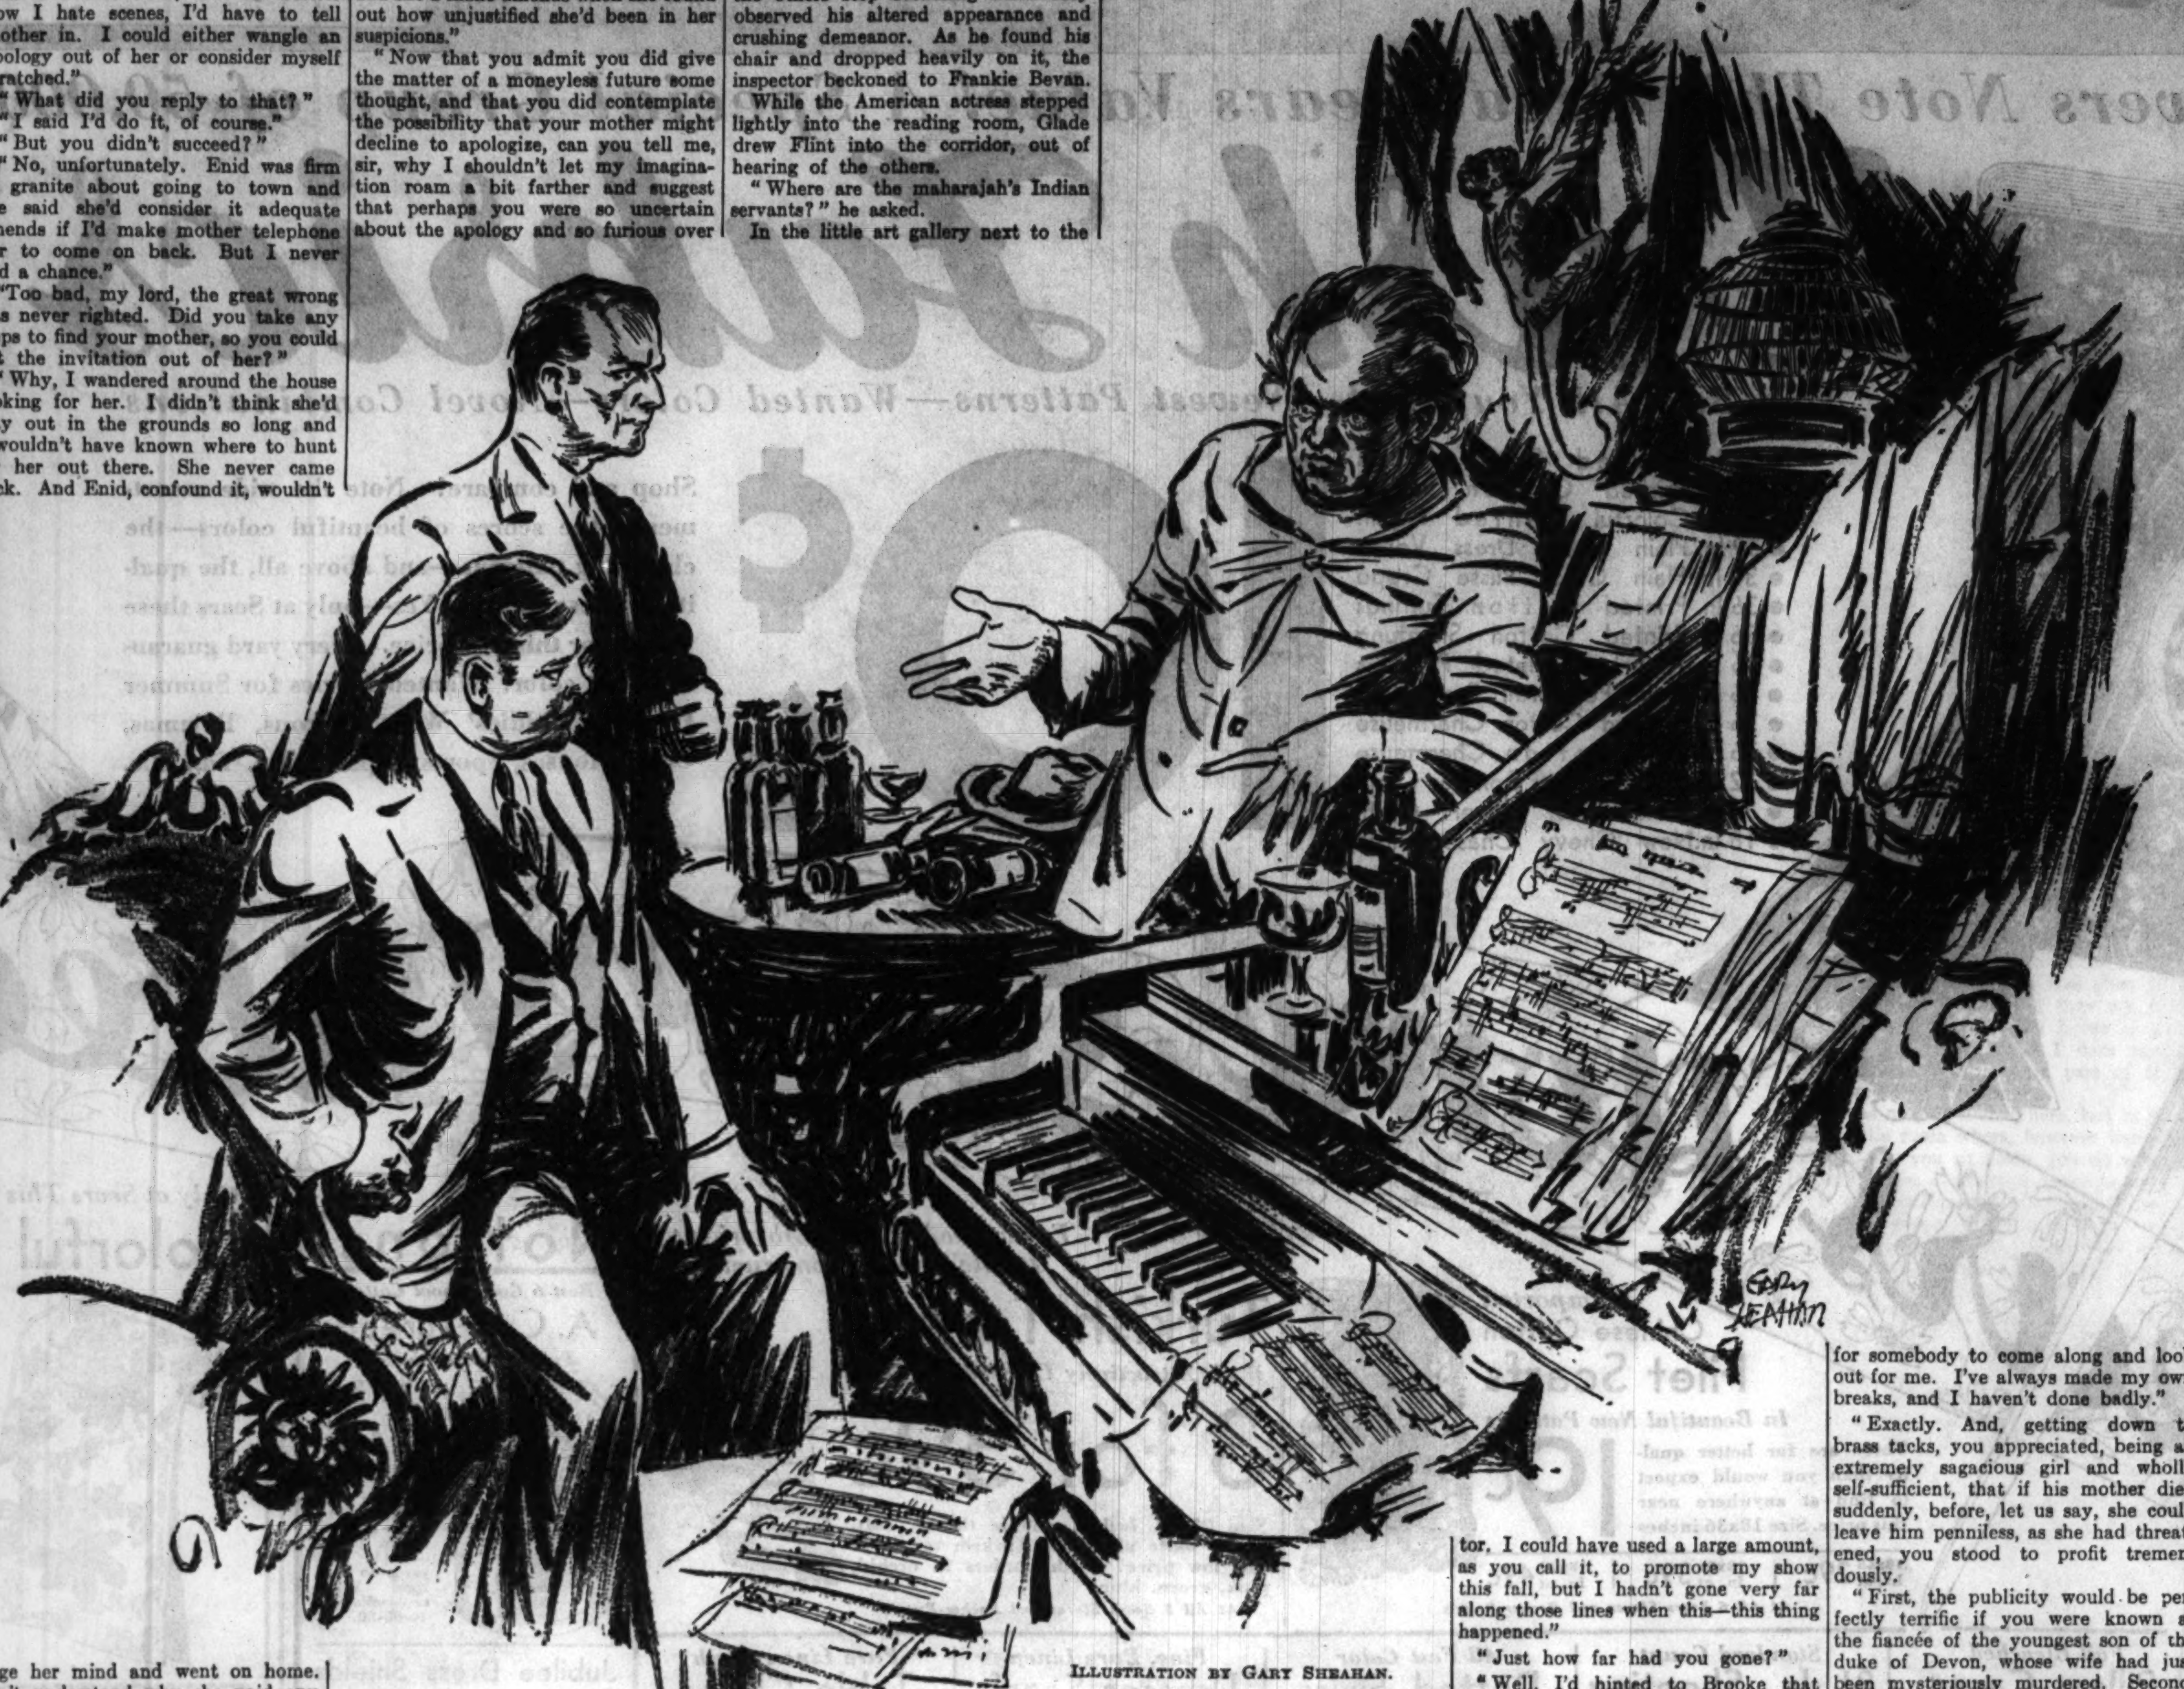
The Death of the Duchess

by COSMO HAMILTON & SIDNEY SUTHERLAND



"I weel tell you. I do not know eef the solution of thees mystery lie in the secret—you shall have to decide that—because the secret is a very seemple one."

ILLUSTRATION BY GARY SHEAHAN.

What Has Gone Before:

At at house party at Weir castle the duchess of Devon, American-born heiress, startles her husband, her two sons, her daughter, and her guests by telling them she is about to seek a divorce from the duke, known as "Beauty," and then telling each one, with the exception of her daughter and two guests, why she despises them. She walks into the garden alone. When the guests and family assemble for dinner, her grace fails to appear. A half hour after the dinner hour the butler dashes in to announce that the duchess' lifeless body has been found in the castle grounds. The police are sent for, and Inspector Glade of Scotland Yard takes charge of the case when it is indicated that the duchess has been murdered. He questions each one in turn.

INSTALLMENT VI.

Blackmail.

GEORGE flung himself into the chair under the raised lamp shade, thrust his pudgy hands in his pockets, and stared moodily at the detective.

"My Lord," said Glade, feeling that this plump young man might be exceedingly mulish at times, "have you any idea, even the vaguest, how your mother died tonight?"

"Of course I haven't. If I knew I'd have told Flint and he needn't have sent for you. We rather expect you to tell us that."

"I know. But you know the guests and servants here, and I hoped that with your help we might stumble on a clew. This whole thing is highly regrettable, and I'm sure every one here is eager to avoid the attention of the press. And yet——"

"It's regrettable in more ways than one, you may be sure of that," George interrupted.

"What do you mean?"

"It's horrible to have my mother die like this, of course. And now she can never make the apology I was going to demand."

"What apology? Apologize to whom?"

"Why, to Enid. Miss Forbes, I mean. I want to marry Miss Forbes, and she was grossly insulted today."

"She was? In what way?"

"You don't mean to say you haven't found out about that rotten scene on the porch?"

"Yes, I've been told about that."

"Well, did you hear about what my mother said to Miss Forbes?"

"Yes."

"If you know all that, why ask me who had an apology coming?"

"But maybe your mother believed she was warranted in what she said."

"I don't care what she believed. She wasn't. You never met my mother, so you don't know, of course, what you're talking about. Here we've gone along all our lives believing she was sort of a saint, or something like that. I know damned well what she had to put up with from father all these years, but it's out of fashion to expect a man like him to sit around in carpet slippers in the evenings. He's got his rights, too, you know.

"But what have Brooke and I done that she should suddenly stab us in the back? We've asked her for money. Lots of times. Why not? Brooke's been trying to make a living, even if he has been unlucky so far. And I was planning to get around to doing something myself. Meantime, what's wrong with getting help from the mater? She had oodles of it, and the interest on it quickly replaced what little we've needed. We'd have got it from father, but he was always strapped. Fact is, that's why he married mother. Everybody knows that.

"Anyhow, there's nothing any of us have done to excuse the way she went after Frankie and Enid. Frankie works for a living. And Enid was going to marry me. I think mother must have been balmy. If not, then she's been hiding an awful temper under that pleasant surface of hers all these years.

"And now Enid'll never get the apology she deserves!"

Glade stared at the fat, pouting lips. There didn't seem to be anything to say, anything anybody could say, in response to this tirade. The heir could look at this crisis solely from his own point of view, he had never looked at anything except from that point.

"Pardon me, my lord, but from what I've been told tonight I think I'd be justified in regarding the duchess as a long suffering, exceedingly patient woman who deserved no little sympathy."

"Let me tell you, inspector, you don't know what you're talking about. And it isn't important, one way or the other, what you think. Just because mother had an attack of nerves that bowled her over so she went off her base, that doesn't let her out for charging Enid with the things she did."

WAS every human in this castle an egomaniac, the detective wondered. Was he going to find, save Elissa, a single creature here who wasn't the center of gravity in this exalted level of society? Was there, on these premises, no gratitude to the dead woman? Had she been just an insect caught in a network of ambitions and self-centered perspectives, a mere stepping stone for the men and women who so insolently condescended to be guests in her home?

"Then, I take it, you disbelieve absolutely what your mother said about Miss Forbes and the duke?"

"O, the duke. I'd believe almost anything about my father, inspector. But not in connection with Miss Forbes. She's the sweetest, truest, finest woman in the world, and it was a damned shame to daub her with all those charges. Luckily nobody'd believe a word of it, if it got around what mother said about them."

"Did you have an opportunity to talk it over with Miss Forbes before she departed for the city?"

"Yes, I went up to her rooms after I'd figured she'd had time to calm down a bit, and I found her packing to go back to London."

"You did? And what did she say?"

"She said just what I expected her to say. I'd have been disappointed if she'd taken it otherwise. She said that if I loved her, that no matter how I hate scenes, I'd have to tell mother in. I could either wangle an apology out of her or consider myself scratched."

"What did you reply to that?"

"I said I'd do it, of course."

"But you didn't succeed?"

"No, unfortunately. Enid was firm as granite about going to town and she said she'd consider it adequate amends if I'd make mother telephone her to come on back. But I never had a chance."

"Too bad, my lord, the great wrong was never righted. Did you take any steps to find your mother, so you could get the invitation out of her?"

"Why, I wandered around the house looking for her. I didn't think she'd stay out in the grounds so long and I wouldn't have known where to hunt for her out there. She never came back. And Enid, confound it, wouldn't change her mind and went on home. I can't understand why she paid any attention to that sergeant and returned tonight. I couldn't make her stay."

"Has Miss Forbes an income? I understand she keeps a lovely establishment in town, and that costs money these days."

"No. Enid is a poor girl. I've made her little advances from time to time, just as I would any pal. When she married me that would be taken care of, naturally. We'd just forget it."

"THE money for those friendly little loans came, I suppose, from the duchess?"

"Certainly. Where else would they come from?"

"Where else, indeed? And where did you expect to obtain the money to continue the little advances after what your mother said this afternoon?"

"O, I knew she'd swing around after she got over her temper."

"But suppose she had lived and hadn't swung around, and had adhered to her threat to cut you and your father and brother off the allowance list?"

"Well, isn't there some law or something that would stop such nonsense?"

"I don't know, my lord, whether we have such a statute or not. Frankly I hope not. In any event, if you gave the matter any thought at all, beyond feeling confident that she'd swing around, or that the British constitution would protect your rights, as you call them, how did you suppose she would go about cutting off the funds of the men in this family?"

"I didn't give that much thought, of course. But, since you mention it, I suppose she'd have just said no to our requests, and would also change her will."

"Change her will, how? Do you happen to know what her will provided—or did provide unless she changed it, say, this morning, before she decided to go out on the porch and inform you of her plans?"

George bolted upright and stared wildly at the detective.

"Good Lord, man, you don't suppose she did such a thing, do you?"

"I haven't any idea. But why should that be so terrifying?"

"Because I happen to know she did provide generously for me in her will.

"Why, I asked her one day what she had done to take care of things in the event she died suddenly, and she told me to trot along and quit worrying about her health."

"Are you sure it didn't occur to you, or to Miss Forbes, while you were discussing it this afternoon that she might be remiss to her duty and change her will?"

George gazed in bewilderment at the inspector.

"How'd you know Enid and I talked about it? Did she tell you?"

"No. I didn't know it. But I could suspect, without an awful strain on my imagination, that Miss Forbes would naturally say something to you about that hideous possibility. Suppose you tell me what she said?"

"Why, I forget which of us brought it up, now that you remind me of it. But we agreed that if mother was still too obstinate to apologize it would be foolish to pick a row with her. We decided to let time heal the old wound and she'd make amends when she found out how unjustified she'd been in her suspicions."

"Now that you admit you did give the matter of a moneyless future some thought, and that you did contemplate the possibility that your mother might decline to apologize, can you tell me, sir, why I shouldn't let my imagination roam a bit farther and suggest that perhaps you were so uncertain about the apology and so furious over the insult that you might very easily settle the whole mixup by going out in the dark and murdering your mother—thus punishing her for her affront to your fiancée while at the same time insuring against any change in the provisions of her will?"

George leaned forward in his chair, his bulbous face paling under the revealing rays of the lamp. He ran a thick tongue over his lips and breathed hoarsely.

"Why—why—you're crazy, man," he muttered. "No matter what could happen to me I could never think of such a thing."

"Couldn't you? Perhaps a jury might have no trouble in thinking of it. What single honorable statement have you made since you entered this room? What single regret for your mother's horrible death have you uttered? What one quality have you displayed except selfishness and unfeeling, unbelievable brutality? What is there about you that would persuade a jury that you wouldn't look after your own self-centered interests to the exclusion of everything else?

You admit you'd be penniless if your mother cut you off. You have now, and you've probably had all day, a secret fear that your fiancée might discard you if you had an empty title and no funds. You aren't sure, down in your heart, this very moment, and you haven't been since the scene on the porch, that Enid Forbes hasn't been all that your mother called her. And you've actually hated your mother since she trampled on your pride by likening you to a greedy pig with both feet in the trough of her fortune.

"Why, my dear sir, if it is a motive we're hunting, I haven't yet talked to a person tonight who has a more impelling motive than you, especially if egged on by an adventuress bent on capturing your title, even if you have to be thrown into the bargain.

"YOU wonder why she came running back here tonight when Sergeant Flint called her. At least you say you wonder. Well, think this over; what would a jury think if it were told that your father's mistress quarreled with your mother out in the dark and in the storm a few moments before she was murdered? What's to prevent the jury from believing you were present at that meeting between your mother and a desperate, scheming woman who saw all her plans collapsing and who had you wound around her little finger like a worm?

"When you regain the use of your vocal chords I'd be highly interested to hear what you have to say in response to my speculations and my questions. In the meantime, I don't want to hear your voice again. Go back into the library and sit down until I decide what I'm going to do with you."

Glade opened the door and the stupefied young man stumbled weakly into the library. You could almost see the others stop breathing when they observed his altered appearance and crushing demeanor. As he found his chair and dropped heavily on it, the inspector beckoned to Frankie Bevan.

While the American actress stepped lightly into the reading room, Glade drew Flint into the corridor, out of hearing of the others.

"Where are the maharajah's Indian servants?" he asked.

In the little art gallery next to the reading room," Flint replied.

"Did they find Bendage's valet?"

"Yes. He's a Frenchman, the brother of Josette, the duchess' own maid. He's in the kitchen with the rest of the help. Harrigan is guarding them."

"DID you impress on Constable Carter that he was to watch Bombarrassi closely to prevent his trying to kill himself?"

"Yes. There's not a chance of that."

"When Lady Elissa and young Hopkins left the library, did they give you the impression that they were in any particular rush?"

"They did. She motioned to him and they went out immediately and hurried down the hall."

"I wonder where they went?"

"I can tell you where they first went," Flint said. "I called Ransome out here and told him to follow them and report to me what they did first. You instructed that they were not to be under surveillance, but I was interested because of the way they left, almost before your back was turned."

"Right. Thanks. What did Ransome report?"

"He followed them, at a distance, and they went to the duchess' suite. They entered her reception room and closed the door. I don't know if they are still there."

"Well, it's all right. Still, I was a bit perplexed by something Bendage told me; something she neglected to talk about. However, I can ask her about it later. What have those people in there talked about while I've been in the reading room?"

"At first they were all speechless. They seemed dazed. But as they've returned, one by one, from their interviews with you they seemed to cheer up a bit and they talked as lightly as they could on different subjects, anything except the murder. But for the last hour or so they've relapsed into silence and now they're looking at each other uncertainly, almost suspiciously, wondering what each has told you. They're all worrying now. Nobody, however, has mentioned the thing uppermost in their minds."

"All right. I don't mind telling you the trail is growing a little warmer and in a most unexpected direction. I expect some interesting developments, especially when I talk to that fat Italian and the young tenor."

They went back into the library and Glade went into the reading room, Flint closing the door behind him. He found Frankie seated with legs crossed and smoking a cigaret. Hair cut short like a boy's, tanned to the color of chocolate as to face and arms and the wide V of her yellow evening gown, her eyebrows plucked thin, she looked as she, herself, would have expressed it—cute! The detective decided she must have a merry, comical face when she laughed and showed her white, even teeth. She was serious now; the fine business woman and ambitious actress alert beneath her usual amiable surface. She had smeared her lips with rouge while waiting for him.

"Miss Bevan," Glade began in a friendly tone, "what did the duchess charge you with this afternoon?"

"Well, I never stall around when I'm in a tough spot. The duchess divided her arraignment of me in three sections. First, she referred to my father as a Chicago racketeer. Second, she saw in my relations with Brooke a plot to entangle him to such an extent that she'd have to pay me blackmail to get rid of me and avert the scandal of having me as a daughter-in-law. And, third, she said I was scheming to borrow from her a sum sufficient to back the show I'm planning to put on in London this fall."

"Thanks for your frankness, Miss Bevan. Was she justified in making these allegations?"

"She was not."

"Well, was she untruthful in any of them?"

"No."

"As to the accusation that you were planning to blackmail the duchess via Brooke's heartstrings?"

"That isn't exactly true. In my profession I should have profited enormously from the publicity that would follow any clever press agentry about my becoming engaged to the second son of the duke of Devon. A title is always desirable for an actress."

"Were your affections in any degree won by Brooke? That is, would you have married him?"

"O, sure. But what have my affections to do with it?"

"In other words, the engagement would be merely an astute business stroke?"

"That's right. Just a stunt. My press agent suggested it, in the first place, when the young fellow came around trying to peddle one of his plays."

"AND since money was the ultimate aim of the stunt, as you call it, it wouldn't have made any difference to you, would it, whether you got the money from the public attracted to the box office by the publicity, or from the duchess, to avoid the publicity."

"Right again."

"Then you would have accepted from her a large sum to discourage the young would-be playwright?"

"Yes. But that's an angle that came up later. Primarily it was the publicity that would follow an engagement to Beauty's son. Afterwards I decided I didn't care who paid."

"So that her use of the word blackmail wasn't really, wholly without justification?"

"Well, suit yourself, inspector. Nothing came of it but all this horrible mess, so what's the difference?"

"It may make a lot of difference before we're through. It's still publicity, isn't it? Now, about the third and final charge, that you were counting on borrowing some large amount from her?"

"Yes and no to that one, inspector. I could have used a large amount, as you call it, to promote my show this fall, but I hadn't gone very far along those lines when this—this thing happened."

"Just how far had you gone?"

"Well, I'd hinted to Brooke that he might hint to his mother, and he told me that he had, a couple of days ago. I suppose that's what she had in mind."

"Was Lord Brooke enthusiastic over your forthcoming production?"

"Very. I'd talked it over with him and promised to let him do one or two of the sketches. He'd have put up the money himself if he'd had it."

"Exactly. But he didn't have it, and he could get it only from one source—his mother. Did you discuss the crisis with him at any time following the outburst on the porch?"

FRANKIE lowered her eyelids for a moment. When she opened her mouth to answer, Glade understood, perfectly, that she was now going to tell him what she thought would do the least harm—to herself.

"Yes, we talked it over but not at great length. I went up to his rooms after I'd changed from my bathing suit—I'd intended to swim in the lake, but eruption of the duchess stopped all that. He was sitting there pretty worried.

"I asked him what he'd been doing, and he said he'd been committing a lingering murder—killing time. Then I asked him what he was going to do about the vitriol his mother had poured on me, and he said he didn't know what the devil to do. So I told him if he didn't square his mother with me, by making her beg my pardon, our engagement would never take place. He wouldn't believe me at first; told me it wasn't frightfully important, and to buck up and forget it—that his mother was a good old scout and would trot around herself presently and fix it all up with a good, warm handshake.

"But I told him to can the soothing sirup and get it firmly in his mind that I was terribly angry, and he must either do something or I would, the very first time I saw the duchess. He began to cry, so I let him kiss me, and then I returned to my own apartments."

"Yes. But did you talk about his mother's threat to leave him without funds?"

"I—I guess we did, but not in much detail."

"Tell me precisely what was said by each of you, please. You see, Miss Bevan, in my inquiry here I've got what you Americans call a break. That is, you might as well tell me the truth, because I'm going to compare your story with Lord Brooke's, and since you've had no chance to rehearse things since you learned of the duchess' murder I'll find it out if you lie or evade the exact truth. So just speak up."

"Okay, inspector. You win. Well, I asked him what we'd do about our engagement, and about the backing for my show if he should find himself broke. He said he was sure Anita would get over her tantrum and everything'd be all set again. But I felt pretty sure the duchess was all washed up with her family, and I insisted that if we were to be engaged his mother would first have to assure me that she wouldn't really leave him destitute. And he said he'd do anything to prevent her cutting him off for good. So I gave him another kiss.

"After all, it's a cold and cruel world, Mr. Glade, and I've got where I am from a pretty poor start by looking out for myself, and not by waiting for somebody to come along and look out for me. I've always made my own breaks, and I haven't done badly."

"Exactly. And, getting down to brass tacks, you appreciated, being an extremely sagacious girl and wholly self-sufficient, that if his mother died suddenly, before, let us say, she could leave him penniless, as she had threatened, you stood to profit tremendously.

"First, the publicity would be perfectly terrific if you were known as the fiancée of the youngest son of the duke of Devon, whose wife had just been mysteriously murdered. Second, if that murder took place quickly enough, you could still get the backing for your show, because Brooke would not be left destitute. Third, that no matter whether Brooke was left without funds or provided for generously in the duchess' will, the actual murder, itself, would be good for at least a dozen seasons, both in England and in Hollywood.

"In short, without accusing you of the murder or of inciting somebody to commit it, you must agree that you stood to gain incalculably from it. If you profess an inability to see it in that light, you will admit that a jury might."

Frankie Bevan, as today's graphic if inelegant slang has it, took it on the chin without wincing. Too often had her father, now serving thirty years in the penitentiary at Joliet, Illinois, faced the appalling crisis of his gore-drenched career without whimpering.

She drew a deep breath, held it while she envisioned the sinister aftermath to the week-end party which the inspector portrayed, and then smiled as bravely as she might.

"Righto, Mr. Glade. There's really nothing for me to say, is there? There it lays; the duchess is dead—and I can profit from her death as no other actress in all history could. I admit it. And I've only one thing to say—what of it! And what are you going to do about it?"

THE detective smiled tolerantly. He rose from his chair as he answered.

"Just now, I'm going to do nothing about it, Miss Bevan. Frankly, I don't regard you as a charming young woman with a whimsical American impertinence—and a somewhat sophisticated flair for conspiracy; I look at you as merely another possible motive in the murder of the duchess. Where you fit among the other motives I'm uncovering remains to be seen.

"Now trot along back to the library. But, mind you, don't try to whisper to Brooke—Flint'll be watching you!"

She smiled, a bit tensely but gamely, and walked into the library while he held the door open. He turned to Flint.

"Sergeant, I'm going to talk to Bombarrassi. Ransome will take me there.

Just sit tight till I return. Dr. Ferguson, I wish you'd come along, in case the maestro's nerves get the better of him."

As Glade and the physician and the butler approached the east wing, through what seemed miles of corridors whose walls were covered with somber paintings of once lively dukes and duchesses, they could hear the thundering chords of Peer Gynt. Ransome finally opened a door, after knocking in vain, and they gazed upon an astonishing scene. Constable Carter was standing near a window.

Seated at a grand piano in the center of an enormous living room, his feet bare and his back toward them and oblivious of their entry, was Bombarrassi, a mountainous mass of flabby flesh clothed in salmon-pink pajamas which, wet with sweat, clung transparently to his wide shoulders.

In one corner of the room lay an ancient collie gnawing a bone. A little monkey with the face of an Ethiopian imbecile ran up and down a heavy satin window drapery which it was pulling to tatters. Banana skins and walnut shells lay in heaps beneath the agile and chattering simian.

Under a lamp on a long table near the piano were hair brushes, a shaving outfit, several crushed felt hats, a bar of soap, a long loaf of bread from which great chunks had been torn, a zither, a jam pot whose rim was black with sleeping wasps, a pile of orange skins, and numerous empty port bottles.

On top of the musician's massive head was a sleeping canary, its claws fixed firmly in the tousled black hair. Suddenly it awoke and pecked sharply at the scalp beneath, and the Italian stopped playing and slid ponderously around on his bench, as if the canary was a sentinel which had warned him of strangers approaching.

BOMBARRASSI stared at them with little black eyes. He had a series of double chins, released from the starched collar of the library; a mouth like a sensitive and pampered woman's; long artistic fingers that grew like delicate roots from immense, bulbous hands. Sleeping on his great knee, almost buried under the abdominal folds, was a tortoise-shell cat with pink ears.

"Come in, come in, signores," the Italian shouted, waving toward a nearby couch, one of several, which was littered with discarded evening clothes, sheet music, bound volumes of opera scores, bedroom slippers, a violin case, and several large earthenware pots containing brilliant geraniums. "Throw aside that débris, signor inspector, and seet down. Doc-tore, I am recover entirely. My museek, you weel understand; and that so depress group in the libraree. It made me seeck.

"And eet made me seeck, too, my fren, to think of that poor bambina, my leetle Anita, being dead, keeled weethout a chance in the dark, in the storm."

Glade had drawn a chair beside the piano, after motioning to Ransome and Carter to return to the library; while Ferguson found a place on another divan.

"How do you know she was killed without a chance?" Glade asked.

"How could she have a chance, weeth a horrible assassin overpowering her in the dark, weeth no frens near to whom she could scream for help? But, signor, are you certain that my fren, the duchess, was keeled? Could she not have die from the failure of the heart, or the brain?"

"Possibly; but I'm afraid not, Mr. Bombarrassi. And now, let me ask you this: are you anxious that the person who killed the duchess be exposed and punished?"

"Am I anxious? I am most eager that the homicide be avenge and queekly."

"Good! I may count, then, on your sincere coöperation to that end?"

"O, signor, I am your servant to command."

"Thank you. Tell me, now, what the duchess said to you on the porch this afternoon."

"Signor, eet was terrible. Me, Benito Bombarrassi, her fren for nearly twenty-four years, she accuse me of the blackmail. She tell me to my face, the face of her old fren, in the presence of evereebody, that she tire of geeving me money."

"Had she given you money?"

"O, much money."

"Why?"

"Why, she ask me year and years ago to queet all my other pupeels and my concerts and geeve all my time and my so great talent as a teacher of the voice, to Solito. So, all hees life I have been weeth Solito, and she pay me much money."

"But surely she didn't characterize your fees for instructing Solito as blackmail? She must have meant something else, don't you agree?"

Bombarrassi seemed to drop an opaque veil over his porcine eyes as he stared at Glade. Behind that curtain, the detective felt, the active mind of this enormous Latin was reviewing the past, retracing his relations with the duchess down the tunnel of the years. How much would he volunteer, and how much would have to be chiseled out of him? Should he be friendly and persuasive with the Italian, or should he dominate him with threats? Blackmailers, stabbers in the dark, are notoriously averse to facing the danger that goes with their trade, a cowardly profession that best fits into poltroon natures. He'd simply have to decide what attitude to take after the musician had debated within himself.

Bombarrassi sat long in unseeing introspection. He stroked the cat's arched back, her purring the only sound in the big room. The canary had gone back to sleep, its head tucked under a wing, swaying with long practice to the maestro's gestures and shrugs.

"SIGNOR," he said at last, seeming to reënter the room after a journey to the distant cemetery of the buried years, "the duchess spoke the truth. I am, in a sense, a blackmailer of my fren. She pay me for my lessons to Solito, for my exclusive companionship of him. But she also pay me much money for many years for another reason."

"What was the other reason?"

"But steel, I am not a blackmailer," Bombarrassi mused on, deaf to the interruption. "What is blackmail after all, signor? Blackmail, in my opeenion, is the threat to expose some secret the frightened person does not want expose. And I never, never threaten my fren. I love her too much to do that thing. Understand me, please, signor, eet is not the love of a man for a woman that I bear for her—eet is the love of a fren. Moreover, the duchess is never frighten of me."

"But the duchess did have a secret? One that she did not want exposed?"

"Signor, the duchess have a secret, yes. But I do not think she care, especially of the late years, whether

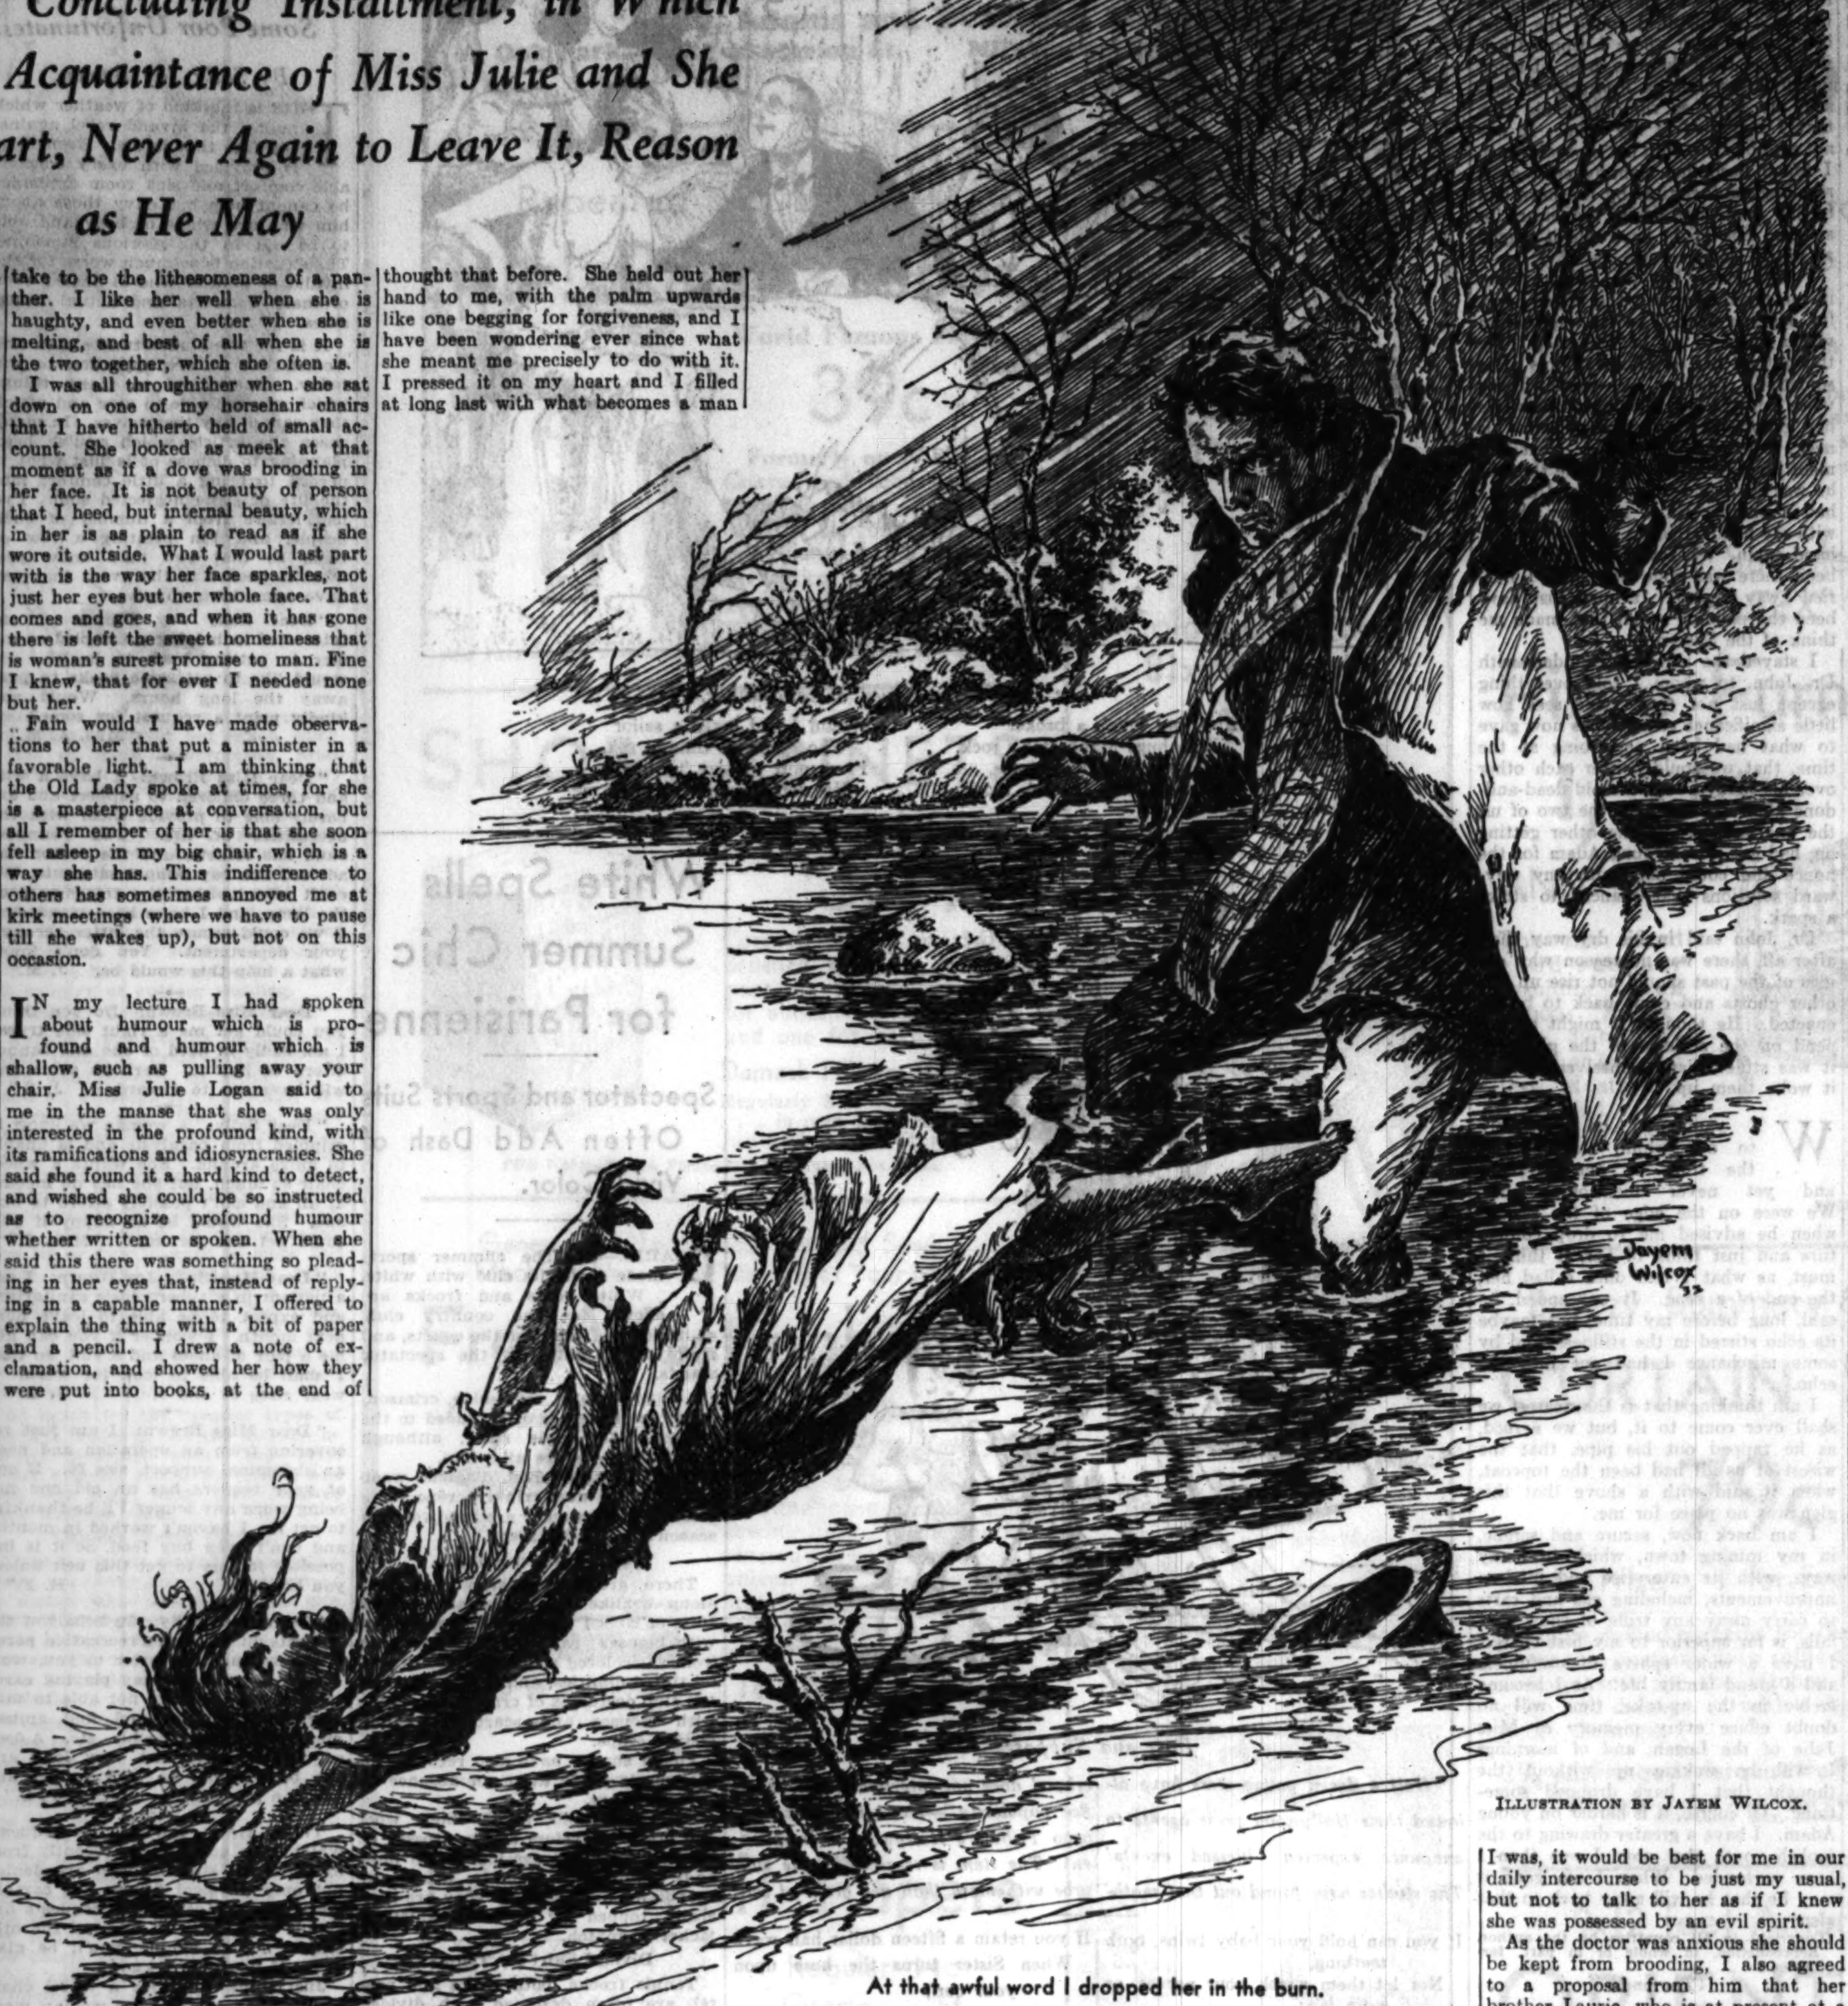
Farewell, Miss Julie Logan

By Sir James M. Barrie

The Second and Concluding Installment, in Which Adam Makes the Acquaintance of Miss Julie and She Steps into His Heart, Never Again to Leave It, Reason as He May



At that awful word I dropped her in the burn.

ILLUSTRATION BY JAYEM WILCOX.

DEC. 26.—(Continued.)—The amelioration in the weather, which probably will not last, is what put the idea into my head. Some of us have been able to step about a little these last days. A curran herd, weary of bothy life, have made so bold as to find out where the glen road is. Of course, they cannot shovel down to it, but they have staked some of the worst bits, and several carts have passed along, as if the proximity to it gave them courage. I saw from the manse the old lady's carriage trying for Branders. The smith's klink—klink from the smiddy, which is the most murie sound in a countryside next to a sawmill—shows that he has had at least one to shod. Posty has ridden on his velocipede the length of the Five Houses and back, with the result that you cannot see his face for the brown paper. It is true that there is no possibility of opening the kirk on Sabbath, for though we have thrown planks across the burn, with a taut rope to hang on by, the kirk is too mortal cold for sitting in through a service. There is, however, the smiddy, which can be used for other purposes besides preaching.

All our large social events take place in the smiddy, and the finest consist of penny weddings, when you are expected, if convenient, to bring, say, a hen or a small piece of plenishing to the happy pair. The actual marriage, of course, takes place in the bride's home, and not, in the queer English way, in the kirk. We have had no weddings since I came, but twice last month we had Friendliness, which we consider the next best thing.

Our Friendlies are always in two parts, the first part being devoted to a lecture by the minister or some other person of culture, who is usually another minister. This lecture is invariably of a bright, entertaining character, and some are greater adepts at unbending in this way than others, the best being Mr. Watery of Branders, whose triumphant smile is of such expansion that you might say it oozes over the company like sirup. Laughter and the clapping of hands in moderation are not only permissible but encouraged.

The second part of a Friendly is mostly musical with songs, and is provided by local talent, in which Posty takes a lead. There is an understanding that I remain for the first song or so, whether I am lecturing or in the Chair. This is to give a tone to the second part, and then I slip away, sometimes wishing I could bide, to let them be more at their ease. The time in which Friendlies would be most prized is when the glen is locked, but the difficulty for all except the Five Houses lies in getting to the smiddy.

Nevertheless, we are to attempt a Friendly on Thursday, though Mr. Watery, who was to be the lecturer with a magic lantern, which, of course, is a great addition, has cried off on account of nervousness lest the weather should change before he gets home again. I have undertaken to fill his place to the best of my more limited ability, as indeed it is. I am doing so the more readily because of this idea that came to me, which promises to be a felicitous one. It is to lecture to them on Superstition, with some sly and yet shattering references to a recent event in the glen, all to be done with a light touch, yet of course with a moral, which is that a sense of humour is the best antidote to credulity.

There are few of the smaller subjects to which I have given greater thought than to humour, its ramifications and idiosyncrasies, and I have a hope that I may not do so badly at this. I wish Mr. Watery could be present, for I think I can say that I know more about humour than he does, though he is easier at it.

VII. Miss Julie Logan.

DEC. 28.—Hours have passed since I finished my lecture. I know not how many times I have sat down to write about her and then taken to wandering the study instead. My mind goes back in search of every crumb of her, and I am thinking I could pick her up better on my fiddle than in written words.

My eyes never fell on her till I got to my peroration. This is no reflection on my sight, for all the company in the smiddy, and there were more than thirty, had to sit in darkness so that they could better watch my face between the two candles. She was with Mistress Lindinnock, who presented her to me, and they came over to the manse while the ponies were being put in. I held her hand to guide her over the planks.

She is the Old Lady's grand-niece, and her name is Miss Julie Logan. I am glad of her Christian name, for it has always been my favorite. In the past, up to this night, my lot has thrown me mostly among my seniors, and I have sometimes wished I was old, so as to be done with the clutches of youth. I am not afraid of them now. I am no hand at describing the garb of beauty, and the nearest I can get to her, after much communing, is that she is a long stalk of loveliness. She carried a large muff of fur, and at times would raise it to her face as if she knew no better than to think it was a scent bottle, or peep over it like a sitting bird in the bole of a tree. There was a diverting hood over her head which, for some reason I cannot as yet determine, you could have got on smiling terms with though you had met it hanging on a nob.

She is from Edinburgh, and it was to convey her here that I saw the Grand House carriage going in to Branders yesterday. I have seen her for twenty minutes only. There is such a beloved huskiness in her voice that she should be made to say everything twice. She glides up a manse stair with what I take to be the lithesomeness of a panther. I like her well when she is haughty, and even better when she is melting, and best of all when she is the two together, which she often is.

I was all throughither when she sat down on one of my horsehair chairs that I have hitherto held of small account. She looked as meek at that moment as if a dove was brooding in her face. It is not beauty of person that I heed, but internal beauty, which in her is as plain to read as if she wore it outside. What I would last part with is the way her face sparkles, not just her eyes but her whole face. That comes and goes, and when it has gone there is left the sweet homeliness that is woman's surest promise to man. Fine I knew, that for ever I needed none but her.

Fain would I have made observations to her that put a minister in a favorable light. I am thinking that the Old Lady spoke at times, for she is a masterpiece at conversation, but all I remember of her is that she soon fell asleep in my big chair, which is a way she has. This indifference to others has sometimes annoyed me at kirk meetings (where we have to pause till she wakes up), but not on this occasion.

IN my lecture I had spoken about humour which is profound and humour which is shallow, such as pulling away your chair. Miss Julie Logan said to me in the manse that she was only interested in the profound kind, with its ramifications and idiosyncrasies. She said she found it a hard kind to detect, and wished she could be so instructed as to recognize profound humour whether written or spoken. When she said this there was something so pleading in her eyes that, instead of replying in a capable manner, I offered to explain the thing with a bit of paper and a pencil. I drew a note of exclamation, and showed her how they were put into books, at the end of sentences, to indicate that the remark was of a humourous character. She got the loan of the pencil and practiced making notes of exclamation under my instruction.

She said she questioned whether profound humour would not still baffle her in the spoken word, and I agreed that here it was more difficult, but told her that if you watched the speaker's face narrowly you could generally tell by a glint in it; and if there was no glint his was the mistake and not yours. She asked me to say something humourous to her the while she would watch for the glint, which I did, and she saw it. She said she feared it would be a long time before she could do my glint, and asked me to watch her face while she practiced it, and I was very willing.

She said she would like to have my opinion on the statement of an Englishman about the bagpipes—namely, that they sound best if you are far away from them, and the farther away the better. Other people present had laughed at that, and could I tell her why? I said that no doubt what they laughed at was at the man's forgetting that if you were too far away from the pipes you would not hear them at all.

Even in those moments I was not such a gawk as to be unaware that I was making a deplorable exhibition of myself. Whatever she seemed to want me to say I just had to say it, for the power had gone from me to show her that I was not mentally deficient. However, when it came to this about the pipes I broke down in shame and hid my face on the table.

She was taken aback and raised my head gently, and was woebegone when she saw the ruin she had made.

"Have I hurt you?" she asked, and I could just nod.

"Why did you let me?" she asked, and I answered darkly, "I cannot help saying or doing whatever Miss Julie Logan wants."

The wet glittered on her eyes as if laughter and a tear had met, just as they do on the strings. I said, "It is bitter mortifying to me to be seen in such disadvantageous circumstances by Miss Julie Logan at the very time of all others when I should have liked to be better than my best."

I stroked her muff, and somehow the action made me say, "This is a very unhomely manse," though I had never thought that before. She held out her hand to me, with the palm upwards like one begging for forgiveness, and I have been wondering ever since what she meant me precisely to do with it. I pressed it on my heart and I filled at long last with what becomes a man in his hour, and I said, "I love you, Miss Julie Logan"; and she said as soft as a snowflake, "Yes, I know."

Then Christilly came in with the blackberry wine on a tray, and the Old Lady woke up and said that the ponies must be yoked by this time, so I took the ladies across to the carriage, Christilly going in front with the lamp. I could hear Miss Julie Logan talking sweetly to her, though it was the Old Lady who was on my arm.

It is now on the chap of midnight, and since I wrote the above I have been down to my kirk and unlocked the door and lit a candle and stood looking for a long time at the manse pew. It is in a modest position on the right of the pulpit, disdaining to call attention to itself. For my part I could never walk down the aisle of any kirk without being as conscious of which was the manse pew as of which was the pulpit. I don't look, I just feel it. Usually there is only Christilly in mine, and she sits at the far end.

Not all manse pews have a door, but mine has, and I would sit next it if I were out of the pulpit, which can only be if another minister is officiating for me. When a minister is a married man, as all ministers ought to be, it is the lawful right of his wife to sit next the door, with a long empty space between her and the servant, unless they be blessed with children. I stood by my manse pew picturing Miss Julie Logan sitting next the door. She is a tall lady, and I wondered whether the seat was too low for her, and such is my condition that, if I had brought nails and a hammer with me, I would have raised it there and then.

VIII. Christilly Goes Queer.

DEC. 30.—In the midst of my exaltation come disquieting symptoms in Christilly. I think, now I look back, that she has been unsettled these last few days and that occasionally she has glanced covertly at me as if she feared I suspected her of something. Whether this was so or not, she is in a bad state now, and I am in a taking about her.

It revealed itself this morning when I made a remark to her about Miss Julie Logan. I knew it would be more befitting not to bring that name into everyday conversation, but something within me craved to hear how it sounded on other lips. Nothing could have been more thought out than the way I introduced the subject, and yet the dryness came into my mouth that makes it so desirable for a public speaker to have a glass of water handy.

"And so," I said, "there is a young lady at the Grand House now, Christilly."

"Is there?" said she, like one cheering up for a gossip.

"Did you not know," I said, "that it is there Miss Julie Logan is staying?"

"What Miss Julie Logan?" she asked.

"The young lady," I said patiently, "whom Mistress Lindinnock brought to the manse the night before last."

"I saw no young lady," she said. "There was just the two of you came in, you and Mistress Lindinnock."

"Is this temper, Christilly," I demanded, "or what is it? You helped Miss Julie Logan to a glass of blackberry wine; also you carried the lantern when I escorted them back to the carriage, and you were in front conversing with her."

HER eyes stood out as in some sudden affliction, and, when I stepped toward her, asking if she was ill, she cried, "God help me," and rushed out of the study. What did it portend? Had I unwittingly opened the door to some secret the poor soul had been keeping from me? I was very riven, and I followed on her heels to the kitchen, but she had locked the door and no answer could I get when I spoke through it to her.

This was very disturbing from such an excellent woman, and I went on my knees with the door between us and called in a loud voice to the malevolent one to come out of her. I could hear her wailing sore.

In much perturbation I sped across to the Five Houses on the chance of finding Dr. John, as Posty's wife is down with a complaint that beats the skill of her neighbours; she has found out that she is four years older than she thought, and though until that moment in robust health she at once took to her bed.

Fortunately I got the doctor, and on our way across I told him of what had happened. I was relieved to find that he did not take the matter with my seriousness; indeed, he was more interested in Miss Julie Logan, of whom he had not heard till now, than in Christilly's case, which he foretold would turn out to be tantrums brought on by my writing so many love letters. It seems, though news to me, that Christilly is responsible for a report that I sit for hours writing love letters, these being what she has made of my diary. However meddlesome this is, it took a load from my mind, and I was feeling comfortable when he went off to the kitchen, grinning, and vowing that he would shake her like a doctor's bottle.

HE was gone for a long time, and it was a very different Dr. John who came back. I have seen him worry his way through some rasping ordeals, but never showing the least emotion. Now, however, he was so agitated that at sight of him I cried out, "Is it as bad as that?"

"It's bad," he said. "Man, it is so bad and so unexpected that for the first time in my practice I can't even pretend to know how to act; let me be for a minute." He paced the floor, digging his gnarled fists into his eyes, a way he has when in pursuit of a problem, as if the blackness thus created helped him to see better.

"There is one of two things that must be done," he said, "and I have got to choose, but the responsibility is very terrible." I waited, thinking he was to take me into his confidence, but instead he just stood staring in a kind of wonderment at me. I began to assure him that every help I could give would be forthcoming, and at that he gave a jarring laugh. I was offended, but he was at once contrite and asked for my advice.

"We could get Mistress Lindinnock and the young lady to come down," I suggested.

"No, we could not," he said, so sharply that I stiffened again. He put the matter right, though, when he told me the two courses he had to decide between, for what I had proposed was one of them, namely, to confront the poor sufferer with the two ladies, which he called the kill or cure step. The second course was to go canny for a few days in the hope that the hallucination might pass of itself. She might even wake up on the morrow without it, which at the worst would be a more gentle wakening than the other. He asked me, not like a consultant but as one who needed a stronger man to lean on, which line of action I would prefer to be taken if I was in Christilly's place, and on consideration I admitted that the first one seemed to carry the more grievous shock.

After some discussion we decided to give the softer plan a short trial. I said there could be no harm in it, at any rate. He said, still very worried, indeed he was shaking, that there might be great harm in it, but that he would risk it. We agreed that, as on all subjects save the one, she was as right as I was, it would be best for me in our daily intercourse to be just my usual, but not to talk to her as if I knew she was possessed by an evil spirit.

As the doctor was anxious she should be kept from brooding, I also agreed to a proposal from him that her brother Laurie, who is at present at a loose end in Branders, should pay a visit to the manse for a few days, ostensibly to brighten her, but really of course to watch her on the quiet.

This gives small promise for the time being of a comfortable manse, but what is running in my head even now is that tomorrow afternoon I go, be the weather what it likes, to the Grand House to see Miss Julie Logan again. It will be the last day of the year, but Laurie should be here by then, and Christilly will be safe in his care.

Today I am keeping an observant eye on her myself. She has brought up my meals in her old exemplary way, and we have exchanged a few cautious words about household affairs, but her face is sore begrutten, and if I try to be specially kind to her she knows the reason and there is more than a threatening of a breakdown. Poor woman, it is like to be a sad New Year's eve to her and for Dr. John, also, who has known her from youth, and left the manse very broken. As I let him out I said, "It is as if the Spectrum had come padding back to this house."

"Wheest, man," he said.

IX. The End of a Song.

DEC. 31.—I will try to put down the events of this terrible night with clearness and precision.

It was in the early afternoon, the snow shimmering like mica, which is sheep's silver, that I set out for the Grand House, buttoned very thick. Despite the darkness that encompassed Christilly, I was in an awful and sublime state of happiness. I forgot my cloth and flung snowballs at the smith's bairns, who will remember this New Year's eve by that.

The windows in the Five Houses showed a glime of light, not that it was needed yet, but they were practicing precautions against my seeing them presently at some New Year devilment. These consisted in their hanging cloths, such as human habiliments, behind the blinds, so as to deaden the light to me should I be on the watch.

These was no music as yet, and I was wondering where Posty and my fiddle were when I fell in with them on the way. Though he has forgotten who the broken men were about whom he likes to play, I notice that one little bit, from his forebears as I take it, still clings to him: he walks up and down while he is playing the fiddle as if it were the pipes. On this occasion, however, I expect he was on the march for seasonable largess at the Grand House, which he always receives with complete surprise.

A thing commonly said about the Grand House is that it should be called the Grand Houses, there being in a manner two of them: though the one is but a reflection of the other in a round of water close by. This lochy is only a kitten in size, but deep; and I know not whether its unusual reflective properties are accidental, or, as some say, were a device of olden times to confuse the enemy when in liquor. At any rate, one cannot easily tell in certain lights, unless you are particular about things being upside down, which is the house and which the reflection.

There is an unacceptable tale of the lord of the glen having been tracked to the house after Culloden, and of the red-coats being lured by a faithful retainer into the water, where they tried doors and windows till they drowned, the lord and his faithful retainer keeking over the edge at them and crying "Bo."

The house is of many periods, but its wonder is the banqueting hall, or rather a window therein. They never banquet now in the hall, not even the English, and indeed it is nigh empty of plenishing except for tapestries on the walls, which the ignorant take to be carpets damaged in the '45. The great bowed window is said by traveled persons to stand alone among windows, for it is twenty-eight feet in height and more than half as wide, and all who come to look at it count its little lozens, as we call the panes, which are to the number of two hundred and sixteen.

These panes are made of some rare glass that has a tint of yellow in it, so that, whatever the weather is, to any one inside the hall it looks to be a sunny day. In the glen this glass is not thought much of and they say it should be renewed. The house is a bit old and weary, and I dare say these lozens are the only part of it that would shame renewal.

It was not, of course, here, but in a cosy little room where, however indiscriminately you sit down, you sit soft, that Mistress Lindinnock received me. She was tatting (but that cannot be the right word) at a new tapestry, or mending an old one, which was so voluminous that she rose out of it as from the foam. She is such a little person that when she stands up you may think she has sat down; nevertheless she is so ready that contradictious men have stepped back hurriedly from the palm of her hand, and yet not been quick enough. She has always, as I have said, been a fine friend to me till this unhappy day.

ALL was well while we were talking of Christilly's case, into which I did not have to go in much detail as I found Dr. John had obligingly gone straight to her with it from the manse yesterday. I could not help inquiring, with all the appearance of its being an ordinary question, how he had taken to Miss Julie Logan. Sharp, I got the staggering answer. "He had no opportunity, for I had packed the woman back to Edinburgh in the morning."

I have had worse blows than this tonight, though at the moment I could not have credited it; so I will only say that on rallying I asked with cold politeness when the young lady was coming back.

Mistress Lindinnock, I could see, was eyeing me closely to find out how I stood the news, but she replied at once, like one prepared for war, "Never, I hope; I don't like your Miss Julie Logan, my good sir."

I will not say that even in that stern moment I took no pleasure in hearing her called my Miss Julie Logan. Also it gave me an opportunity to reply with the thunderbolt, "That is what I want her to be."

She stamped her foot at me, but I never weakened.

"I demand her address," I said. She refused it, and I replied loftily that it mattered not as I was confident she would write to me.

She raised her arms at that, like one appealing to a Higher Power, and said, "If she writes to you I give the thing up." Once she swung me round very raized and said on her tiptoes, "I could tell you things about her that would make you drop her in the burn, though you were standing in the middle of it with the jade in your arms."

I replied in my stateliest that I would stand in the middle of the ocean with Miss Julie Logan on those terms; and I meant it, too, though I am no swimmer.

I daresay I was a rather dignified spectacle, towering there, very erect, with my arms folded: at any rate, she looked like one cowed who had never been cowed before; or else she became cunning, for she cajoled with me to do as she, my old friend, wanted, saying endearing things about how much she had liked me in the days when I was sensible, and that if I were not such a calf I would see she was now fonder of me still in my imbecility. Her words were not all, as will be seen, happily chosen, nor did I like the pity with which she obviously regarded me, for she was the one in need of it.

Yet I had a drawing to her, and when I was going away with but a scantling of courtesy, she said sadly enough that it would be the first time I had left her house (and she might have added any house in the glen) without calling for a benison on it, I stood rebuked.

AS we went on our knees she whispered rather tremulously, "Pray, dear minister, for all who may be in trouble this night, and even danger," and I did so, and it made the tangled woman greet. Of course, I presumed she meant Christilly, but as I was shaking hands with her I had another thought and I said almost threateningly, "You were not referring, were you, to Miss Julie Logan?" It spoilt the comparative friendliness of our parting, for she flared up again and said, "'Deed no; she is the only one that is in no need of those words tonight." Unfortunate being, she little knew, nor did I, the impiety of that remark.

When I got outside, something made me reluctant to make straight for the manse. I sat down very melancholy by the little round of water I have spoken of. The night was forlorn, with the merest rim of the moon in sight, and no reflection on the water beyond some misty stars. I don't know why I sat there. It was not to keep vigil, I am sure I had no suspicion that Miss Julie Logan was still in the house.

I may have been there a considerable time before I saw or heard anything. What I heard came first. It must just have been Posty playing far away the most reprehensible but the loveliest of all the Jacobite cries, "Will you no come back again?" Soon after he finished, if it was mortal man who played, all was still.

I THOUGHT no more of him, for candles to a great number, and very sly, were beginning to get lit in the water. I spied on them interestedly. It was now one of those nights when the moon wanders. The big window nearly filled the pond, and through it I saw a concourse of people in the hall. Of course it was only their reflections I saw. I saw them on their heads as in an inverted mirror, and they looked just as agreeable as the other way. They were in the Highland dress of lang syne.

I never saw them all at once, because if they came nearer they were lost in the weeds and if they went back they had a neat way of going through the walls. The older ladies were in fine head dresses and others in their ringlets; they were more richly attired than the men, and yet the men made the finer show. I could see the trews, and an occasional flashing silver button or a gleam of steel; but near all colour had been washed out of them, as if they had been over long among the caves and the eagles. There was plenty of food on a table that sometimes came forward, and they drank toasts thereat.

I could not always put a meaning to what they did, but I saw them dancing and conversing, and, though they were perhaps poor and desperate, they all, the gentlemen as much as the ladies, seemed to me to be of the great. They did rochly things as if they had forgotten the pretty ways, and next minute there would be a flourish in their manners that would have beat the pipes.

There was no music, though, and when this came to me I recalled that I had not heard a sound from behind me in the hall itself, though owing to the quietness of the night I heard in the open as infinitely small a thing as the letting-go of a twig. The real folk were as quiet as their reflections. If I had been an imaginative man I might have thought that the real house, which was invisible to me where I sat, was not lit up at all, and that what I saw in the water was just a reflection come trailing back from other days.

I took a step or two to make sure about this, and then all the men in the water suddenly stood still, with their hands on dirk or broadsword. I thought they had heard a disquieting sound, and then I knew that what they heard had been my own movement. After that I sat very mouse, looking at nothing but the reflection. I was sure now that, despite the dancing, it was a gathering of the hunted folk as stealthy as the night itself.

I had never lost a feeling that there was an air of expectancy about them. I saw them backing against the walls to leave more space in the middle, and all eyes turned to the door, as if awaiting a great person. I suppose the tune was still dirling in my head, for I thought I knew who was coming in, the captain of them all, and I had a sinking that it would be my duty to seize him and hand him over. But it was a woman, it was Miss Julie Logan. She was not finely attired like the other ladies, but so poorly that her garments were in tatters. She would have made a braver show if each of the ladies had torn off an oddment and made a frock for her between them. It was not, however, as one of little account that they treated her or she treated them.

She was the one presence in the hall to them. They approached her singly and as if overpowered by the distinction that was befalling them. The men made profound obeisance, and the ladies sank in that lovely way to the floor. On some she smiled and let them salute her hand, and others she looked at in a way I did not see, but they backed from her as if she had put the fear of Death into them. She gave the back of her hand to Mistress Lindinnock, and I never saw an old woman so gratified.

WITH a few she took a step or two in the dance, mayhap to make others glower, and by something was taking place that I could not at first fathom. It was clear she was about to leave them, for a ceremony similar in most respects to their welcome was repeated and the doors thrown open for her passing. But then they all gathered in the far end of the hall, or sank through it, with their backs to her, which was baffling to me, for up to that moment you could see how carefully they gave her their faces. Yet they did it of set purpose, or possibly at her command, for she was watching them more haughtily than ever.

As soon as she was sure that every face was to the wall a complete change came over her. She hastened—she almost ran in her eagerness—to a corner of the window and lifted from the floor a good sized basket that I dare say they had placed there for her. She lifted it like one who knew for certain it would be there. She filled it with viands from the table, picking and choosing them with affectionate interest. I thought that being, in some way I had to grope for, the one they held highest, she was too proud to let them know how hungry she was, though that very knowledge was what had brought them together. I thought that, reckless of correct behaviour, as all on that side were, they were Strangers come back into the present day by some royal command to honour and feed one who had been left behind. While she had been lording it so imperiously in the hall, she was be-like thinking more about the basket than that she was the end of a song.

A MOMENT after she was gone from the hall, with a last withering look for any peeping face, I heard the first sound that had reached me from the house since I took to looking in the water. It was the closing of the front door. I hurried forward, and was in time to meet Miss Julie Logan, no longer a reflection, coming down the steps with the basket.

She said, "Carry the basket, Adam," and I carried it, but first I put my top-coat on her, and she slipped my hand into one of the pockets along with her own. I think it was snowing again or a tempest or something of the kind, but we were not heeding. She took me to a small ruin of a bield for sheltering sheep in, and in a corner of it, where was a pile of stones, maybe to mark some old grave, we sat down on them and opened the basket. She was very hungry and I myself was also slow to desist from eating. For drinking we ate the snow, against which I have warned my Sabbath School scholars.

The basket was so crammed with food of an agreeable nature that when we paused, replete, there was still near a basketful left. Never in my life was I so merry as sitting on those stones, and she was also very droll. She had a way of shining her face into mine and showing her pretty teeth like a child. It was the gaiety of her, but I joukit. When we wandered on I wanted to bring the basket, but she said that was the place to leave it.

We said the kind of things a man and woman never say till they know each other through and through. It was all about ourselves, and love was one of the words I did not scruple to handle.

We were not bothering about far-back times or Mistress Lindinnock, but when we came to the burn it minded me of what the Old Lady said I would do in a certain emergency. Miss Julie Logan demanded of me to repeat to her the exact words, which I did, namely, "I could tell you things about her that would make you drop her in the burn, though you were standing in the middle of it with the jade in your arms." I omitted the word jade.

Miss Julie Logan was in a dance of delight and cried, "Adam, let us try it." I said there was danger in it and she said, "I like danger fine," and she coaxed me, saying, "When you have got me there I'll tell you the thing, and then, if you don't drop me, aiblins I will be yours, Adam."

There and then I up with her and carried her into the burn. It was deep and sucking. She rubbed her head on my shoulder in a way that would make a man think she liked to be where she was. She peeped up at me, and her face was of the sweet homeliness of a dove that I have mentioned, and so also were her words.

She said "Kiss me first, Adam, in case you have to drop me." I kissed her, and I held her the tighter lest by some dread undoing I should let her slip. Her face was all sparkling now, almost more than enough. "Adam dear," she said, "to begin with, I am a Papist." At that awful word I dropped her in the burn. That she is still there I do not doubt, though I suppose she will have been carried farther down.

I have written this clear statement in the study, to be shown by Laurie to Dr. John and by him to the Branders constabulary. I have put down everything as it happened, and I swear to its accuracy. I have refused to go to my bed this night, and I know that Laurie is sitting on a chair outside my door. I have told him none of the facts, but I can see that the man already suspects me. I can remember nothing after I heard the splash, but he says he found me running up and down the waterside and that he had to take a high hand with me to get me home.

I would not change out of my wet things for all his blustering, but Christilly, her face swollen with misery, came bursting in and tore them off me and put me into something dry. This is the last service she will ever render to me. She says she has wrung my top-coat and put it before the kitchen fire. They both say I came back in it, but I know where my top-coat is.

X. A Quarter of a Century.

IT is a quarter of a century since I stopped writing this Diary and put the thing out of my sight. Circumstances made me want to look through it again, and there it was in the garret, between the same two boards of waxcloth where I had kept it hidden from Christilly in the days of my windy youth. I had forgotten that it was written on sermon paper, and such dereliction from propriety disturbs my conscience now even more than the vapours set down in it about the Roman woman.

Of course, I am aware now that she never existed. I have been aware all these twenty-five years that I was the one who went queer and not the self-sacrificing Christilly, that it was to watch me that the man Laurie was brought to the manse, and that the story the Old Lady told me was invented for her by Dr. John. My two good friends had to work their way through thorns to clear my disordered mind, but they managed it by the time the glen road had come up again like a spring flower.

I was long bedded with colds and throats, for which the doctor blamed the burn, and in that quiet time I got rid of all my delusions, except once in the middle of my convalescence, when I escaped everybody and made for the sheep bield to decide for certain that the basket was not still there. I dug for it with my hands as if there had once been a basket, and the only result of my senseless escapade was that it retarded my recovery for another month.

I left the glen for good early in August, just before the return of the English, with whom, though I liked them well, I had no desire to have further discourse about Diaries or what may seem to happen when the glen is locked. I have had two charges since I gave up my first, and for eighteen years I have been minister in this flourishing place in a mining district.

Two years after my call I married a lady of this neighborhood, and it has been a blessed union, for my Mima is one in a thousand and the children grow in grace. I tell Mima everything except about the Roman, that being a passage in my life that never took place, nor have I sufficient intellect to be able to speak about it without doing so as if it were real.

I am thankful to say that the Roman is to me as if she never had been, and of course she never was, that just being a slip of the pen. A Scottish minister has few topcoats in his life, and when any old clothes will do I sometimes still wear the one that is in my Diary. Many a time I have been out in the old topcoat without remembering how pretty she looked in it, and this is natural, for she never was in it.

I HAVE only once revisited my first charge, and it was a month ago. I stayed a night at Banders with Dr. John, who has got a partner. My old friend's hold on life is now little more than a bat's to a shutter, but he will still be at it, and some day I suppose he will be found sitting twisted in a drift, which is how he would like his end to be.

I walked down the glen through the heather, a solitary, unless it may be said that in a sense the young Adam I had been walked with me. The English were on the hills, though they were not my English. I lay for two nights in the old manse, and preached twice. They were not great sermons, but are held by some to be my two best. The lad that once I was thought himself a gifted preacher, but the man he became knows better, which is nothing to boast of, for there is naught that houks the spirit from you so much as knowing better.

Mr. Gallacher, who is the new minister, the second in succession to me, was preaching at Branders, and his wife, a genteel thick lady, sat in my old pew, nearest the door. Gallacher was very civil, but he is not the kind of man, I think, that the Old Lady would have waved good-night to with her window blind. She, of course, has been away with it this many a year. There is a new postman, who, 'tis said, has trudged a distance equal to round the world since the days of my Posty. Christilly is married on a provision merchant in Ireland, and once a year sends me a present of eggs, with a letter enquiring very guardedly about my health. Joanna Minch and the lass have gone to some other glen.

The only faces I could give a name to in the Five Houses are the smith and two of his sons. That once lusty man is now an old carl sitting on his dyke, having reached that terrible time for a Scotsman of knowing that he will never be allowed by his offspring to do another day's work for ever and ever. Sometimes, to give him an hour's pride, they let him wheel a barrow of manure.

THERE have been great changes at the manse, inside and out. One hardly knows the study now, for there is a sofa fornent the fireplace. They burn coal. There is an erection containing a foreign plant on the identical spot where the Roman sat when she drew notes of exclamation, but she never sat there nor drew anything. It is not to myself that I need to tell she never was, for I know perfectly, but to him, the poor gomeril, my young self, whom I have to carry about with me.

Outside the chief change in the manse is that Mr. Gallacher has lifted the henhouse from the west end to the gable end, which I consider a great mistake.

The glen has not been what can be called locked for the last eight years, and Mr. Gallacher knows very little about the old superstitions that plagued young Adam. He had heard something nonsensical about a red-shanked man on a horse, a poor affair though unaccountable. He was very sound about the hallucinations all being clavers unworthy of investigation, and on that point at least we were in agreement. I asked him, just to keep the conversation going, if any Stranger woman had been seen, but he had heard of none, nor could he, for there never was one.

Of course I could not go for a walk on the Sabbath day, but as I was leaving for Branders on the Monday I got up betimes to have a last wander in the glen. I did not specially want to do this, and I prefer to put it that the fillip came from the Adam I had been. It soon became very hot, though there was a nip in the air at first, and I made the mistake of wearing the old topcoat.

I sat for a time by the pond, where the reflection from the Grand House is still to be seen, but it is somewhat spoilt by a small windmill having been erected close by to provide the breeze in which, 'tis said, the trout rise best. I am told this was Posty's last contrivance to make things easy for the English.

I thought with little respect of the Jacobites and the '45, and a dog that may have been of a different opinion drove me away. I went on to the bield, but nothing is left of it now except the little pile of stones. I stood looking at them for a long time and I felt sure she was not there. I went to Joanna's sheiling, though I knew she was gone, and I found it gone, too. I just went because I was sure that Joanna's visitor had been my visitor, and so it brought us together. I liked to mind the Roman's bonny act in making a pig of herself to heat the cold body of Joanna. I wished she had been given a chance to do this. She would have done it if she could. I went to the Eagles Rock, and it looked the more lonesome because there was a scarf of rime hiding the Logan Stone. When the rime drifted I thought I could see the stone moving.

I left my visit to the burn to the end. There is now a swinging bridge for the convenience of churchgoers in the back end of the year, but, though little more than a wimple of water was running at present and sometimes coming to a standstill, I found the exact bend in the burn where I dropped her, if she had been there to drop. I stood unruffled, keeping an iron grip on myself, my mind so rid of the old fash that I marveled at my calm. It was not so, however, with my topcoat, which I found becoming clammy cold, as if recalling another time by the burn and feeling we were again too near for safety. You might have said it tugged at me to come away.

I kept calm, but the young Adam in me must have had the upper hand, for, looking back, I see it was to him rather than to me it happened. He thought he had catched into his arms something padding by, whose husky voice said "Adam" lovingly, the while her glamorous face snuggled into his neck, the way a fiddle does. Next moment he gave a cry because he thought he was running with blood, and even I had a sinking till I tried my throat with my handkerchief. I had the upper hand again. Whatever it was that had been there was gone now, and I hurried away myself. It must just have been the padding sound that made me think of the Spectrum.

I stayed the night at Branders with Dr. John, to whom I told everything except just not that. One sees how little significance either of us now gave to what had been perturbing at the time, that we could banter each other over his toddy about the old dead-and-done affair. It was as if the two of us, the one ancient and the other getting on, had got rid of young Adam for the nonce and could play with any wayward solutions that chanced to strike a spark.

Dr. John said in his dry way that, after all, there was no reason why doings of the past should not rise up like other ghosts and come back to be reenacted. He thought it might all depend on the stillness of the glen. If it was stiller than themselves perhaps it woke them up.

WE yammered on agreeably to our whim, thinking all the time of one Stranger and yet never mentioning her. We were on the edge of the serious when he advised me to drop conjecture and just think of her, if think I must, as what I had once called her, the end of a song. It was ended, he said, long before my time, but maybe its echo stirred in the stillness, and by some mischance I had got into the echo.

I am thinking that is the nearest we shall ever come to it, but we agreed, as he tapped out his pipe, that the wisest of us all had been the topcoat, when it said with a shove that this glen was no place for me.

I am back now, secure and serene, in my mining town, which in many ways, with its enterprise and modern improvements, including gas and carts to carry away any trifle of snow that falls, is far superior to my first charge. I have a wider sphere of usefulness and a grand family life. As I become feeble in the up-take, time will no doubt efface every memory of Miss Julie of the Logan, and of mornings I will be waking up without the thought that I have dropped something. Of course, it is harder on young Adam. I have a greater drawing to the foolish youth that once I was than I have pretended. When I am gone it may be that he will away back to that glen.

The Lass Who Loved a Landlubber.

Alas, my love's a broker
Who hugs Manhattan's rock. . .

From port to port 'tis likely
He would keep faith with me.

"Half a dozen young stars have allowed their Hollywood press agents to announce expected 'blessed events.' The studios have found out that motherhood does not interfere with box office popularity."—News from the Chicago Tribune's Hollywood correspondent. The item is received in the suburbs with more than one grain of salt.

If you can hold your baby twins, both teething,
Nor let them wreck your nerves, or satin lap;
If you can keep your baby stare when Junior
Has handed you a toad or snake, mayhap;

If you retain a fifteen dollar hair wave
When Sister turns the hose upon your curl,
You still may look quite Ritzi to the neighbors,
But cameras stop chasing you, my girl.

Co-Eds Borrow Babies to Study Care of Children

And the mothers themselves in turn get a few pointers about improved methods of child care.

So popular has the system become that the university's nursery school now has a long waiting list—even though parents must pay for the privilege of lending their children for the nursery.

Some of the children enrolled, ranging in age from two and a half to five, were placed on the waiting list soon after they were born. Their "university training" is under guidance of instructors, while students in dietetics observe baby habits and reactions.

Each week a different mother also attends the nursery sessions and learns to view her child's manners objectively, while the baby himself is taught to adjust himself to new situations. Then all the others meet once a month to discuss mutual problems.

eet is expose or continue a secret. She love me, too, as an old fren; and she confide in me long ago in Italy that she weary of her life with Beauty, and that she have become indeef'rent whether the world know her secret or not. So, I aska you, how can you call the money shee geeve me blackmail?"

"Why did she call it blackmail?"

"O, that! I think I comprehen'. She seemply deenounce evereebody, and they deserve eet; and she include me bcause I deed, after all accept her money, and the others accept her money, and she suddenly tire of the whole thing. But eef she were alive and recover from her anger, I feel sure she tell Bombarrassi in public she is hasty and ill-tempered and that he is not a blackmailer, in the sense, say, that the Capt. Ramon Orozco is a blackmailer."

"Did she call Orozco a blackmailer or a sponger?"

"She call him a blackmailer, and she is right, signor. That Mexican is one in the true meaning of the foul word. I am not."

"NEVER mind Orozco now. Why, if you possessed knowledge of some secret the duchess did not care to have exposed, and you kept silence because of the money she gave you, apart from your fees for Solito's training, why, I ask, shouldn't your silence be called blackmail?"

"For one very seemple reason, signor, and a reason which the duchess know very well—I would not have expose her secret whether she pay me money or not."

"But did she know that?"

"I think so. Yes, I think she know I never tell the world what I know. But she geeve me the money just the same. Eet may be, at first, to make sure I do not talk; or eet may be, possibly, that she have so much that she love to geeve her old fren some of eet, her old fren who is the only person in the world except two who know that secret."

"Who were the others?"

"Her aunt, Mees Philomena Burgess, and later, Orozco."

"Do you mind telling me what the secret was? She is dead and cannot be harmed by my knowing since, of course, I will never make it public, unless, indeed, it becomes necessary to do so in order to discover and convict the murderer."

"But is not that to imply that either Orozco or I am the murderer, seence Mees Burgess is in New York?"

"In a way, yes. But I can only repeat my request; that you tell me. It may be that others, of whom you know nothing, have learned the secret and have used it to blackmail the duchess."

"True. Other may have learn. I sometime think maybe Bendage and la Carlinrosse know eet. I doubt eet; but eet is possible; for did not Orozco learn of eet, only a few years ago?"

"Once more, will you or won't you tell me?"

Again Bombarrassi was submerged in a profound reverie. He could not see, as Ferguson could, how tensely, though seemingly serene, the Scotland Yard man waited for the Italian's wits to come home from whatever faraway fields they wandered in. Abruptly, Bombarrassi brushed the cat from his knee, and arose, the canary fluttering to a nearby music rack.

"Signor, signor," his agitation was tremendous as he strode to and fro, stopping at length before the detective and flinging wide his arms: "I weel tell you. I do not know eef the solution to thees mystery lie in the secret —you shall have to decide that—because the secret is a very seemple one, namely, that the duchess was the mother of Solito!"

He dropped his arms, staggered to a couch and flung himself prone.

The silence was terrific as Glade, leaning forward, almost crouching, watched him. Ferguson sat with open mouth.

White Spells Summer Chic for Parisienne

Spectator and Sports Suits Often Add Dash of Vivid Color.

PARIS.—(AP)—The summer sports mode spells its chic with white. White coats and frocks are shown for the country club, white tennis frocks for the courts, and white sports suits for the spectator stands.

A dash of navy, royal blue, crimson, or geranium red is often added to the ensemble for style spice, although many costumes are all white.

Ribbed cotton velvet, diagonal wool, serge, and a new crinkly crêpe reminiscent of seersucker are used for this season's white costumes.

Candy Striped Blouses.

There are white serge coats cut along boxlike lines, spectator sports suits of ribbed velvet or diagonal wool with blouses ranging all the way from varicolored striped jerseys to pastel tinted dimities, and there are countrp club costumes of crinkly silk crêpe with blouses and scarfs of candy striped crêpe.

Pastel shades have also returned to the sports mode after an absence of several years.

Cotton and silk piqué, linen, wool and crêpe sleeveless sports dresses of lemon yellow, powder blue, shell pink and water green hold a prominent spot in summer styles. They are generally topped by a little waistline jacket to match.

Divided Skirt for Tennis.

Tennis frocks, both white and pastel, are often designed with divided skirts since many smart players prefer them for the courts. Other models achieve the required fullness with skirts having clusters of knife plaits.

For golf the smart woman may choose a gored or plaited wool skirt with a little wool jacket of contrasting color or suede blouse to match.

White wool skirts and crimson jackets, beige skirts and emerald jackets and mustard yellow skirts and yellow suede blouse jackets are among the newest combinations.

A Friend in Need

Sally Suggests That the Discarded Articles in Your Home May Be Just What Is Needed to Comfort Some Poor Unfortunates.

By Sally Joy Brown.

THIS is the kind of weather which makes the invalid rebel against the fate that is his. Even if he is provided with every conceivable comfort and sick room appliance he canont help but envy those about him who are whole of body and able to be out in the glorious sunshine. The situation is so much worse for the invalid or shut-in who is denied even ordinary comforts and actual necessities.

It is for these unfortunate men and women that we are appealing to you today. They need so many things which you are able to give and which they cannot buy themselves. In many cases the article which you've been planning to dispose of is just what is needed to bring a little comfort into the life of some neglected soul. I've had letters from a number of such people, and I'm printing a few of them so that you may know just what is needed in the event that you have something to give.

"Dear Sally Joy Brown: I am interested in helping a disabled ex-soldier in getting back to health. He would like to get some books to pass away the long hours. Would you kindly print a request for some? "Mrs. A. M."

"Dear Miss Brown: I have a wife and three children to support and am barely able to provide them with the necessities of life. The youngest child has rickets, and the doctor has advised sun ray lamp treatments. We can't afford either the treatments or the lamp, and I have been wondering if we could secure the latter through your department. You don't know what a help this would be. J. M."

"Dear Miss Brown: Do you think you could get me a right side truss? I am badly in need of one and cannot afford to buy it. Perhaps some one will have one to discard. J. S"

"Dear Sally: A woman we know is crippled from paralysis and is unable to move around. She wants a wheel chair so much, but she has no income at all and can't possibly afford to buy one. She would be so happy if you could get one for her. Mrs. J."

"Dear Miss Sally Joy Brown: I am a patient in a tuberculosis sanitarium and expect to be able to leave here next month. I wonder if you can get me a pair of shoes and a suit so that I shall be able to look for work. I wear sizes 36 and 9. J. K."

"Dear Miss Brown: I am just recovering from an operation and need an abdominal support, size 36. If one of your readers has an old one not being worn any longer I'll be thankful to get it. I haven't worked in months and can't even buy food, so it is impossible for me to get this belt unless you help me. H. F."

"Dear Miss Sally: In behalf of the patients on the men's recreation porch I am writing this letter to you, wondering if you have any playing cards to send us. We are not able to take strenuous exercise and find amusement in bridge, pinochle, etc. A deck of cards doesn't last very long and the boys would be glad to get any you can give us. P. S."

These are a few of the requests which have come to me recently from invalids and shut-ins who are denied not only physical fitness but earthly goods also. Most of the requests are simple ones, easy to fill, and the others, if not so simple, you'll be glad to fill if you can, I know.

Just think what joy a wheel chair would bring to the poor woman mentioned and how much diversion the men in the last chapter would get from your old playing cards! If you can help in any of these cases please let me know.

"Would one of your readers pass on to me her twin stroller or buggy? We are only a short distance from the park. One of my babies is not strong, and I should like to keep them out in the air as much as possible. My husband has been out of work for more than a year and we cannot buy one. Mrs. J. M."

If your twins have outgrown the use of their pram, wouldn't you like to see it in use where it will do much good? It would solve this anxious mother's problem and would, without doubt, be most helpful in speeding her baby's recovery.

"We have two children and belong to the army of the unemployed. We have no yard or porch and last summer we didn't taste a green vegetable. I wonder if some one who owns a vacant lot in this vicinity would permit us to have a garden on it. It would give us something to do and at the same time provide us with food. "Mrs. L. M."

Here's a provident woman anxious to make the most of the opportunities about her. I should think any one with the desired piece of ground would be happy to lend it for the summer. Mrs. L. M. lives on the south side.

"I am a widow and lost my daughter a year ago. She was my only support and I have been practically destitute since she died. Friends have given me a room in the back of their store, but I need some furniture for it. Could you get me a kitchen cabinet, a gas stove, and a dresser? The woman who has the store sells dresses, and she thinks I could make a living here if I could get a hemstitching machine. Would there be any possibility of a reader having one to give? Mrs. M."

Securing the much needed furniture would establish Mrs. M. quite comfortably in her new home, and the hemstitching machine would mean a livelihood for her. Have you either to give?

"This request is for a young man who has been out of work for a long time. He has a hand printing press at home and if he had some foundry type he would be able to earn a little money. Please ask your readers if they have any to give. He could use other printing material, too. He has a mother to support, so it is urgent that he have some way of earning a living. J. W."

Here is a young man who is making every possible effort to earn a living and deserves your ardent support. If you can supply any of the materials he needs for this work at home, it will be an immense help to him.

"I wonder if you know of a teacher who would care to teach me Gregg shorthand in the evenings for some service I can do for her in return. I have been offered a much better position than the one I have now, but I need brushing up on my shorthand. I can't afford to go to a business college. V. M."

The woman who knows this method of writing shorthand and has considerable time to spare could do a real service to this young business girl who is trying to equip herself for a better position. She'd probably benefit by this mutual exchange of helpfulness, too.

"Is there any one among your readers who would be so kind as to help me with my shorthand studies by going over the lessons which I would write out and send through the mail? I cannot afford to pay any remuneration but I can stand the expense of postage. My textbook is the anniversary edition of the Gregg stenography book. M. H."

Can you be of any assistance to this young woman who is struggling with the intricacies of shorthand? With an arrangement such as she suggests, it need not take up a great deal of your time and I know it would prove most helpful to her.

Dress for Men of Wedding Party Takes Its Cue from Bridal Gown

By Helen Bartlett.

SO FAR as dress and its conventions are concerned, men, if such a phrase is permissible in an etiquette column, "get away with murder" on most occasions when the women they escort are dressed in their best.

But on at least one day of their lives they must bow to the dictates of tradition and good taste. This is the day on which they say "I do" in answer to a clergyman's soft voiced questions.

Not only the groom but every man in the wedding party is obliged to be carefully and correctly dressed. What to wear—that question that troubles so many of our male correspondents and readers—is determined by two things: The time of day at which the wedding will take place and the degree of formality of the entire proceedings.

General Rules.

Before going into detail about the various costumes to be worn by the men in a wedding party we ought to let you in on a few general rules that will be helpful in making your plans. First of all, every bride and groom should realize that if the bride is formally dressed, i. e., enshrouded in the traditional wedding gown and veil, the groom and the other men must wear the formal costume decreed by convention for the time of day.

That's why we plead with brides not to be too hasty in purchasing gown and veil; it sets the standard for the men's dress, and not sticking to this standard makes an incorrect and unattractive wedding.

Another thing to remember is that all of the men in a wedding party are obliged to dress alike, with possibly one or two minor differences. The bride's father, the ushers, and the best man are sartorial replicas of the groom. However, during the ceremony the groom and best man do not wear gloves; the others do. There also may be a slight difference in their ties.

Formal Daytime Costume.

For the formal daytime wedding, at which the bride wears a veil, the men wear, or should wear, the formal daytime costume—a cutaway coat, light waistcoat, gray and black striped trousers [uncuffed], wing collar, Ascot or four in hand tie [in black and white, black and gray, or black and silver], light gloves and spats, black leather shoes, and top silk hat.

Business suits are never correct when the bride wears a veil. As a matter of fact, only the above costume is correct in the daytime, but there are one or two compromises not exactly correct but much worn.

One of these compromises, often resorted to for the outdoor or country church wedding, consists of dark sack coats and light flannel trousers. The outfit of this type we personally like best is one we saw recently in a leading men's furnishing shop. It consisted of brown gabardine coat with pockets and back half belt; with it were worn plain tan or brown striped tan trousers. Very smart, we thought, and not a bad compromise for a simple country or outdoor wedding.

Another Compromise Costume.

Another compromise costume of great practical value—this for the town wedding—has no name, that I know of, although it's something like a director's suit. It's much, much dressier than those everlasting business suits men cling to, and is not an expensive venture. It consists of a dark sack coat, straight hanging pencil striped trousers with plain bottoms, white wing or double collar, bow tie or four in hand in black and white or gray designs, and black shoes. With this is worn a derby or black Homberg hat. The trousers would be perhaps the only item to be purchased; the other accessories might be in the wardrobe of the average man.

So much for the dressier types of daytime wedding. At the strictly informal wedding, where the bride wears a street frock, the groom and best man may wear their beloved dark business suits.

Tuxedos Never Correct.

Tuxedos, let us remind you emphatically, are never correct for weddings, no matter what the hour. That garment is not correct for a wedding because it is too informal; it is doubly incorrect for the daytime wedding because it should never be worn before 6 o'clock.

Evening weddings present difficulties to the average man who either cannot or will not own a full dress suit. This very formal and very becoming costume is the only correct one for wear after 6 in the evening when the bride wears a veil.

This consists of the tail coat—and the 1932 model, at that—white waistcoat, dress trousers with braid at the side seam, white kid gloves, low patent leather shoes or pumps, white stiff bosom shirt, white wing or polk collar, and white bow tie. The costume is topped by a silk hat.

It is customary for the groom to present his best man and ushers with their ties and gloves, or even their ties, gloves, and spats. At one men's shop we saw these gifts nicely arranged in a box made up with the ties and gloves selected by the groom.

How Mr. Shapiro of Brooklyn Safely Reduced 44 Pounds

Looks Years Younger.

Feels Better Than in Years.

"Gentlemen: I've repeatedly read your ads quoting testimonial letters. I have one to offer which goes them all one better. On August 22, 1931, my physical condition forced me to seek medical aid. After being alarmed by a local physician I sought and found a doctor who rates one of the leading reputations in Hudson County. On the above date I weighed 242 lbs. (only 5 ft. 4½ inches in height). Also an advanced cardiac (heart) condition (valvual), blood pressure 170. Only 36 years old.

"After a thorough examination he instructed me thusly. One teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in warm water every morning with a diet similar to yours.

"This morning, October 21, 1931, less than 2 months, I've lost 44 lbs. My present weight 198 lbs., blood pressure 138 (normal). I feel better than in years and am told I look years younger.
—Bernard Shapiro, Brooklyn, N. Y., October, 21, 1931."

Millions of men the world over are taking the little daily dose of Kruschen because they know that it keeps them feeling fit and active—life really becomes a glorious adventure—well worth living.

Get on the scales today and see how much you weigh—then get a bottle of Kruschen Salts, which costs but a trifle and will last 4 weeks. Take one half teaspoonful in a glass of hot water every morning—cut down on sweets for a while—persist in this method every morning and when you have finished the contents of this first bottle weigh yourself again—and know that the six mineral salts of Kruschen have presented you with glorious health.

To take off fat harmlessly and SAFELY, take Kruschen every morning—don't worry—it's the SAFE way to reduce.

But be sure for your health's sake that you ask for and get Kruschen Salts. Get them at any drug store in the world.

GOOD Morning!

Ramon Novarro may be the star of this picture, but Ralph Graves' fine, thoughtful performance is what gives the production balance and class. With his first appearance the piece takes on tone and he invests with sanity and credibility scenes and lines that would be crude without his sure, artistic touch. Mr. Graves has a nice sense of the value of pause and casualness.

He eases (and eases is JUST the word!) into the photoplay as a football coach. Now you know that this belongs to the cycle of rah rah cinemas.

Yes. And to Yale, from the iron mills at Gary, comes a tough Italian lad (Mr. Novarro), whose ideas of sportsmanship belong to the anvil variety. His motto is that of David Harum: "Do unto others as you think they're going to do unto you—but do it first."

Plenty of Spunk.

As you have surmised, young Tony fares rather badly among the more gently bred entrants at this institution of learning, but the boy has plenty of crust and spunk. Bewildered by snubs and his failure to become "one of the gang" or make a fraternity, he nevertheless becomes a football player to be reckoned with. And the sister of the man who hates him worst falls in love with the boy from the Gary mill town.

Everywhere he goes Tony conducts himself badly. He does the wrong thing for the simple reason that he doesn't know how to do the right thing, until—well, he learns, from Experience, that greatest teacher of all, and from the school's splendid football coach, Malcolm, some of life's rules that must be adhered to if the herd is to live happily together.

Mr. Novarro is somewhat changed in appearance. I imagine that he was made up with the idea of having him appear younger than he is. The results didn't seem especially happy to me. He gives a supple, artistic characterization in a rôle that is not particularly fitted to his dark, romantic, gazelle eyed personality.

Madge Evans does a nice job as the George White's "Scandals" will begin a four weeks' engagement in the Civic Opera house this evening. The company includes this attractive set of singing and dancing twins, the Loomis Sisters. They are not, however, the only offspring of plural birth in the show. Their rivals are the Gale Quadruplets.

Tweak! Tweak! On the beak! Tweaker—Kay Francis. Tweakee? Kenneth Thompson. See "Man Wanted," at the Palace theater.

Helen Hayes as Good Fairy: Stage Comment

Miss Cornell's Benefit at Opera House Amazes Box Office Experts.

By Charles Collins

HELEN HAYES' visit as the glowworm girl of Molnar's casual and somewhat fantastic comedy, "The Good Fairy," is one of the bright events of the waning theatrical season. She is one of the most expert actresses of the American stage, and also one of the most charming; and in this diverting example of Molnar's light Hungarian mockery, she finds a rôle in which her personality and gifts find extremely happy expression.

The engagement will end with next Friday night's performance—a somewhat unusual procedure, due to the fact that Miss Hayes must keep a date in Hollywood in fulfillment of a film contract. She will spend the summer in talkie service, but will return to the stage as soon as Gilbert Miller, who has a way of finding the right plays and parts for his stars, sends word that he has made another discovery. It may be another Hungarian whimsy, like "The Good Fairy," or another London comedy of manners, like "Petticoat Influence," her vehicle of a year ago. Mr. Miller is an internationalist of the drama.

Anita Page and Warner Richmond seem to have been taken unawares! By what? "Night Court," at the Oriental, will show you.

Girls! Look at Ramon Novarro look at Madge Evans! Isn't that some heart-in-me-eyes expression! The scene is from "Huddle," the Chicago theater's photoplay feature for the current week.

Isn't this an arresting scene? It's only one of many that will engross your attention as you watch "The Doomed Battalion," the film attraction which opened at McVicker's theater yesterday.

Noel Coward's comedy, "Hay Fever," will begin a two weeks' engagement at the Adelphi theater tonight with Constance Collier as its character star and with this handsome actress. Betty Linley is a redhead who has made frequent appearances in Chicago. She is a descendant of a famous actress of the Georgian period.

Annual Music Festival at Evanston Lists Singers, Choruses and Orchestra

By Edward Moore.

EVANSTON will occupy the center of the musical stage this week. On tomorrow, Tuesday, and Thursday nights, Saturday afternoon and Saturday night the five concerts that make up the annual Chicago-North Shore Music Festival will be heard in the Northwestern university gymnasium.

Conditions are not encouraging this year reads a message from the Festival association, but the members did not wish to violate a north shore tradition and break the steady progression of festivals. Wherefore, the association puts its faith in north shore music lovers and is carrying on with the twenty-fourth festival of the series.

It is not only giving the festival, but advance information indicates that it is giving one quite as brilliant as have been those in the past. Frederick Stock is the musical director, eight famous stars are to appear, the festival chorus and children's chorus are to be joined this year by the United German male choruses, and the Chicago Symphony orchestra will play.

Moreover, following the precedent of years, the association is bringing the latest star to make an outstanding success in this country. This one is Goeta Ljungberg, the Swedish soprano who has been giving critics and patrons something new to think about in the operatic season in New York this winter. She will sing on Tuesday night, thereby making her first appearance in this part of the country.

New York Debut in January.

Mme. Ljungberg made her New York debut Jan. 20. Born in northern Sweden, she is one of eight children. At the age of 8 she sang for the queen of Sweden, who told her that she had gold in her throat and made her a present of five crowns. Her musical education was received in the Royal Academy of Singing and Royal Opera school of Stockholm. She made her first appearance as Elisabeth in "Tannhaeuser," and three years later she was engaged for the London season at Covent Garden, where she has gone ever since. There she became acquainted with Eugene Goossens, who wrote his opera, "Judith," for her.

By invitation she went to the State Opera in Berlin and was engaged for four years. Gatti-Casazza heard her in Milan and engaged her for the Metropolitan. One hears that she is tall, slender, and handsome, a blond that the New York critics call the perfect Wagner type.

Tuesday's program begins with Haydn's oratorio, "The Seasons," presented in honor of the composer's bicentennial. The announced soloists are Mme. Ljungberg, Jeanette Vreeland, Edward Molitore, and Chase Baromeo, but Mme. Ljungberg is specially mentioned later in the program for three arias, "Pace, pace, mio dio" from Verdi's "La Forza del Destino"; "Mi chiamano Mimi," from Puccini's "La Boheme," and the Love-

No Actor Is Indispensable, Theater Guild Finds

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK. — [Special.] — The Theater guild is one organization that is not going to be slave to its stars. Actors are the real salesmen of the drama, I have long contended, but there are a lot of actors, and most of them can boast salable personalities.

To prove which the guild brought in its second company playing O'Neill's "Mourning Becomes Electra" from the road last week and presented it in the Alvin theater, from which the first company departed no longer than a month ago. Thus, New York playgoers have seen a double set of Electras and Christines, Orins, and Brandts. And found both interesting.

Comparisons are as inevitable as they are odorous, in Dogberry's phrase. Those who are here to insist that no other actress could play Electra as Alice Brady played her are right. Perhaps no other actress would want to. But it does not reasonably follow that no other actress could play Electra as competently.

Anderson and Brady.

So Judith Anderson, one of the truest of the theater's emotionalists, came to town quite confident of her ability to body forth this tragic Yankee avenger impressively. She came off very well with the reviewers, considering that they had raved about the performance of her predecessor. Between the two characterizations there were only shades of difference. Anderson seemed the more set and ruthless Electra, with her ivoried mask pierced with burning eyes. The more understanding Electra, because she had time and opportunity to profit from a thorough study of the play, whereas when first we saw Brady she was new to the rôle and a little frightened.

These two actresses are practically of a height, I would say, and yet, curiously, Brady seemed inches taller than Anderson. Which, doubtless, was due to my own active imagination and the spell that can come only from your first acquaintance with this tremendous play.

Of the two Christines, a majority of the professors of the drama preferred that of Alla Nazimova to that of Florence Reed. I think probably the professors were right, though to me Miss Reed added plausibility to the rôle by a humanizing quality that made her love affair with Brandt, which is the motivation of the murder, more convincing.

Nazimova is technically an artist in the theater. But she also is unmistakably Russian in method and schooling. Therefore, to me, she is usually a little detached from the play's other characters, and frequently from the story the play tells. Christine, by the O'Neill text, was suspected because of her foreign ways, which helped Nazimova. If Miss Reed's Christine started with foreign ways they had been entirely assimilated by her New England background before she reached Broadway.

Walter Abel's Orin suffered most in the general comparisons. He lacked all the vibrant intensity that Earle Larrimore gave to the rôle. Which was the guild's one mistake in ca[illegible]

WET CANDIDATE RIDICULES MOVE FOR REFERENDUM

Modification Is the Quick Remedy, Howell Says.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

That a referendum on prohibition is a "dilatory artifice" by tom tom beating politicians to side step the liquor issue is one of the arguments raised by James A. Howell of Elgin, liberal Democrat, in his battle against Congressman Frank R. Reid of Aurora, dry Republican, in the eleventh district (Kane, Will, Du Page, and McHenry counties).

Howell holds that the real solution lies in immediate modification of the Volstead act to permit light wines and beer, and in the submission to the states by congress of a constitutional amendment to repeal the eighteenth amendment. The practical course, he points out, is for the voters to concentrate on electing anti-prohibitionists to congress and the state legislatures in November.

Constitutional aspects of the question are set forth by Howell, a professor of law who carried three of the four counties in the district in the primary although he was not the organization candidate. He tears into the "referendum" advocates, remarking it is an effort by "straddling politicians" to draw a herring across the trail.

Sees Annual Cost of Billion.

"Prohibition is costing government a sum considerably in excess of 1 billion dollars annually, through enforcement charges and loss of revenue," says Mr. Howell. "According to the American Federation of Labor, over 8,000,000 men and women are out of employment. Much of this, I believe, is directly or indirectly traceable to prohibition. Since its advent the cost of crime has steadily mounted until it has come to reach the staggering total of $3,000,000 daily. It is time the public faced the facts.

"Tom toms of straddling politicians are again beating, this time to attract the people from the main issue to their medicine side show, a referendum, which they claim houses the solution.

"Insincere or Uninformed."

"Politicians claiming to be wet are dividing into three groups; those who favor forthright repeal of the eighteenth amendment, those who advocate modification of the Volstead act, and the evaders who talk of a referendum. Those who advocate a referendum are either insincere or they are inexcusably uninformed.

"What do the referendum advocates propose? Obviously nothing more than a popular vote to determine whether the sentiment of the people is wet or dry. Such a proposal is mere chicanery. It offers no remedy, it postpones the real issue, and it refuses to admit the self-evident fact that the United States is preponderantly opposed to prohibition.

"It is in regard to the referendum I wish to express myself, and at the same time put before the public the legal status of prohibition reform.

No Authority for Referendum.

"Nothing except a moral victory could possibly be gained from a referendum. Nowhere is any provision made for one in the constitution. If congress were to enact a law calling for a referendum it would fail for want of power in the enacting body. Without a new amendment to the constitution providing for such a procedure, a referendum would be no more than an unauthorized and futile expenditure of public time and money. It can, therefore, be no more than a dilatory artifice called forth to becloud a political and economic issue requiring direct and courageous determination.

"Although futile, a referendum would involve the employment of hordes of new and expensive government officials, it would be years in the undertaking and it would have no more binding force than the Literary Digest poll. We have had three overwhelmingly wet referendums on prohibition in Illinois during the last decade, but the search and seizure act remains upon our statutes.

"The eighteenth amendment forbids the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors in the United States and its territories. It neither defines intoxicating liquor nor provides a penalty for violating its prohibition. Without enforcing legislation it has only the sanction of conscience and can be violated with impunity. The Volstead law, enacted like other statutes, defines as an intoxicating liquor one containing more than one-half of 1 per cent alcoholic content, and also provides penalties for its violation. The Jones 5 and 10 law, enacted afterward, makes the penalties more severe.

Congress Can Modify Law.

"It is lamentable that congress, in enacting the Volstead law, fixed such an absurdly low permissible alcoholic content, thus prohibiting palatable beverages that are healthful and harmless. It is on account of the loss of revenue to the government from the manufacture and sale of nonintoxicating light wines and beer that many are advocating its modification. This beneficial change can be effected without a nullification of the eighteenth amendment by a majority vote of both houses of congress, approved by the President, merely by substituting in the present enforcement act 3, 5, or 6 per cent in the place of one-half of 1 per cent.

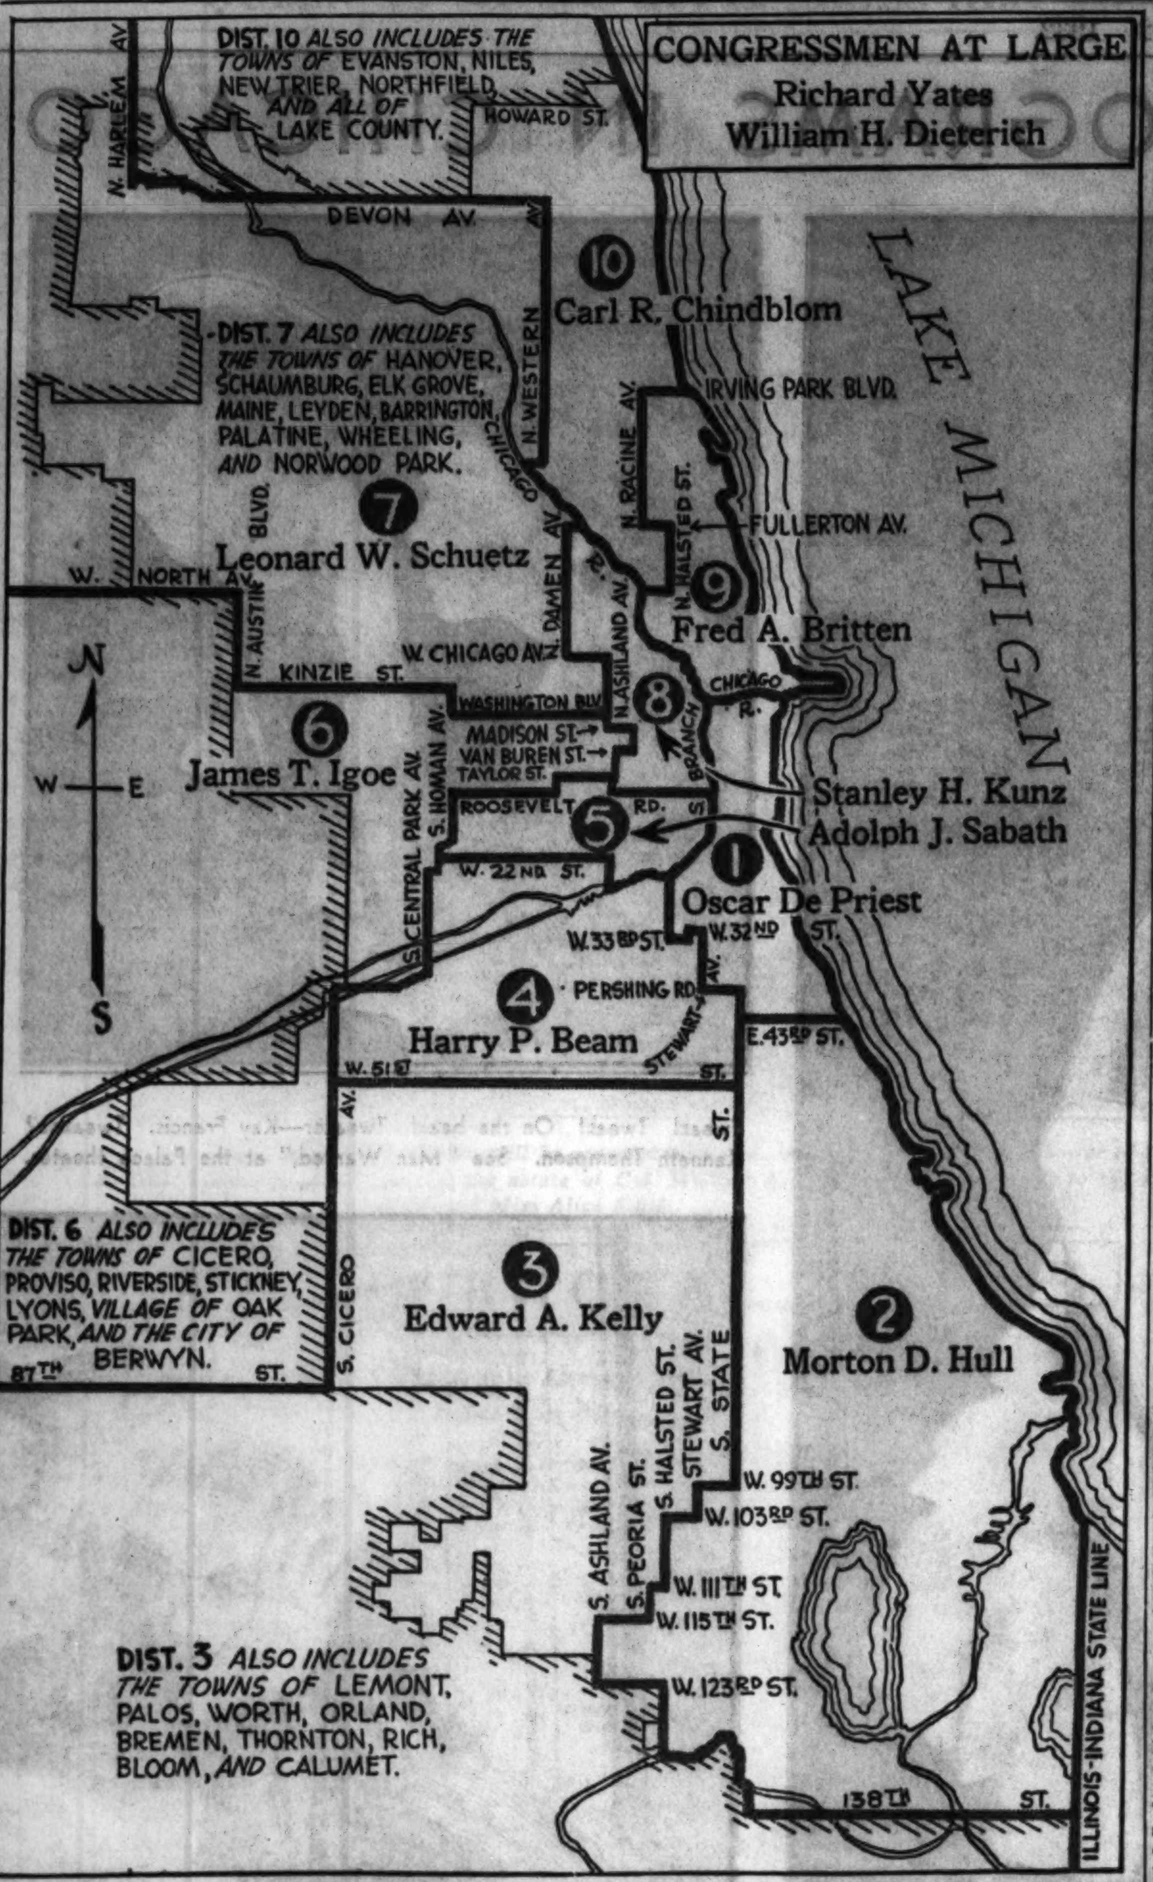
"I am firm in the conviction that the ultimate and correct prohibition reform is the one that will remit the problem to the state, where it properly belongs. This can be accomplished only by the repeal of the eighteenth amendment. Such repeal cannot be brought about by a referendum, but can be accomplished only by an amendment to the constitution, as provided in article V. This article stipulates that amendments may be proposed by a two-thirds vote of both houses of congress, or by a constitutional convention called by congress on the application of the legislature of two-thirds of the state, and proposals become a part of the constitution by ratification of the legislatures of three-fourths of the states, or by ratification of state convention in three-fourths of the several states, as congress may designate.

Cites Difficulties of Repeal.

"It is clear that if the eighteenth amendment is to be repealed two-thirds of both house and congress must favor the proposal. Thirteen states can successfully block a repeal through the refusal by legislatures or state conventions to vote for ratification. Repeal, therefore, can be secured only by concentrating efforts on sending anti-prohibition members to both houses of congress and to the state legislatures.

"The project of repeal, although ultimately successful, would likely involve years. The modification of the Volstead act permitting light wines and beer can be accomplished directly and immediately by sending to the United States congress a sufficient number of anti-prohibition members to constitute a mere majority of both houses and by the election of a President who would not veto the modification measure when enacted."

WATCH YOUR CONGRESSMAN



Having received numerous requests from people throughout Chicago and vicinity for the names of their congressmen and the number of their congressional district, and believing that many people are deterred by lack of this information from looking up their congressmen's records and from writing to their congressmen on matters of public interest, The Tribune today prints a map showing the boundaries of each congressional district in Cook county, the number of each district, and the name of the congressman now representing that district. Voters are urged to clip the map for future reference in order that they may inform themselves of their congressmen's activities as presented daily in Washington dispatches.

ALL AURORA SEES EXPERIMENTS IN EFFECTS OF DIET

Rat Exhibit Supplements Nutrition Course.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

What happens to Tom, Dick, and Harry when each eats a different diet has been demonstrated to old and young of Aurora during the last two months. The names were given to three white rats in the window of the Lincoln building, River and Downer streets, headquarters of the nutrition program conducted by the American Red Cross.

The three rats, born at the same time and with the same ancestry, started out at the same weight. Each was given a cage of his own and the same basal diet of whole wheat bread, water, and vegetables. At the time of weighing last Monday, Tom, having had milk added to his diet, weighed 75.3 grams; Dick, given coffee, tipped the scales at 55 grams, and Harry, fed candy, lagged with a weight of 53 grams.

The nutrition program, started March 10 by Miss Martha Mae Hunter, assistant national director of nutrition service, American Red Cross, has been carried on with Miss Imogene Carlisle in charge. The program, first in the state, has been sponsored and financed by the Aurora chapter of the Red Cross, of which Judge Olney Allen is chairman. Organization of the work has been under the direction of Miss Julia Gavin, executive secretary of the Aurora chapter.

500 Attend Classes.

The service, originally scheduled to close May 10, has been extended until next Wednesday. At that time Mrs. Ervin Johnson, chairman of volunteer workers, will carry on the activities.

Included in the service conducted by Miss Carlisle have been 13 adult classes in which there has been an enrollment of 500. Three of these classes for social workers, nurses, and heads of county organizations, have been held at the headquarters. Their aim has been to give instruction on how to feed families and keep them well at small cost. Ten of the classes have been held in various parts of Aurora.

The slogan of the program has been, "Food is our medicine. If we eat the right kind of food we are going to keep well; if the wrong kind, we are going to be sick."

Cites Danger of Tuberculosis.

"We haven't reached every one we should like to," said Miss Carlisle, "but we have stressed the idea of carrying the word to neighbors who have not attended our lectures and received our recipes. Interest in the program has been most gratifying. There is a realization that without such service communities pay for indifference to diet in later caring for tuberculosis patients. Our sole aim is to feed families at less cost and keep them healthy."

While the Red Cross has conducted nutrition programs in the past, the present movement makes a particular aim of adjusting such programs to present economic conditions. It is pointed out that one of the compensations of the depression may be the benefits to be derived from better judgment used in the choice of foods which are not necessarily the expensive sort. The Aurora classes have included women from all stations of life.

Among the recipes demonstrated by Miss Carlisle have been those for inexpensive salads, cheap cuts of meat, and milk preparations. It has been pointed out that when vegetables are cooked too long some of the food value is lessened as well as extra expense incurred. Folk have been warned against carrying excess baggage in extra weight, and to defer old age by eating an abundance of foods containing vitamins.

Whole City Coöperates.

The nutrition service programs have provided a project enlisting the interest of the entire community. Mrs. E. H. Watson is nutrition chairman; Fred M. Pierce, president of the Aurora chamber of commerce, nutrition vice chairman; Mrs. Jack De Muth, headquarters chairman; Mrs. J. H. Bliss, chairman of building and supplies; Mrs. D. K. Ewing, chairman of transportation; Mrs. C. B. Moore, chairman of organizing classes; Mrs. Ervin Johnson, followup chairman, and Mrs. Everett Patelski, chairman of publicity.

Miss Eva Viers, executive secretary of the family service organization, has been active in carrying the program to homes in the county.

HOSPITAL PLANS TWIN FETE—GOLD, SILVER JUBILEE

The silver jubilee of the Oak Park hospital, 525 Wisconsin avenue, Oak Park, which is operated by the Sisters of Misericorde, and the golden jubilee in religion of Mother St. Beatrice, will be observed jointly Wednesday morning on the hospital grounds.

The solemn high mass will be sung at 9:30 o'clock by the Rt. Rev. Msgr. William Cummings, assisted by the Rev. Father Otto Nabiots of Forest Park and the Rev. Thomas Canty of River Forest. The Rev. Father Robert Kelly, S. J., president of Loyola university, will deliver the sermon. Novices from the Dominican House of Studies are to sing.

Dedicated in 1907.

The hospital was founded in the summer of 1905 by Dr. John W. Tope with the help of the Rev. Father Richard Dunne, then pastor of St. Luke's church in River Forest. The Sisters of Misericorde, whose mother house is in Montreal, Canada, came to Chicago in the fall of 1905.

The hospital ground was purchased from Andrew J. Flitcraft and the building erected at a cost of approximately $135,000. The corner stone was laid in July, 1906, and the hospital dedicated by Bishop Peter J. Muldoon on April 4, 1907. During the 25 years of the institution's existence 66,500 regular patients have been treated, besides a large number of emergency and X-ray cases.

The hospital now occupies the entire block on Wisconsin avenue between Madison and Monroe streets and the greater part of the land on Maple avenue between these same streets. The hospital was enlarged in 1923 by the building of the north wing and a part of the south one. St. Rosalie, the nurses' home, and the laundry were built immediately after. The school for nurses, which numbers approximately 60 students, is affiliated with Loyola university.

Has Long Record of Service.

Mother St. Beatrice, née Mary Agnes Julia Smith, came to Oak Park hospital in 1907. Born in 1858 in Alstead, N. H., she was educated in public schools, graduated from Tilton college in 1876, with a degree of M. L. A., and entered the novitiate in Montreal in 1880.

She was mistress of novices for eight years, general secretary of the order for twelve, bursar general for six, first assistant general for six, and became sister superior of the Oak Park hospital in 1919. In 1925 she again became bursar general and returned to the hospital as superior in September, 1931. For 39 year Mother St. Beatrice was organist of the community chapel in Montreal.

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know

OUR town is congratulating two of its popular young members on their marriage last week-end at St. John Berchman's Catholic church. The bride is the former Gertrude Marmoll, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Marmoll, 2814 Sacramento boulevard, and the bridegroom is George Swagler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Swagler, 2643 Richmond street. About 300 friends and relatives of the popular young couple attended the wedding, and more than a hundred attended the reception and party afterward.

While on the subject of marriage, we observe that Mr. and Mrs. Frank Schulz, 72 and 69 years old, respectively, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary Thursday at their home, 3111 Edgewood avenue, and that Mr. and Mrs. Walter Nelson, 5245 Lind avenue, observed the 20th anniversary of their marriage recently.

Dolores Glos, 7 years old, 448 North Austin boulevard, River Forest, is sticking to her bicycle for means of locomotion these days. Recently the little girl climbed on a policeman's motorcycle standing at a curb. The machine tumbled over and fell upon her right leg, fracturing it.

The Rev. and Mrs. K. Figenbaum were surprised recently with a party given in celebration of Dr. Figenbaum's tenth anniversary at the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer, Lamon and Berenice avenues. The pastor and his good wife were presented with a basket of flowers and a gift.

AFTER nearly 50 years of transporting commuters, Robert A. McLaughlin, 206 North Central avenue, and James C. Connor, 4403 West End avenue, have retired from service with the Chicago and North Western Railway company. The boys were said to be the oldest Chicagoans working on the railroad. Both were engineers.

GARDEN LEADERS PAY TRIBUTE TO MRS. J. D. HYDE

Work with Glen Ellyn Girls Bears Fruit.

MRS. J. D. HYDE.

Tribute is paid by her fellow leaders in the Junior Garden Club of Glen Ellyn to Mrs. J. D. Hyde, 300 Glenwood avenue, for the successful manner in which she has conducted the activities of her neighborhood group during the year.

There are 18 neighborhood leaders in the club of which Mrs. D. W. Alspaugh is general chairman, and Mrs. L. W. Leonard is assistant chairman. The club was led for three years by its organizer, Mrs. Charles Shrachta. It began with four groups and 44 children. There are now 200 children, from 8 to 14, who are active in the movement.

The purpose of the club is to interest children in nature study, to notice the beauty about them and help make their community more beautiful.

Juniors Plan Exhibition.

In Mrs. Hyde's group, which has attracted much attention since she took charge last October, are eleven girls between 10 and 12 years old. Mrs. Hyde began her program last November by distributing five tulip and three narcissus bulbs to each of her group for planting in their home gardens. All of the bulbs came into bloom this spring. The juniors will have an exhibition at the senior club show of the village to be held the second week in June.

For her December meeting, Mrs. Hyde arranged a special program for her group with decorations for Christmas made from evergreen boughs and myrtle vines. Prizes were given for the best arrangement of table centerpieces.

In February, as a Washington Bicentennial observance, the group planted an elm in Sunset park.

On Mother's day, Mrs. Hyde gave a party at her home at which the girls surprised their mothers by presenting them with greenhouse plants. On this occasion, each of the girls recited a verse, befitting the day, composed by Mrs. Hyde.

Plan Wild Flower Jaunt.

A future program planned by the group is a wild flower expedition to Lake Geneva and Deerfield.

For her unusual interest in conducting her group, Mrs. Hyde had been rewarded by an enthusiasm among the youngsters who are now demanding extra meetings. Mrs. Hyde has always been interested in her own garden and explained that added thrill has resulted from sharing her enthusiasm with others.

Leaders of groups in the Glen Ellyn Junior Garden club include Mrs. Elmer Grabow, Mrs. Arthur Mulvey, Mrs. Roland V. Emmons, Mrs. C. A. Sauer, Mrs. Harold F. Jauch, Mrs. F. S. Hinton, Mrs. Charles W. Coffin, Mrs. George F. Nelson, Mrs. L. F. Triggs, Mrs. Carl J. Richardson, Mrs. W. R. Gray, Mrs. E. J. Burns, Mrs. O. G. Sherman, Mrs. M. A. Payne, Mrs. A. L. Wanner, Mrs. W. E. Hunter, Mrs. M. J. Golden, Mrs. A. J. Bayler, and Mrs. J. D. Hyde.

The Glen Ellyn Junior Garden club is said to be the first of its kind organized in the state.

CONCORDIA GRADS TO RETURN FOR DIAMOND JUBILEE

River Forest College to Celebrate.

Several thousand Lutherans from all parts of northern Illinois are expected to assemble next week-end in River Forest for the celebration of the diamond jubilee of Concordia Teachers' college. The anniversary program will commence Sunday morning and continue through the evening of Decoration day, Dr. W. C. Kohn, president of the institution, announced yesterday.

Widely known Lutheran preachers have accepted the invitation of the college to come to River Forest and recall the various stages in the development of the school since its founding 75 years ago in Milwaukee. Since 1913 the institution has been located in the western suburb.

Dr. Kohn to Open Jubilee.

Dr. Kohn will open the first jubilee service at 10 o'clock Sunday morning in the Concordia gymnasium by introducing Dr. Frederick Pfotenhauer, president of the Missouri synod of the Lutheran church. His address will be followed by that of the Rev. O. C. Boecler of Des Plaines.

Sunday afternoon an out of doors service will be held at 3 o'clock on the college campus, with the Rev. Alex Ullrich, president of the Northern Illinois district of the Missouri synod, as the principal speaker. Dr. Walter A. Maier, professor at the Lutheran seminary in St. Louis, will deliver a short address, and a student chorus of several hundred voices will sing.

Former days at Concordia will be recalled Sunday evening when prominent alumnæ speak briefly. This program will also include addresses by Dr. Louis Swereringer of St. Louis and A. C. Stellhorn, superintendent of Christian education in the Missouri synod.

Ball Game on Memorial Day.

The morning of Memorial day will be given over to a field meet with a baseball game between Concordia and Valparaiso universities as the feature of the athletic schedule. Alumnæ will present a program in the gymnasium at 1:30 o'clock, and a student cast will present the play, "Set That to Music," at 8 o'clock in the evening.

It was in October, 1857, that the private teachers' seminary in Milwaukee was made a department of the Lutheran Theological seminary in Fort Wayne. This was the beginning of Concordia in River Forest. The action was taken, records reveal, to remedy the "deplorable lack of teachers in the parochial schools conducted by the Missouri synod." The teachers' seminary was expected to relieve this situation.

Moved to River Forest.

In later years the seminary was moved to Fort Wayne, where the upper rooms of a book store and flat were rented and converted into classrooms. In 1864 it was moved again to Addison. Here the first seminary building was begun in the spring of 1864, but, because of delays caused by civil war conditions, was not dedicated until Dec. 28, 1864. When the school was moved in 1913 to River Forest the student body numbered approximately 200, and the faculty was composed of nine members.

Today the enrollment at Concordia ranges from 350 to 400, and the faculty has grown to 18 members. In September, 1930, an event of especial importance took place when the practice school was removed to the new parish house of Grace Lutheran church, where the students have practice teaching in both the lower and upper grades.

The staff for the production is composed of Harry Miller, musical director; Hubert Lantz, program director; Dr. Louis P. Anderson, ticket sales; Dr. E. W. Gutzmer, Roy Chidlow, Charles Tefft, Saul H. Bloch, publicity director; George Meyer, and Miss Kollman, who is also director of the chorus.

End men will be Ray Hofner, Eddie Fisher, Werner Hamburg, George Dempsey, Earl Salomon, and Harry Lundgren; dancing chorus, Miss Audrey Steinbock, Miss Richardine McArthur, Miss Gertrude Pugh, Mildred Dahl Dempsey, Miss Roslyn Ex, Miss Ruth Busch, Miss Genevieve Herwig, Miss Jane Kiser, and Miss Georgia Miller; male chorus, Robert March, Dale Mudd, Robert Carpenter, Kenneth Johnson, Harold Thayer, Emil Johnson, and Harold Nelson; specialties, Miss Rose Besick, Miss Muriel Miller, Miss Mildred Negley, Miss Lenore Hamburg, Miss Catherine Finn, Wally Hill, Harold J. The directors' report, presented by the Rev. McKendry, detailed the progress of the work during the past year. According to the report, the director, staff and board have cut the budget 17 per cent for the coming year. Last year, the amount raised from all sources was $20,521. Of this amount $15,583 came directly from the churches and $4,339 from tuition. The budget accepted for next year is $19,970.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, May 23.

Wait until June to plant the tropical water lilies and they will start into immediate growth without checking. You may get the boxes ready now, filled with rich soil and placed in the pool. Fill with water to even with or just above the top of the boxes and let the pool alone until planting time. Other tender kinds of plants should not be planted around the pool until the lilies are planted. Tropical plants grow very rapidly during hot weather and become immediately established in the open ground if they are well rooted.

Tuesday, May 24.

Continue planting the potted perennials. Some perennials, if growing in four inch pots, should be well developed by fall and in perfect condition to survive the winter weather. Celery seed for next winter's supply may be sown now. Make the seed bed as fine as possible, incorporating plant food into it. If the soil bakes spade in sand to increase the porosity. Transplant the seedlings into well prepared soil and transplant to permanent quarters as soon as they reach four inches. Gardeners whose vegetables are well along should make another sowing for succession.

Wednesday, May 25.

Don't let the sweet peas become dry, for they soon exhibit signs of poor culture. Water thoroughly and, as the season advances, mulch with decayed fertilizer. Watch out for aphids and spray regularly with tobacco in some form. Aphids are destructive enemies of the sweet pea and soon destroy whole areas. Pick the flowers each night or morning and do not permit the seed pods to develop. Hedges should be clipped now, as they have made considerable growth.

Thursday, May 26.

Cultivate all vegetable plants when the ground can be worked. Paris green and arsenate of lead are both excellent stomach poisons for potato beetles or other bugs. The latter adheres to the leaves over a longer period and is more easily kept in solution with water. Sweet peas should be provided with support as soon as they show through the ground. Keep hardy vines in good trim by aiding the direction of growth. If the lawn clippings are removed pile them with soil for future use when decayed.

Friday, May 27.

Stake any tall growing perennials. Wait until the leaves of spring flowering bulbs, such as the early tulips, have ripened [turned yellow] before lifting them. Sweet alyssum may be sown for edging beds. To prolong the season of flowering shear the plants to prevent formation of seed. Prune early spring flowering shrubs, such as the forsythia. The buds for next year's blooming are formed this year. Tomatoes and other tender vegetables may be transplanted to the garden now.

Saturday, May 28.

Sow all herbs outdoors. Sow beets, artichokes, carrots, cress, kohlrabi, beans, brussels sprouts, cucumber, early turnip, melon, parsley, and other vegetable seeds. A dose of liquid fertilizer applied to the peonies will help the development of the flowers. Keep the withered pansy blossoms removed to prevent the forming of seed which takes much strength from the plants and restricts the number of flowers. Plunge azaleas, hydrangeas, and similar plants in the garden in full sunlight. Keep them well watered while growing. Arrange for a succession of the annual baby's breath, as their delightful white flowers are excellent for small bouquets.

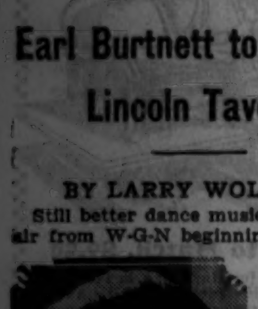
GUY LOMBARDO MOVES TO W-G-N; COMING TO CITY

Earl Burtnett to Open at Lincoln Tavern.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.



GUY LOMBARDO. [Seymour Photo.]

Still better dance music goes on the air from W-G-N beginning this week. The Lombardos—Guy, Carmen, Lebert and Victor—shift their popular half hour with George Burns and Gracie Allen, the vaudevillains, to THE TRIBUNE station at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening. . . . The weekly half hour cigar program moves from its 9 p. m. Monday spot on WBBM to W-G-N. . . . Furthermore, Guy will bring his Royal Canadians and "the sweetest music this side of heaven" back to Chicago, the scene of his first big triumph, for the week of the Republican national convention. . . . The orchestra will appear at the Chicago theater and will double, according to tentative plans, at either the Trianon or Aragon, with W-G-N as the outlet. . . . Clay Bryson and his orchestra, formerly with Ben Bernie and George Olsen, follows Herbie Kay at the Blackhawk shortly. . . . Doris Robbins stays on at the spot. . . . Rudy Vallee will make an appearance at the Aragon next Saturday.

Earl Burtnett and his orchestra, made famous in the middle west last year by W-G-N, will return next Thursday to open the summer season at the Lincoln Tavern on Dempster road and will again be heard exclusively from THE TRIBUNE station. . . . Burtnett and his band are known as the "Toast of the Coast," being the outstanding favorites of movie folk. . . . His band was featured in such talking pictures as "The Broadway Melody," "Viennese Nights," "Coquette," "Reaching for the Moon" and "Puttin' on the Ritz." . . . Earl will feature a former W-G-N star who has made good in talking pictures on the Pacific coast—Vernon Rickard—who was discovered by Quin Ryan after graduating from Notre Dame university in 1924 and who acted as Quin's assistant and W-G-N's first staff soloist during 1925. . . . He left W-G-N to become leading man with the Duncan sisters in "Topsy and Eva." . . . He also appeared in the "Fox Movietone Follies," "Puttin' on the Ritz," "The Shanghai Lady" and "The Spirit of Notre Dame." . . . Burtnett will feature also the soloists who became such favorites with the W-G-N audience last summer—Gene Conklin and Jess Kirkpatrick, former half back at the University of Illinois.

HUGO MARIANI.

Fred Jeske is pondering a letter from some kind of intelligentsiac . . . She says, "I'm so glad you are in line for stardom, and hope you will eventually take Morton Downey's or Rudy Vallee's place [I tune them out.]" . . . Sponsors are being offered plenty of big stage humorists since Ed Wynn made good on the air . . . Only Will Rogers has outdone him, however, in our opinion . . . Wynn makes Cantor look like George Jessell . . . Ed Wynn's personal letterhead bears Mark Twain's epigram: "I have no respect for a man who can spell a word only one way." . . . Hugo Mariani, the Uruguayan orchestra conductor, has a nice new black beard . . . Mariani was entering an elevator when some one called to him . . . He whirled around, but the door took away part of his beard . . . So he finished the job with a razor and is developing a new hirsute ornament . . . Irma Glen has a special ping pong room in her new home.

When Senator Huey [Kingfish] Long forbade [without authority] the playing of "The Chicago Tribune March" at dedication ceremonies at Tulane university last week he started something for W-G-N . . . Last week the station received dozens of requests for the "proscribed" number . . . "The Chicago Tribune March," by E. Chambers, a bandmaster of a generation ago, is frequently played without announcement on W-G-N programs . . . However, that listeners may recognize the forbidden tune the W-G-N Symphony orchestra will play it on its program at 5:30 tomorrow night.

Gus Arnheim and his Ace Band of Movieland opened at the Dells last Thursday. . . . They are heard over a CBS net from midnight to 12:30 on Sundays, Mondays and Fridays. . . . Charlie Agnew and his boys have been fitted up with new summer regalia preparatory to opening the Beach walk on June 11. . . . Frankie Masters is putting lots of keen music and chatter on the air from the Terrace Garden. . . . Frankie is featuring the Cutler sisters—Jean and Marion—this week. . . . Clever dancers and chanters, formerly with George White's "Scandals," Paul Whiteman and Ben Bernie.

May Singhi Breen and Peter De Rose have an indoor golf course which intrigues guests at their parties. . . . The Eskimos of the air have been invited to accept Vic Young's "Lord, You Made the Night Too Long" as their theme song. . . . Buddy Rogers says he knows a Hollywood movie queen who has a necklace made entirely of her own wedding rings. . . . Greta Garbo, Victor McLaglen, Edmund Lowe, Fifi D'Orsay, Clara Bow and Bebe Daniels were among those who promised to attend Buddy's opening at the Pennsylvania roof Thursday evening. . . . Irving Berlin has written a number for Kate Smith's Wednesday evening memory broadcasts titled "Just a Singer of Songs, Singing the Songs You've Forgotten."

The Corn and Hog state puzzles Carl Moore, who left W-G-N recently on a central and southern states tour. Writing from Davenport, he says:

> I thought I'd tell you how particular these Iowa hogs are. I was kinda bragging about my hog calling so the driver stopped the bus at the first bunch of hogs we saw. I got out and started calling these hogs and nary a one moved . . . but an old cow in the next field came running over and mooing all the time—I guess she thought I was hurt or something. I just can't figure these hogs out—they are either hard of hearing or don't know their onions, and I will state further that I will be glad when I get down in Arkansas where hogs are hogs. Maybe the depression has not hit these Iowa hogs yet. They are awful fat and when they don't come when I call them, boy, they are just not hungry.

May 19 was Carl Moore day at Pine Bluff, Ark., his home town. "I am not in favor of issuing proclamations promiscuously," Mayor Holderness said, "but when a local boy makes good in a big way in a big city and comes back home I feel that the occasion justifies the proclamation."

Irving Kaufman to Mimic Vallee Tomorrow Night

Irving Kaufman, mimic baritone of the Bath club, will impersonate Rudy Vallee, singing his number, "Your Time Is My Time," in the novelty program over W-G-N and the Columbia network at 7 p. m. tomorrow night. Kaufman also will sing, "I Love to See the Evening Sun Go Down," "Paradise," and "O, Susannah." Roger White's novelty orchestra will put "Ya Ya" and "Ay, Ay, Ay" in a medley, concluding with the "Limehouse Blues."

Chicago's Civil War Days to Be Recalled on Air

Ruth Atterbury Wakefield will tell of civil war days in Chicago in her program on W-G-N at 1:30 Wednesday. The program will be a memorial to civil war soldiers, and will introduce war songs written by Chicagoans. Allan Grant, pianist, will accompany Mrs. Wakefield in this special program.

W-G-N KNITTING GUILD IN ACTION

NEWCOMER

Meet Cicely, the "new girl in the block" in the Harold Teens sketch, heard on W-G-N at 5:15 each week day. Cicely is Ruth Dennen of Maywood. Ruth has sung over several Chicago stations and in 1930 was runner-up for honors among the sopranos in the Chicagoland Music festival.

R. M. A. PREVIEW REVEALS MANY IMPROVEMENTS

Annual Trade Show to Open Tomorrow.

The vanguard of thousands of radio men, including dealers and jobbers from every state and many foreign countries, and most American manufacturers, their engineers and representatives, began to arrive here yesterday to attend the annual trade show and convention of the Radio Manufacturers association, which opens tomorrow at the Stevens hotel.

More than 30,000 square feet of display space in the world's largest hotel are required to show the products of the nation's radio and television factories.

Improvement in Reproduction.

A pre-view of the exposition indicates that in the last 12 months in radio engineers have achieved remarkable improvement in reproduction. This was accomplished through improvement in circuit design, development of new tubes, and the adoption of twin speakers in many instances.

The affiliation of Western Television corporation of Chicago and Echophone Radio Manufacturing company, Waukega, Ill., announced on the eve of the trade show, is being discussed on every hand, since two pioneer companies are involved.

Old and New Unite.

Echophone has been in business continuously since 1921, and is one of the four or five oldest radio companies in America. Western Television is a progressive youngster and has become one of the largest firms of its kind in the country.

In a joint statement by Clem F. Wade, president of Western Television, and A. U. Magnan, president of Echophone, it was said that the latter company would produce Western Television receivers for the home in addition to midgets and consoles. Western will continue television research and the manufacture of television broadcasting equipment.

STREET SINGER WILL FEATURE CURRENT HITS

Arthur Tracy, the Street Singer, will feature a group of currently popular love songs during the broadcast to be heard from 8:15 to 8:30 p. m., tomorrow over W-G-N and the Columbia network. Opening the program with "Dream Lover," Tracy will next offer "Everybody Knows I Love You," and "Fate Introduced Me to You." His second group of songs will open with a Spanish selection, "Estrellita." The hit from the current musical comedy, "The Cat and the Fiddle," titled "The Night Was Made for Love" will next be heard, and the program will be concluded with Tracy singing "When Day Is Done."

SINGING PAINTER

KONSTANTIN MITASOFF.

Singing is a hobby and painting is the real profession of Konstantin Mitasoff, baritone, who is heard on W-G-N. Mr. Mitasoff is shown with a painting of Leonard Salvo, W-G-N organist, which he exhibited at the Evanston Country club recently. Mr. Mitasoff is now painting a portrait of Quin Ryan. In his program with Mr. Salvo and Happy Hank at 11 o'clock Thursday he will sing several Russian songs as well as his own arrangement of "Who Will Buy from My Basket."

HISTORY TO REPEAT SELF EVERY EVENING THIS WEEK ON W-G-N

History will repeat itself every evening this week, when Quin Ryan unveils more "Headlines of Other Days," at 9:25, from station W-G-N.

Listeners wait each evening to see what memorable event will be revived, whether it will be a catastrophe or a famous whimsicality or a review of the prices, modes, theatrical productions of a year in the past.

Last week Quin presented the staccato headlines of the San Francisco earthquake and fire, the Johnstown flood, Steve Brodie's jump from the Brooklyn bridge, the Wright brothers' first aeroplane flight, the death of Rudolph Valentino, and a review of a day in August, 1914. In the latter he quoted contents of the newspapers of that day, listing the plays in town, "Daddy Long Legs," "Peg o' My Heart," "A Pair of Sixes," "Potash and Perlmutter," and "Brewster's Millions." Current movie stars—James Cruze and Marguerite Snow, in "The Million Dollar Mystery"; John Bunny, J. Warren Kerrigan, Annette Kellerman, Wallace Reid, Theda Bara, Harold Lockwood, Maurice Costello, and Kathlyn Williams.

During the next few weeks the radio audience will hear reviewed, in the electrifying headlines: Fred Merkle's famous "bonehead" play in baseball; Floyd Collins' entombment in the Kentucky cave; the sinking of the Maine, and Gertrude Ederle's swimming of the English channel.

Woodlawn Legion Singers to Make Air Bow on W-G-N

W-G-N will present the glee club of the Woodlawn post of the American Legion in its first radio appearance at 8 o'clock Thursday night. This club of forty voices was organized last fall with several of the members of Father Finn's famous Paulist choristers as a nucleus. It is under the direction of Harry J. Stephens, choirmaster of the Visitation church. Ward Wetsell of the Sherwood School of Music, is accompanist for the group. Numbers to be sung in the W-G-N appearance are "John Peel," "Mosquitos," "Bells of St. Mary's," "Song of Fellowship," and "Rolling Down to Rio."

Executives' Club to Hear Dr. A. W. Beaven Friday

The Executives' club of Chicago closes its series of talks over W-G-N for the season when Dr. Albert W. Beaven, president of the Colgate-Rochester Divinity school is heard at 1 o'clock Friday. Dr. Beaven's subject is "Citizenship—A Privilege or a Responsibility."

Gigli to Broadcast on Circle Program Today

Beniamino Gigli will give his last radio concert of the eason when he sings as guest artist on the Circle program at 4:30 this afternoon over NBC.

ART OF KNITTING GETS NEW LIFE FROM AIR WAVES

W-G-N Guild Keeps Busy 5 Days a Week.

"The art of knitting is far from dead—in fact it is very much alive just now with all kinds of knitted wear the very latest fashion." So says Mary Laura Simpson, who is conducting "The Knitting Guild" on W-G-N at 2:30 five days a week.

Mrs. Simpson began teaching knitting when doing war work in 1915 in England. Her first instructions were given to blind and convalescent soldiers in the hospitals and rest depots. Later she taught the art to blind and other inmates of the Poor Law Institutions in England. At this time she was known as the youngest school principal in the north of England, specializing in handicrafts and music.

In 1924 she came to Canada and later to Chicago, where she has become noted as a designer, stylist, and teacher of knitting. She has a large class in knitting in Chicago and now her radio work bids fair to give her the largest class she has ever taught.

Knitted Designs Shown.

In the picture taken in the W-G-N studios are several of the interesting designs which will be taught to the "Knitting Guild" listeners. The white cap and scarf worn by Jean De Lee, leading lady in the new "Big Leaguers and Bushers" sketch, is the cap and scarf now being knitted by the class.

Katherine Roche is knitting a lacy sweater that will be given as a later instruction and Edward Smith, announcer is knitting the wristlet for a pair of gloves which Mrs. Simpson says will be all the vogue this summer.

Donald Pontius, usher, is wearing another of Mrs. Simpson's designs, a turtle necked sweater, which will be popular with the young men this summer. The sweater Mr. Pontius is wearing was knitted by a young man in one of Mrs. Simpson's classes. Instructions for making this garment will also be given over the air. Mrs. Simpson is shown wearing a Casino red dress of knitted Frilette in one of her own designs.

Instruction for Beginners, Too.

The Knitting Guild is now engaged in making a baby's helmet and sweater, and later this week, directions for various French net patterns for sweaters will be given, and these will be followed soon with directions for a simple knitted costume.

At present the instructions are being given to the more advanced students in order that they may have something to work on while lessons are given to beginners. Beginning next week Mrs. Simpson plans to give more time to those who are just learning to knit. All designs given out are original with Mrs. Simpson and many of them are not yet released in stores. Patterns and complete directions will be sent to all those interested in following the lessons.

Should a husband take his wife on fishing trips? The whole question of domestic relations as involved on fishing trips and what happens when friend wife has all the luck with rod and line will be aired at 9 o'clock tonight when Bob Becker, well known outdoor authority and fishing expert, brings Mrs. Becker to the microphone for his broadcast over W-G-N.

Mrs. Becker has accompanied her fisherman husband on scores of camping, fishing, canoeing, and even hunting trips in the United States, Canada, and Alaska during the last ten years.

In the broadcast tonight Mrs. Becker will tell about some of her experiences in the outdoors and at the same time advise wives on how to avoid cooking complications when on a camping trip and what to do when friend husband loses a 30 pound muskie.

CHANTRESS

FANNIE BRICE, WILL ROGERS ON ZIEGFELD HOUR

Dowling and Carlile Also to Appear.

Will Rogers and Fannie Brice, who for several years were co-starred in the Ziegfeld Follies, will be the headliners on the eighth edition of the Ziegfeld Radio show series to be presented over the W-G-N and Columbia network at 9:30 p. m. tonight.

Other principals in this broadcast include Florenz Ziegfeld, Eddie Dowling, master of ceremonies; Jean Sargent, torch singer; Charles Carlile, tenor; a large chorus of mixed voices, and an augmented theater orchestra under direction of Al Goodman.

Rogers, Fannie to Converse.

Rogers, making his fourth appearance on this series, will, as usual, broadcast from Los Angeles. He will greet Miss Brice, who will be in Columbia's New York studios, and for six minutes discuss various topics of the day.

Miss Brice's participation in the program Sunday night marks her first broadcast in almost a year, during which time she toured with "Crazy Quilt." It also will be her final radio program before she sails for her newly acquired chateau on the Riviera where she will remain for a lengthy vacation.

Fannie to Sing.

The star will sing several numbers, including "Rose of Washington Square" which she introduced and popularized in the Follies.

For fourteen years, ever since Ziegfeld recognized her talents in a burlesque show, "College Widows," and placed her in his Follies of 1909, Miss Brice has appeared under the producer's banner. And, interestingly enough, during this time no written contract ever existed between Ziegfeld and his star—a record in the chronicles of Broadway.

Neighborhood Theaters

A gay and romantic musical comedy is "This Is the Night," which may be seen at the Paradise today. Lily Damita, Thelma Todd, Charlie Ruggles, and Roland Young all contribute interest to the tale of a gay old bachelor who falls in love with a married woman. Not content with that, he further stirs matters up by hiring a young woman to pose as his wife, supposedly to quell any suspicions the husband may have.

"Sky Bride," also on the bill, concerns three stunt flyers who live by making the rounds of small towns at circus time and taking up passengers after the show. You might as well know right now that Sky Bride is the name of a plane and a dangerous one, too, for it causes the death of the youngest of the trio of pals. Richard Arlen and Jack Oakie star in this picture.

Rackets are here, there, and everywhere, and in the picture at the Paradise you may see how an unusual one works out. "The Miracle Man" concerns a band of crooks who, meeting with a hick town's "grand old man," who has supposedly wonderful healing powers, turn the business into something of a con game. In the cast are Sylvia Sidney, Chester Morris, Irving Pichel, Robert Coogan, and John Wray.

Senate Has Wheeler and Woolsey.

Wheeler and Woolsey monkeyshine for us again in "Girl Crazy" now playing at the Senate. The story is one of those mixed up affairs, having plenty of comedy, however. Romancing is done by Eddie Quillan and Dorothy Lee. Mitzi Greene is also present with some clever imitations.

"The World and the Flesh" throws you into the midst of a Red revolution in Russia. Krylenko, a Russian sailor, is known as a leader of the movement. Unluckily for him, he gets mixed up with aristocrats and goes so far as to fall in love with one of them. George Bancroft and Miriam Hopkins are in the leading rôles.

Neanderthalers on Screen.

The adventures of the Northwestern Australian Neanderthal expedition are recorded with accuracy on the screen at the Lamar in Oak Park tomorrow. Into the wilds of Australia the explorers go and are rewarded by finding men who do bear close resemblance to the Neanderthal man. The surprise is the discovery of a white woman and her small white son living among the savages. A story goes with it, of course. You won't be bored.

Robert Montgomery and Nora Gregor chase the blues in "But the Flesh Is Weak," also running at the Lamar. It's the one about the father and son who both are after a rich heiress for a wife. Each looks after the other's "best interests" cleverly.

"Carnival Boat."

There are mountains, log rolling episodes, grand scenery and everything in "Carnival Boat," now at the Broadway Strand. Bill Boyd, Hobart Bosworth, and Ginger Rogers play in this story of a dad who wants to direct his son's life, which, of course, doesn't work out. Besides crossing his father in his choice of a career, he falls in love with a girl on a carnival boat and father disapproves of that.

"Broken Wing," also playing, carries Lupe Velez, Leo Carrillo, and Melvyn Douglas along in a tale of old Mexico where resides a superstitious maiden. The cards say it is unwise to marry the head man of the town as her ideal lover is to appear soon. Following their advice, the maiden rejects the suitor and waits—but not for long. The lover appears and so does a lot of trouble.

Singin' Sam will be heard in a varied group of vocal selections during his broadcast over W-G-N and CBS from 7:15 to 7:30 p. m. tomorrow.

MRS. MANSFIELD TO BE SPEAKER ON POETRY HOUR

Mrs. Richard Mansfield, widow of the famous Shakespearean actor, will speak on the subject of "Poetry in Drama" during the first of a series of two broadcasts commemorating the sixth annual celebration of Poetry week, Tuesday from 2:15 to 2:30 p. m., over W-G-N and the Columbia network.

Known for her acting with her husband in Shakespearean dramas, Mrs. Mansfield made her last appearance in New York three years ago with her own repertory company. Since that time she has devoted herself largely to lecture readings in drama and poetry. Her talk during the program will be partially in the form of a tribute to the memory of her husband, the anniversary of whose death occurs on the date of the broadcast.

The series will be under the auspices of Anita Browne, founder-organizer of Poetry week.

By Charles Collins.

and his taste in manuscripts runs strongly toward European sources.

Play-Going Miracle.

Katharine Cornell's benefit performance of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," at the Civic Opera house last Sunday afternoon, was an amazing manifestation of her popularity, and also an overwhelming demonstration that the public is hungry for the drama at bargain prices. Every seat in the capacious auditorium [nearly 4,000] was sold within a few hours, in spite of the fact that the performance was given on only sixty hours' notice. More than that many people were turned away from the box office, where a line of customers began to form at 5:30 a. m.

This sounds more like a great sports event—a world series baseball game or a "battle of the century"—than the dejected and famished theater of the depression era; and the economists of "show business," if there be any, should give the phenomenon serious attention. It means that on equal box office terms, a play of dominant rating can surpass the most redoubtable productions of the cinema in popular appeal.

The performance also proved that dramatic performances in a quiet, naturalistic tone can be given in the Civic Opera house to the complete satisfaction of their audiences. The acoustics of the hall were found to be admirable for the unstrained speaking voice. Many patrons of the benefit expected to have little more than the satisfaction of seeing Miss Cornell; and they found, to their happy surprise, that they were also able to hear her and the other members of the company from the back rows.

All of which is a cheerful omen for the "Scandals" engagement at the Civic. Mr. White has thoughtfully installed a sound amplifying device to convey the twitter of his merry makers to the more remote corners; but apparently it will not be needed.

The Auditorium, that ex-opera house of mellow traditions, is also an acoustic miracle. I have an idea that if Walter Hampden had moved his production of "Cyrano de Bergerac" to this arena of ancient operatic glory, adopting Miss Cornell's democratic ticket scale [$1 for any and every seat in the house] he would have started a landslide of theater going.

Genius of Mimicry.

The extension of the engagement of "The Devil Passes," at the Selwyn theater, has inspired Cecilia Loftus, who plays the matronly prude in that comedy of ethics and epigram, to a charming adventure. Next Friday afternoon, in the Selwyn, she will offer a program of the art of mimicry and character impressions, for which she has a remarkable genius.

Playgoers of middle age or more are still talking about the "Cissie" Loftus whom they saw in their youth and hers—a winsome, slender girl with the soul of a chameleon. There have been many mimics, as the years rolled on; Elsie Janis, for example, was excellent in this form of entertainment; but there has been only one "Cissie" Loftus. Her skill in sketching with light satire the personalities of stage celebrities was uncanny. It was, indeed, something more than skill; there seemed to be something clairvoyant and intuitive in the process. Tricks of makeup, gesture, and inflection were only a part of "Cissie's" mimicry; she also became possessed by the soul of her subject.

"Cissie's" Career.

Her selections for this special matinée will be up to date. Her study of Sarah Bernhardt belongs, I believe, to the repertory of her youth; but the others will require no long playgoing background for their appreciation. The list of subjects will include Ruth Draper, Noel Coward, Beatrice Lillie, Ethel Barrymore, Fannie Brice, John McCormack, Pauline Lord, Jeanne Eagels, the Duncan Sisters, Florence Reed, Harry Lauder, Mrs. Fiske, and Nora Bayes.

Miss Loftus' American phase began in 1900, after she had won fame in the London music halls with her imitations. She has had a long and distinguished career on the legitimate stage; has been leading woman with Sir Henry Irving and E. H. Sothern; has played Juliet, Viola, Ophelia, and other Shakespearean heroines; has acted the title rôle of "Peter Pan" in London, and has been a star in modern comedies. Her last American tour as a specialist in mimicry dates back to 1909.

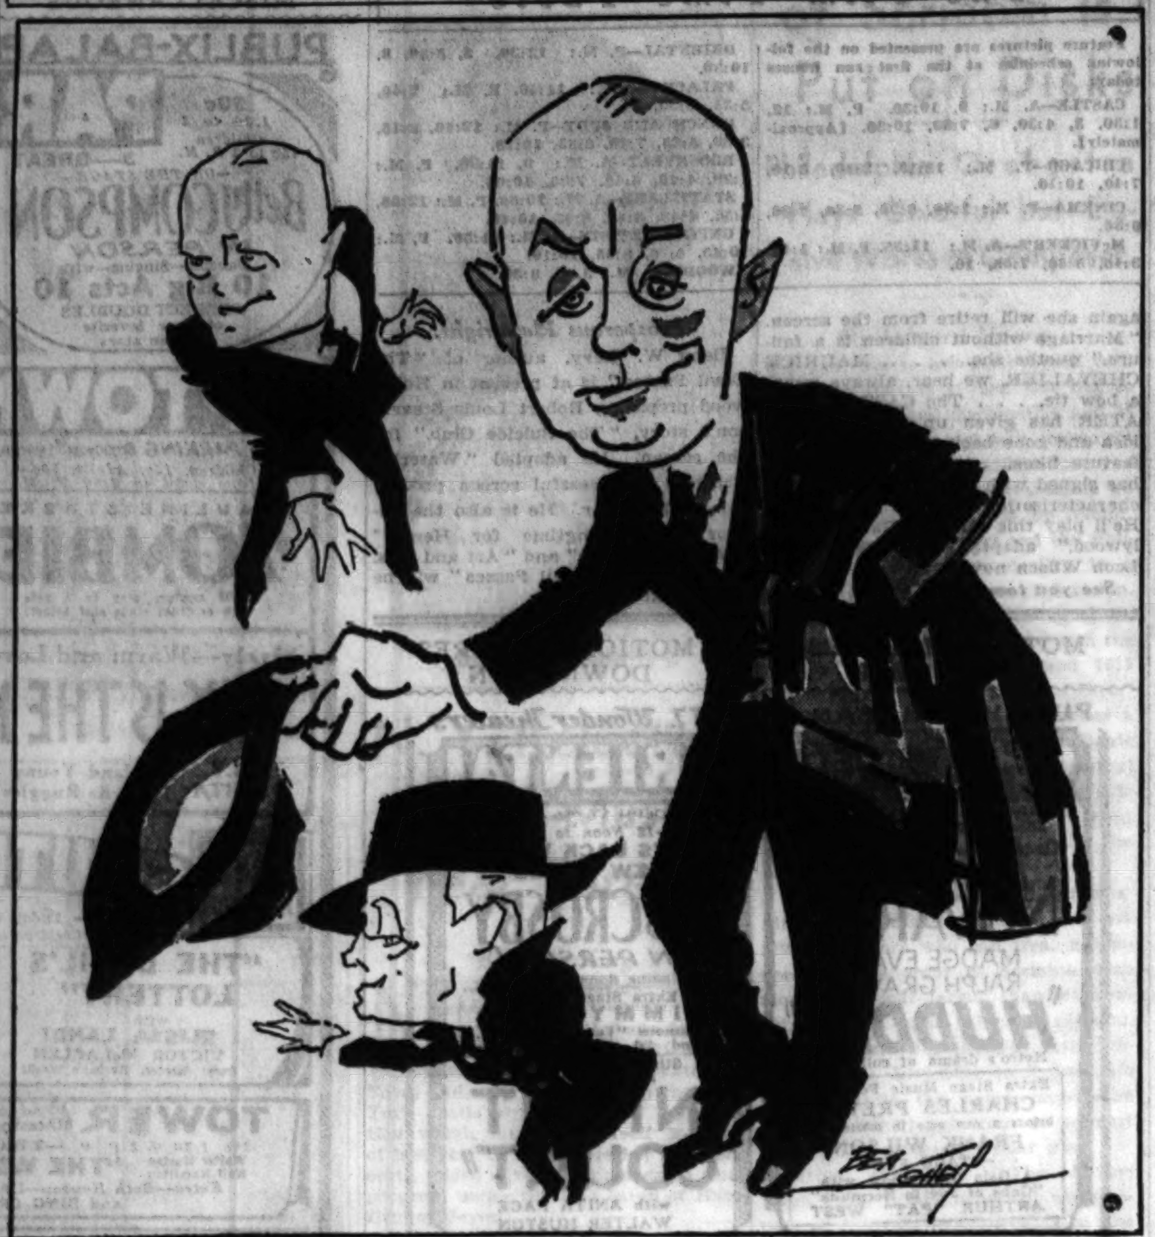
Hello—Goodby, Says Old Mr. Cohan



GEORGE M. COHAN AS A DETECTIVE.

MR. COHAN of Broadway and the U. S. A. is here cartooned by Ben Cohen in his latest role—a private detective in "Confidential Service," which ended its stay at the Grand Opera house last night after a two weeks' engagement. He plans to take this play to New York next fall, and also has several new manuscripts of his own authorship for staging. In the meantime he will arrive in Hollywood June 1 to direct a pair of talkies called "The Phantom President" and "The Eagle Screams."

Miss Collier's Forty Years of Theater Life

CONSTANCE COLLIER, the star of "Hay Fever" at the Adelphi theater, has been a figure in the English theater for the last forty years. Her first rôle was in a touring company of "The Silver King" when she was but three. In this she appeared with her father and mother. Her family has been identified with the theater for generations.

CONSTANCE COLLIER.

At the age of 14 she was in the chorus of the famous Gayety theater in London. Her first rôle in a play was in "The Sign of the Cross" at the Lyric theater, London. Shortly thereafter she played with Nat Goodwin and Maxine Elliott in "When We Were Twenty-one" in London. Thereafter she was for many years in the companies of Sir Herbert Tree. Among her conspicuous engagements with Tree were those in "The Eternal City," "Oliver Twist," and "Antony and Cleopatra." In the last production Sir Herbert Tree and his company were summoned to Berlin to give a command performance before the kaiser.

Miss Collier's first visit to America was due to Charles Frohman. Her first appearance in New York was with William Gillette in Henri Bernstein's "Samson." The following year she played in New York in Bernstein's "Israel." This was followed by engagements in an adaptation of "Thais" and "Oliver Twist."

After the war Miss Collier staged and played in "Peter Ibbetson" in New York, along with John and Lionel Barrymore, and some four years later played with Ina Claire in "Our Betters." This was a revival of a play in which Miss Collier had made a great success in London during the war. She appeared in Chicago in "The Matriarch" at the Princess theater in the fall of 1929.

B'way Openings

NEW YORK, May 21.—[Special.]—Jane Cowl's appearance in a new play will be the only event of importance on the Broadway stage next week. The announcements of premières are as follows:

"On the Make"—Opens Monday night at the 48th Street. A comedy by Roger Gray, with Jeannette Fox-Lee, Ruth Fallows, Harry Short, George Sweet, and Charles Hammond.

"Yeah-Man"—Opens Monday night at the Park Lane. A new Negro revue, whose opening has been postponed twice.

"A Thousand Summers"—Opens Tuesday night at the Selwyn. Jane Cowl will make her first appearance of the Broadway season in Merrill Rogers' play about the love of a young man for an older woman, and vice versa. Franchot Tone and Osgood Perkins are featured in a company which also includes Mary Newham-Davis, Josephine Hull, Thomas Findlay, and Florence Edney.

"Heigh-Ho, Everybody!"—Opens Wednesday night at the Fulton. Herbert Polesie, with assistance from John McGowan, is the author of this satire, which deals with radio crooners. Joseph Santley will head the cast; other participants will be Harry Rosenthal, Edna Hibbard, and Nana Bryant.

From Stage to Screen.

Verree Teasdale, who was recently announced for Lew Leslie's forthcoming revue, "Clowns in Clover," has changed her mind and gone to Hollywood. She will act in a new talking picture called "Skyscraper."

George White 'Scandals' for Opera House

Comedy by Noel Coward Comes to Adelphi with Miss Collier as Star.

George White's "Scandals," in the latest edition of this series of rich entertainments, will begin a four weeks' engagement at the Civic Opera house this evening. The company, which is having a prosperous tour, is headed by the famous Rudy Vallee, whose associates include Willie and Eugene Howard, veteran of the reveues; Ethel Barrymore Colt, daughter of the celebrated Ethel; Everett Marshall, a baritone from the Metropolitan opera company; Ray Bolger, a dancing comedian; and the Gale Quadruplets, singers and dancers. Among the minor principals are Joan Abbott, Barbara Blair, the Loomis Sisters, Rose Maclean, Fred Manatt, Helen Gordon, and Donald Tannen. The chorus girls are numerous, and Mr. White boasts of their loveliness.

GEORGE WHITE.

The authors of the program are Lew Brown and Ray Henderson, for the tunes and lyrics; and Mr. White, Lew Brown and Irving Caesar, for the sketches. The stage settings were designed by Joseph Urban.

A sound amplifying system has been installed in the opera house for the run of the "Scandals," and the impresario of the show guarantees that every one will be able to hear the jests and rhymes. The acoustics of this magnificent playhouse, incidentally, are excellent. Katherine Cornell's benefit performance of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" last Sunday afternoon proved that quite realistic comedy can be acted in this operatic environment with complete success.

Except for the all star "gambol" benefit of last November, the "Scandals" will be the first light lyric amusement to be given in the Civic Opera house. Mr. White will attend the première.

"Hay Fever," a light comedy by Noel Coward, one of the most successful and popular playwrights of the Anglo-American stage, will begin a two weeks' engagement at the Adelphi theater tonight, with Constance Collier as the star of the company. Others in the cast are Eric Cowley, Anthony Kemble-Cooper, Betty Linley, Valerie Cossart, Edward Cooper, Terence Neill, Alice Belmore Cliffe and Julia Hoyt—all well known players.

The play deals with the irresponsible household of a retired actress during a week-end party. The impresario of the production is Patterson McNutt. Noel Coward's "Private Lives" figured on the Chicago playbills of last fall. His "Cavalcade," a dramatic pageant dealing with episodes in the recent history of England, is now a great success in London.

"Rio Rita" as Vaudeville.

"Rio Rita," the successful Ziegfeld musical comedy of several seasons ago, will be produced, in abbreviated form, in the larger film and vaudeville theaters of the Loew circuit, opening in New York late in May.

Armchair Playgoer

By Fanny Butcher.

"A GARLAND of sketches and lyrics, most of them from the Cochran reviews, jingles that are remembered delights and brilliant satirical dialogues" are gathered in Noel Coward's "Collected Sketches and Lyrics" [Doubleday-Doran], which was published on Thursday. In an explanatory preface to the volume Mr. Coward candidly says: "I have left out most of the sentimental lyrics such as 'A Room with a View,' 'The Dream Is Over,' etc., etc., because they really do look silly in plain print. If some of the sketches appear to finish rather abruptly, please remember that that is the moment when the reader is expected to rock with laughter. A fuller effect might be obtained by reading the sketches aloud with one hand on the electric switch and on the last line plunging the room into darkness, thereby achieving as near as possible a 'black out.'"

NOEL COWARD.

It's a braw idea of Mr. Coward's—the reading aloud part, at least—for the quips and jingles are the funnier in mathematical progression according to the number of people with whom one can share them. Mr. Coward is not the world's greatest writer, but he is unquestionably one of the world's greatest revue jugglers, and it is interesting to see in cold print some of the things which we thought were superb when they were produced. The fact that they lose by having no footlights is a proof of their essential dramatic and stage quality rather than a black mark against it.

Mr. Coward assures the reader that the lines in the lyrics which do not appear to scan are all right when they're fitted to their music. "Therefore," he says, "in the case of those for which the music has not been published, I suggest that the reader make up a little rhythm in his own head to fit the words. This occupation," he adds cynically, "might conceivably pass many a long winter evening very unpleasantly."

Perhaps the long winter evenings might be passed thus unpleasantly, but certainly the longer summer ones might be made very pleasant by a "reading from Coward," and the original expenditure of $2.50 for a copy of the book might be classed, in these days, as the kind of bargain that it is an extravagance to miss.

Eight Shows Drop Out of B'way Lineup

Donald Brian to Co-Star with Ina Claire; Gossip of New York Stage.

NEW YORK, May 21.—[Special.]—Seven theatrical productions are saying their farewells to Broadway with tonight's performances. They are "Blessed Event," "Whistling in the Dark," "Too True to Be Good," "Riddle Me This," "The Laugh Parade," "The Warrior's Husband," and the Judith Anderson-Florence Reed company of "Mourning Becomes Electra." The sudden closing of "There's Always Juliet" last Wednesday night brings the list of erasures from the playbills up to eight. Therefore only eleven shows will carry over the week-end in Gotham. The openings of the new week will bring the catalogue up to fifteen.

Donald Brian will be associated with Ina Claire in the cast of Robert McLaughlin's staging of "Reunion in Vienna," which is scheduled for a première in Cleveland, O., May 29. A rumor that John Gilbert, Miss Claire's ex-husband, would get the Alfred Lunt rôle had the tabloid journalists running around in circles for a while. Florence Gerald will inherit the rôle acted by Helen Westley in the Theater Guild's production. Others in the company will be Harry Mestayer, Madeline Delmar, and Edna Archer Crawford. After its run in Cleveland the play will be headed toward the Pacific coast.

Lew Leslie insists that his new revue, "Clowns in Clover," will have its première at the Grand Opera house, Chicago, June 12, although the show is not yet in rehearsal. Verree Teasdale, whom Mr. Leslie announced as one of the stars of this entertainment, has gone to Hollywood for film work.

Broadway is taking an acute interest in the filming of "Once in a Lifetime," the comedy that tried to laugh Hollywood out of business. The denizens of the street have received with roars of laughter Carl Laemmle Jr.'s announcement of the specifications for the scenario. "Of course," said Mr. Laemmle in a recent interview, "we will have to take the satire out of it."

A musical version of "The Command to Love," a famous and frisky comedy of several years back, is scheduled for the new season, with Irene Bordoni and Leon Errol as its stars. Dwight Deere Wiman is the manager with this bright idea, and to insure a smart libretto he has commissioned Guy Bolton and P. G. Wodehouse to do the literary work, with a manuscript in similar form by the German author of the piece, Rudolph Lothar, as its basis. The score will be composed by Ralph Erwin.

A well known dramatist has a title without a play to match it, but he thinks that half the battle has already been won. The jotting in his notebook is: "Ten Barrooms in a Night."

Katharine Cornell was the actress that Owen Davis had in mind when he made his dramatization of Pearl S. Buck's best selling novel, "The Good Earth." When he learned that Miss Cornell would not consider the matter until late next season he took his manuscript to the Theater Guild. People who have read the novel know that the dominating rôle in the story is a man—a Chinese peasant—but apparently Mr. Davis has favored the plodding wife in the dramatization.

The régime of Gilbert Miller at the Empire theater, where much stage history has been made, will end late in June with the closing of the engagement of "The Animal Kingdom." Mr. Miller will then transfer his headquarters to his own theater, bearing his father's name, on West 43d street.

When Miss Cornell arrives in Los Angeles May 31 with "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" she will begin consultations with Sidney Howard and her husband, Guthrie McClintic, with the former's new play, "Alien Corn," as the subject of the debate. How, when, and where to stage the play will then be settled.

New "Show Boat"

"SHOW BOAT," the musical comedy by Jerome Kern and Oscar Hammerstein 2d based on Edna Ferber's novel, was revived by Florenz Ziegfeld last Wednesday night at the Casino theater (formerly the Earl Carroll), New York. A number of players who appeared in the original cast of 1927-'28 resumed their former parts, among them Helen Morgan, Norma Terris, Charles Winninger, Edna May Oliver, Eva Puck, Sam White, and Aunt Jemima. Dennis King and Paul Robeson sang the rôles formerly taken by Howard Marsh and Jules Bledsoe, respectively.

Drama for Export.

Hans Bartsch, European play agent, announces that he has acquired the rights to Benn W. Levy's "Springtime for Henry" for Central Europe and will produce the play in Germany next season with Ralph Albert Roberts, Berlin comedian, in the leading part.

Pens in Hand, Opera Lovers Do Their Stuff

To the Dramatic Editor:

CHICAGO, May 17.—Your criticism on "Don Pasquale" was stupid and asinine. "Don Pasquale" has lived one hundred years, and will live another hundred years, while you will be dead, buried and forgotten. Bah! ANONYMOUS.

Chicago, May 17.—I have just read your criticism of "Don Pasquale" and hurry to offer you my enthusiastic, though humble, approval to counteract some of the yelpings you'll probably hear.

One without exceptional intelligence can walk into the theater and understand a play. And even though the same person may love music and speak several languages, he must study the libretto diligently to possess the faintest idea of what it all means when he sees an opera. V. P.

Chicago, May 13.—Your failings as an opera critic are of no interest to lovers of opera. It would hardly seem necessary, except for the lack of knowledge you display, to explain that in opera the primary purpose is the presentation of music; the plot, illogical or fantastic though it may be, merely forming a convenient frame on which to shape the musical structure. Incidentally the writer cannot understand your difficulty in comprehending the plot of "Don Pasquale." The English synopsis should be particularly helpful to one of your intelligence, and we suggest that another time you save yourself much mental anguish by perusing it beforehand. Under the circumstances your article can be construed only as a loutish, blundering piece of effrontery. ANONYMOUS.

Chicago, May 18.—Your review of the performance of "Don Pasquale" was uncalled for in every respect and was far from funny to the music world.

If you could not intelligently cover this opera, why did you not give the matter over to Edward Moore, who would have championed the cause, the English language, and, most of all, young Chicago artists?

The production should have a long run and give some fifty people lucrative employment all summer, and a "dumb" review like yours does a lot of damage and certainly is nobody's idea of ending the depression. JESSIE B. HALL.

Acted an Editor.

Arthur Byron, one of the stars in "The Devil Passes," originated the leading rôle in "Five Star Final," and acted in this drama of newspaper life all last season in New York. In the film version his rôle was played by Edward Robinson.

Hersholt Solves Hirsute Worry Over New Roles

A Short Stiff Prussian Haircut for One Side, Curls on the Other.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—Jean Hersholt has lost some twenty pounds recently, and looks much more like the young fellow that he is. His present worry, he said, while lunching at M-G-M, is how he is going to manage to play the two rôles he is lined up to do simultaneously. One requires a short stiff Prussian haircut, and the other the long curling hair which Hersholt normally wears. He figures that if they can only arrange all his shots as profile shots he can do one side of his head one way and the other the other way.

JEAN HERSHOLT.

Harry Bannister popped in at the same table for a moment, lean and sun burned and much reduced in weight since his sojourn in Nevada getting his divorce.

Dick Wallace, Paramount director, has a morning chore which he performs daily. He has eight juvenile customers who are collected from the homes on his hillside and taken to school each morning as he makes his trip to the studio. He claims the laughs and enjoyment he gets from the kids repay the time and trouble.

That Far Away Look.

Jimmie Dunn and Maureen O'Sullivan seem to fancy each other, going about places together and lunching with that far-away look in the eye. Seems the Molly O'Day engagement rumor is cold now.

MAUREEN O'SULLIVAN

Tom Gallery, ex-husband of ZaSu, is devoted in his attentions to Madge Evans. And Dorothy Burgess, whose engagement to Clarence Brown is cold, was at the fights with Lyle Talbot. Marlene Dietrich is another fight fan and gets all steamed up. A recent bout saw her pounding Von Sternberg on the head and wringing the arm off of Herr Rudy Seiber, her husband.

Colleen Moore threw a large tea party at her home in Bel-Air recently, with practically everybody there. Echoes of an old friendship were seen in the devoted attention that Jerry Miley gave to Billie Dove. Among the other guests were Lilyan Tashman, Tom Douglas, Jetta Goudal, and Harold Grieve, her husband—Jetta very exotic.

In the Films Now.

Gloria Shea is that luscious girl whom you have seen in the ads. She works at Warners, First National studio now. She is a co-ed, has had experience in "glorifying the American girl" on the stage, and has sung over the radio.

Loretta Young and Gilbert Roland have struck up quite a friendship, which started when the pair were working on "When Life Begins," at Warners'.

One writer at Paramount works under an unusual contract, five straight years with no options. He has the right to forbid the use of his name on any of his films after a preview which dissatisfies him. He has exercised that right several times, much to the annoyance of the employing studio.

They do say Eddie Buzzell has a picture of his ex-wife, Ona Munson, in his apartment with his own idea of autograph on it, written by himself. It reads: "To Eddie—and let this be a lesson to you!"

New Bennett Hairdress.

JOAN BENNETT.

The West Side Asthma Riding club, organized by the Marx Brothers and their pals, has now a rival organization called the Korned Beef, Kabbage, and Kultur club. The club disclaims any serious purpose, and is composed of Rupert Hughes, Donald Ogden Stewart, Don Marquis, Waldmer Young, William Slavens McNutt, Lee Shippey, and other boon companions.

Poor old Mme. Bovary is still causing trouble. A company making the well-known classic into films decided to change the title to "Indecent," but the Hays organization barred the title as too sensational. The producer countered with the plea that the original title suggested a costume picture, and he had to jazz it up a bit.

New Stage Beauty

DIANA WYNYARD.

SHE came from London to play the role of the heroine in "The Devil Passes," now at the Selwyn theater, and has been called "Beautiful Lady" so often in print that the magnates of Hollywood intend to give her a whirl in the films. Miss Wynyard runs true to the English type—she is tall, fair, and cool.

The Voice of the Movie Fan

New Meaning to Movies.

Dear Mae Tinée: I've just been wanting to say this for so long, and even now, as I'm writing it, I'm afraid no one will listen.

It's about Conrad Nagel. I know I'm not the only one who feels this way about his pictures. We get him in such small doses nowadays, and that isn't the way we want him. O, for a picture in which he has the romantic lead as he used to before they started giving him so many secondary parts.

We do like Gable, Montgomery, Holmes, March, and many others, but would just be thrilled to pieces if Nagel could be cast again as romantic lead. If we could only bring this to pass, Mae, movies would have a new meaning.

Do I like your reviews, and have I liked them every week in and week out for years? So much that I get a big kick out of the way so many critics have been and are trying to imitate your style and fall so far short of attaining anything like your naturalness and spontaneous humor. Please, don't ever retire or accept any other job.

May I say lovingly instead of sincerely, F. M. B.

Editor's note: Indeed you may! and "right back at you," say Conrad and I.

About the Barrymores.

Dear Miss Tinée: I traveled down and saw "Grand Hotel" and, as did every one else, thought it was great. First time in my life that I ever cared to watch Garbo. It's a fact. I never disliked the lady and always admitted to the most rabid of her fans that she had the divine fire, but never before have I cared to watch one of her pictures. I went this time to see the Barrymores, and was not disappointed. I think it is John's picture. He contacted with all the principal players and that is something that no one else did, except possibly Jean Hersholt, if you must get technical. But regardless of that, one seemed to wait for the moments that Jawn would appear. He made the baron live, which was what Miss Baum probably wanted.

Large kick to be registered and filed for argument: All this late fuss about Lionel Barrymore finally coming into his own. The loud razzberry is delivered. This man was famous long ago and has been giving good performances for so long that he can tell most of the players' screen history by remembering his various rôles. He was in the game early, and I can remember when he headlined with the rest of the stars in "Jim, the Penman," "Enemies of Women," and the "Copperhead." And the movie magazines and some of the benighted critics are trying to say that he has only arrived after years of hard struggling. I am verra angry, as you might say. Incidentally, this same Barrymore between the years of "Enemies of Women" and "A Free Soul" played in a distinguished cast of "straight players" [including Clyde Cook and Gertrude Astor] in a hopeless slapstick presentation, one scene of which landed him in the proverbial fountain in the best Keystone manner.

Thanks for the momentary attention. I'm afraid I don't merit it.

Sincerely, CASEY ——.

Editor's note: Whether you merit it or not, you get it, Mr. ——. BAT?

Historiette

JOHN BARRYMORE once remarked, "I like to be introduced as America's foremost actor. It obviates the necessity of further effort." The brother of Lionel and Ethel was born in Philadelphia on Feb. 15, 1882. His father and mother were the late Maurice and Georgiana Drew Barrymore; his uncle the famous John Drew.

JOHN BARRYMORE.

Mr. Barrymore's great ambition as a boy was to be an artist, so he went to art school in Paris. Returning to New York, he worked for twenty minutes on the New York Telegraph. After being fired by experts from various news sheets, he turned to the footlights. His first stage rôle was in "Magda."

His favorite stage rôle is "Hamlet" and he rates as the best of his screen parts that of Ahab in "Moby Dick." He thinks "Eternal Love" is the worst picture he's ever made. "Don Juan" was his first photoplay to have a synchronized musical score, and his first all talkie was "General Crack."

Mr. Barrymore makes and spends a great deal of money, but has a manager who keeps close check on his finances. He is married to Dolores Costello and devoted to her and their little girl, Dolores Ethel Mae, and his fireside. Cares nothing at all for society and seldom goes to parties.

Favorite sports are fishing and trap shooting, and he's an ardent collector of books, old ivory, guns, curios, and birds. He is 5 feet 10 inches tall and weighs 150 pounds. Has gray eyes and brown hair, graying at the temples. He hates to dress up. His favorite colors are gray and blue.

His latest memorable pictures were "Svengali," "The Mad Genius," "Arsene Lupin," and "Grand Hotel." He appeared in the last two with his brilliant brother, Lionel.

girl in the case. She's very good in the emotional scenes—far more convincing than in her comedy interludes. Henry Armetta delights as Tony's iron working, spaghetti eating, boasting, bombastic little father. Other rôles are played all right and, of course, there are football games and football games. . . .

The film's principal fault is its story, which, as a story, is ordinary and not particularly absorbing. But director and players keep the vehicle so shiny and well oiled that you overlook defects in its construction.

Bits aBOUTem.

THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY, "The Education of a Princess," by Marie, Grand Duchess of Russia, will be filmed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which has acquired the motion picture rights. . . . SLATED FOR STARDOM are supposed to be RICHARD CROMWELL of Columbia, DAVID NEWELL, KANE RICHMOND and ROBERT YOUNG of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and CARY GRANT of Paramount. . . . A LONDON DISPATCH credits SIR HERBERT SAMUEL, home secretary, as saying in the house of commons that motion pictures are doing more to prevent crime than to encourage its commission. . . . Here, says EDMUND LOWE, are ten rules for attaining screen success:

"1. Forget the camera. There are other 'mugs' on the set besides yours.

"2. Heed the critics. Believe it or not, they give valuable pointers.

"3. Be natural. A stuffed shirt belongs in a show window.

"4. Listen to your director even though you may think him crazy.

"5. Don't gossip. The extras will do that for you.

"6. Learn to discount flattery. It is the food of mediocrity.

"7. Don't become blasé. Even the most experienced actor can learn something.

"8. Don't attempt to star yourself at the expense of others. It ruins proportion, usually your own.

"9. Even though the director doesn't see you, your audience will know when you're shirking.

"10. Forget temperament; it's a symptom of mediocrity."

. . . RICHARD ARLEN has been borrowed from Paramount by First National for a featured rôle in "Tiger Sharp," starring EDWARD G. ROBINSON. . . . CHARLIE CHAPLIN won't return to Hollywood till next autumn, according to report, because he wants to spend a longer time in the orient. . . . LORETTA YOUNG says that when she marries again she will retire from the screen. "Marriage without children is a failure," quoths she. . . . MAURICE CHEVALIER, we hear, always wears a bow tie. . . . The CASTLE THEATER has given up the news reel idea and gone back to the showing of feature films. . . . BEN TURPIN has signed with Paramount for a film characterization based on his own life. He'll play this rôle in "Gates of Hollywood," adapted from the Harry Leon Wilson novel.

See you tomorrow.

Prosperous Playwright.

Benn W. Levy, author of "The Devil Passes," is at present in Hollywood preparing Robert Louis Stevenson's story, "The Suicide Club," for the screen. He adapted "Waterloo Bridge," a successful screen production of last year. He is also the author of "Springtime for Henry," "Mrs. Moonlight," and "Art and Mrs. Bottle." "The Devil Passes" will be filmed next season.

Chicago-North Shore Festival Comprising 5 Concerts Starts Tomorrow

By Edward Moore.

Death from Wagner's "Tristan and Isolde." Mr. Stock will conduct the program and the festival chorus of 600 will sing.

Memorial to Peter Lutkin.

This, however, is getting ahead of the schedule of performances. Tomorrow night's concert is another memorial, Brahms' German Requiem, sung to the memory of the later Peter C. Lutkin by the chorus, who will later be heard in the "Gloria in Excelsis Deo" from Franck's Mass in A. The soloists are Mme. Vreeland and John Charles Thomas, the latter also announced for a group of songs. The conductors will be Mr. Stock and Glenn Cliffe Bainum, assistant conductor of the festival, who has been in charge of chorus rehearsals since they began in January.

Thursday night will be turned over to the United German male choruses under the direction of Karl Reckzeh. A group of songs will be sung a cappella, but these will be preceded by some elaborate concerted works. One is a composition by Mr. Reckzeh, "The Castle by the Sea"; another, Beethoven's "Die Ehre Gottes in der Natur" will have his orchestration. The final from Liszt's "Faust" Symphony will be sung by the male chorus and Mr. Molitore as soloist.

Saturday afternoon is always an interesting event in the festival list, because then the children's chorus of 1,500 takes possession of the stage and sings under the baton of John W. Beattie, associate director. Their part of the program this year will include a work by Bach, a setting of "The Lord Is My Shepherd" by Lutkin, and a group of English and Scotch folk songs arranged by Percy Grainger, who will also be the soloist of the program.

Later the boys' chorus will appear in other folk songs to be presented without accompaniment. Mr. Grainger is to be at the piano in Liszt's Hungarian Fantasy and his own "Handel on the Strand" and "Over the Hills and Far Away."

On the final concert on Saturday night the festival chorus will be joined by the University Glee club and the soloists will be Dusolina Giannini and Beniamino Gigli, who has just finished a term of years with the Metropolitan Opera company.

Choral features will be John Alden Carpenter's "Song of Faith," written for the Washington bicentennial, Lambert's "The Rio Grande," and "Britons, Alert!" from Elgar's "Caractacus." Mme. Giannini will sing "Divinités du Styx" from Gluck's "Alceste" and "Ritorna Vincitor" from Verdi's "Aïda." Mr. Gigli will sing "Cielo e Mar" from Ponchielli's "La Gioconda" and "Una Furtiva Lagrima" from Donizetti's "Elisir d'Amore," and the two will combine their voices in the duet, "Tu qui, Santuzza" from Mascagni's "Cavalleria Rusticana." The conductors will be Mr. Stock and Mr. Bainum.

Events of the Week.

In addition to the festival programs, a number of musical events are scheduled for downtown Chicago during the week. La Chorale Française de Chicago will give a concert in Kimball hall at 3 o'clock this afternoon under the direction of Edouard Dufresne and under the patronage of M. René Weiller, consul of France. The program is called "An Afternoon in France," and the guest artist will be William Phillips, baritone.

Prince Modupe Paris and the World's Fair Afro-American Male Jubilee singers will give another concert of native African songs and Negro spirituals at Fullerton hall this afternoon. The program will contain several African songs not presented at the former concert.

The Metropolitan Community church choir will give a festival concert tonight under the direction of J. Wesley Jones at which Charles Wakefield Cadman, composer-pianist, will be the guest artist. Half of the program will feature Mr. Cadman's compositions, the other half being devoted to Negro spirituals in their original forms.

The Illinois Women's Athletic club chorus will give its second annual concert in the club building Tuesday night. Alba T. Fichtenberg is the conductor. The assisting artists will be Henry Robert Jackson, pianist, and Ambrose J. Wyrick, tenor.

The fifth annual high school music festival will take place in Orchestra hall Thursday night. A chorus of 200 and an orchestra of 150 will be under the direction of Dr. J. Lewis Browne and Oscar W. Anderson, and the solo artists will be Alsa Hartha Arendt, soprano; Arthur Kraft, tenor; Jane Anderson, pianist; and LeRoy Wetzel, organist. The program will include Wagner's "Rienzi" Overture, Beethoven's Fifth Symphony, Goring-Thomas' choral ode, "The Sun Worshippers," Handel's First "Coronation" Anthem, two unaccompanied part songs by Dr. Browne, and Horatio Parker's "Union and Liberty."

Club news of music includes announcements of an open meeting by Rho chapter of Phi Mu Alpha featuring Angelo Rafaelli, tenor; Marie Mashek-Redous, soprano, and John Rankel, baritone, on Tuesday night at 339 Lyon & Healy building; also the summer activities committee program of the Chicago Woman's club on Wednesday afternoon, presenting Alice Mock, soprano.

A movement is on foot to organize a chorus of 5,000 singers for choral appearances here next season. The conductor is William Preston, fifty-five years a chorister, thirty years a tenor soloist and vocal teacher, and twenty-five years a conductor and director of music in churches and choral societies in England, America, and Canada. The business manager is Charles E. Sanders, 17 North Long-common road, Riverside, for many years a resident of Berwyn, to whom singers and lovers of music are referred for further information.

Music news around the country generally seems to be of a more cheerful nature than is being found here in Chicago. New York, it is true, has cut down its opera season, but it is sure of having a season, and on the opening day of the subscription sale 80 per cent of last season's total was sold. One also reads of the continuance of the orchestra concerts at the Stadium, the summer series of band concerts, and the fact that next season the Philharmonic Symphony orchestra will carry on with unchanged personnel.

Washington, D. C., will continue with its own symphony orchestra under the direction of Hans Kindler. Fort Worth, Tex., has been struggling with the symphony orchestra problem for seven years and now sends word that it has accomplished so successful a membership campaign that it will not be necessary to have a box office sale of seats next season. The Hollywood Bowl concerts in Los Angeles will probably go through as scheduled, and Cincinnati, at first doubtful about its summer season of opera, would seem about to put it over. St. Louis will continue with its summer season of open air operetta as before.

It would seem as though Chicago, displaying a serene willingness to toss everything of the sort overboard, at least not showing enough sense of responsibility for continuance, is in danger of losing its grip.

The Metropolitan Opera company of New York is even promising two new operas. One is Richard Strauss' "Elektra," to be put on for the artistic benefit of Mme. Ljungberg. It was introduced into this country by Oscar Hammerstein years ago at the old Manhattan Opera house, and was again heard by the Philadelphia Opera company last season, but has never before come into the répertoire of the Metropolitan.

The other is an entirely new work. Louis Gruenberg has made a musical setting of Eugene O'Neill's play, "Emperor Jones," and Lawrence Tibbett will appear in the name part, probably early in the season. Tullio Serafin will conduct. Erich Kleiber, general musical director of the Berlin Staatsoper, has also announced that he will present it in Berlin during the fall.

The first definite musical bookings for Chicago next season will be known as the Monday Night Artist concerts, and will take place at Orchestra hall under the direction of Grace Denton. Lucrezia Bori will open the series on Oct. 17, to be followed by Tito Schipa on Oct. 31; Feodor Chaliapin, who returns after an absence of four years, Nov. 28; Jascha Heifetz, Jan. 23; and Sigfrid Onegin, Feb. 13.

Dietrich and Joe Just Hired Hands at Cinema Studio

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—Marlene and Joe are back at work, as nearly every one in town expected, with Paramount apparently the victor in the fight to determine whether "artists" are hired hands or members of the firm.

The studio threatened to sue Miss Dietrich and her mentor, Von Sternberg, for $100,000 because they refused to make a certain picture. The $100,000 represented the investment in the story during its five weeks of preparation.

The star lost a week's salary—approximately $3,500—and the director 10 days' pay—about $7,500—because they "walked out" in protest.

Von Sternberg still insists he did the right thing by refusing to direct "Blond Venus" because he didn't like the treatment of the story, although there is no clause in his contract, says the studio, permitting him to turn down an assignment. Nor is there in Miss Dietrich's.

Joe says he didn't hold out any longer because it would be unfair to the motion picture public to keep Miss Dietrich off the screen.

N. Y. Reluctant to Bid Musical Year Farewell

By Joan King.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—The reluctance with which music lovers, hereabout, bade farewell to the season of 1931-'32 received ample testimony recently in Town hall. On that occasion the New York Little Symphony, an organization which introduced itself the end of last year in three Roerich hall concerts, added a very commendable final program under the able baton of Hans Bruno Meyer.

The program of this new ensemble of sixteen players included Gluck's "Paris and Helen" overture; Schubert's "Grande Sonata" in B flat, written for piano for four hands; Mozart's "Coronation" concerto in D, Saint-Saëns' suite, op. 49, and three pieces by Albeniz. Orchestrations and revisions employed were the work of the conductor.

New York's musical arena has regrettably few of these small ensembles which are particularly commendable at the present time of unemployment, for in addition to presenting symphonic music of an intimate nature, all too infrequently heard, they serve the purpose of placing orchestral musicians. The large audience demonstrated its approval of Mr. Meyer's work warmly. An added attraction of the evening was the splendid playing of Katherine Bacon, who was the soloist, in the Mozart concerto. The performance throughout was spirited and capable.

A First Performance.

Another "last evening" of the musical year was a "first performance" of Randegger's "Via Pacis"—described as a peace music-drama. The performance was given under the auspices of the committee of art in the service of universal understanding. The work is in three parts with solos, choruses, spoken dialogue, dialogue accompanied by music, and piano solos. Through symbolic characters, such as the seer, the seeker, the skeptic, the new peace, womanhood bereft, the warrior, and the nations, the struggle of peace against war is depicted and its ultimate triumph.

The offering was given in concert and reading form, with the composer playing a piano transcription of the orchestral score. The cast included Beniamino Gigli, Pedro de Cordoba, Meeka Aldrich, Ashbrook Bryant, Mariska Aldrich, Mildred Schneider, Harry Furness, Annette Simpson, Richard E. Parks, Lynette Aveduke, and a mixed chorus and ensemble of girls in costume representing the nations of the world. Henriette B. Randegger, who was responsible for the libretto, also took part. Mr. Gigli's performance of the warrior's music was the high light of the evening, though the large audience was enthusiastic in its reception of the entire work.

Last Evening of Music.

Notwithstanding the official closing of the musical season, one of this town's favorite interpreters has offered to "afford a happy evening to my friends" June 9. And so the doors of Town hall will be open for one last evening of music on that date under the guidance of Georges Barrere. In a letter to Arthur Judson, concert impresario, Mr. Barrere says:

"Having convinced you last season that there is opportunity for concerts in the dull month of June, I feel I have again spring music fever. In spite of the need of a vacation I shall invite all my musical friends to meet at Town hall June 9 and, owing to permanent thought of arduous financial times which make life gloomier than necessary, I shall try to make the occasion happy and inexpensive. The program will be called 'Three-in-One' as it will feature the Barrere Little Symphony, the Barrere ensemble of wind instruments, and Georges Barrere, flute soloist. No seats higher than $1 and many as low as 35 cents, the mere price of a second class movie show without music."

Summer Concerts Scheduled.

Despite the depression New York will have its summer concerts as usual. Mrs. Charles S. Guggenheim has announced the usual series of stadium concerts, opening earlier than heretofore, June 23, with Willem Van Hoogstraten and Albert Coates conducting. This will be Mr. Van Hoogstraten's eleventh consecutive year at the stadium and Mr. Coates' fifth. The Philharmonic will play as usual. Plans have also been announced for a series of evening concerts to be given by the New York orchestra with Modest Altschuler conducting at the stadium of the George Washington High school. The programs will include opera, oratorio, ballet, and Shakespearean plays with music besides orchestral music. Works of native composers will have a part also, and Mr. Altschuler has stated he will examine all scores submitted to him. The fifteenth season of free concerts by the Goldman has also been announced under the direction of Edwin Franko Goldman, beginning June 13 and ending Aug. 18. These, as in the past, will include Monday, Wednesday, Friday, and Sunday nights in Central park and Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday nights on the New York university campus.

Vague Music of Scriabin Is Put on Disks

By Edward Moore.

IF you care to bemuse yourself with music that is in the last degree suggestive and provocative and at the same time just fails to project the final touch of satisfaction, you can do no better than investigate an issue of records put out by Victor. Here Leopold Stokowski and the Philadelphia orchestra are dealing in a large way with the music of Scriabin.

Four records have been received. Nos. 7515 and 7516 have to do with the "Poem of Ecstasy," 7517 and 7518 with "Prometheus, the Poem of Fire." In the latter Sylvan Levin makes a good showing with the piano obbligato and there are references on the label to a chorus from the Curtis Institute of Music. This, however, is kept pretty much of a secret from the hearers.

The Philadelphia orchestra is a magnificent organization, and there are few conductors who can treat a composer of the order of Scriabin with more emotional fervor than Stokowski. This is music which is colorful, eloquent, and yet perhaps intentionally vague. Listening to it one gets something of the same impression that one would get from an earnest explanation of the five year plan.

Rather cautiously "The Divine Poem," the third orchestral composition of the set, is omitted from the recording. Possibly this is because it is so much clearer in outline than either of the others. It was the first of the set, written at a time when one can imagine that Scriabin was still under the influence of his Chopin discipleship and still had a prejudice in favor of the definite musical line. When a composer abandons this principle and goes in for luminous fog he usually stays there unless, like Stravinsky, he has the inquiring mind which never settles finally upon one principle but constantly seeks new methods of expression.

This interesting set is a first class example of good recording. No small job, either, when one thinks of the massive orchestration and other technical problems that confronted the recorders.

An Importation.

But if the Scriabin music is a little hard to listen to, another Victor issue is far from it. In records 8223-8226 inclusive the Mendelssohn Trio in D minor, opus 49, is presented by Alfred Cortot, pianist; Jacques Thibaud, violinist, and Pablo Casals, cellist. The issue is an importation. Here are three of Europe's notables, all well known in this country because of their concert tours at one time and another, who have combined into a superexcellent chamber music trio.

It is not the only example of their ensembles playing that has been recorded, but it is one that cannot fail to please. The only possible fault with it is that the piano part is a trifle prominent for perfect balance, a matter that one imagines has been due to the position of the recording microphone rather than to any insistence on the part of M. Cortot. This is Mendelssohn at his most characteristic and most charming, with all the fluent melody—the theme of the second movement might well have been including in the songs without words—and musical good manners and grace that gave him his reputation in early Victorian days.

Still with Victor—the other companies have not favored this desk with releases lately—Richard Crooks, tenor, presents two sweetly sentimental ditties on the ten inch 1558. One is "Beautiful Island of Somewhere," the other "All Through the Night." Accompaniments are played on an organ by Jesse Crawford with much use of the quivering tremolo device and many other suggestions of the typical theater organ. First rate of its kind.

Classic Revival

OTIS SKINNER, who recently completed a long tour as costar with Maude Adams in "The Merchant of Venice," will play a leading part in the cast of the Players' club revival of Shakespeare's "Troilus and Cressida," to be staged on June 6. Mr. Skinner last appeared in a Players' club production in 1926, when he played Falstaff in "Henry IV.," part 1.

Others who will be seen in "Troilus and Cressida" are Eliot Cabot, Eugene Powers, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Coburn and Herbert Ranson. The arrangement of the text by Henry Herbert, who will stage the production, is in three acts and eight scenes.

Star of "Good Fairy"

HELEN HAYES, at the Harris, adds luster to the spring playbills. Miss Hayes visited Chicago a year ago in "Petticoat Influence," and this season she has come with a Broadway hit under the title of "The Good Fairy." The play was written by Molnar, the Hungarian dramatist.

No Actor Really Indispensable in Special Role

Second Company of O'Neill Play Just as Competent as the First One

By Burns Mantle.

ing. Abel is a good actor, but slow, phlegmatic, stolid. It would be physically impossible for him to pick up the emotional scenes as Larrimore played them, and as they should be played—with rasped nerves and strident, high pitched, suffering emotional reactions.

The two Brandts were Thomas Chalmers and Crane Wilbur. These were even performances because of the actresses playing opposite them. Wilbur's sailor was young and romantic, and much in love with Miss Reed's Christine. Chalmers was a mature and rough sailorman, come late to his passion for the exotic Nazimova. Wilbur was the better lover, Chalmers the better sailor.

But who would know this who had not seen them both? And that is the point I started to make: It is as foolish to insist that only one player is equal to the demands of a certain part as that a change of players can completely ruin a part. It is quite possible that no one of these six players is Mr. O'Neill's ideal. And I venture to say that nine out of ten playgoers who have seen the second company would be measurably disappointed in the first.

A Half Dozen Pegs.

Let no one forget that the year Laurette Taylor played "Peg-O'-My Heart" there were five other Pegs touring the country. And in practically every town in which Miss Taylor afterward duplicated their performances the first visitors were acclaimed as the more gifted. Now I know, and you who saw her play that rôle first know, that there never was nor could be another Peg possessed of all the Taylor charm. The part was written for her, partly written by her. It was definitely her own creation. And yet there were as many other charming Pegs as there were personable Irish soubrettes to play them.

When Barry's "The Animal Kingdom" was produced the comedy rôle of a butler was played by William Gargan. He was so admirably fitted for the part, which is "fat" with laughs and comic situations, that on opening night he was singled out for a minor ovation. When the play ran past the date on which he had agreed to make a picture on the west coast, the picture company bought off his contract for $1,500 rather than lose his services.

Gilbert Miller and Leslie Howard, producers of "The Animal Kingdom," were sorry to lose Mr. Gargan, but glad to get the fifteen hundred. They engaged William Harrigan for the part, and the first night of Mr. Harrigan's association with the play he also nearly stopped the performance. And has been enjoying that triumph every night since.

Actors Sell Themselves.

Leslie Banks, a versatile and gifted English actor, staged and played one of the leading rôles in "Springtime for Henry." The farce was a hit, partly because of the Banks performance, and a little more because of the deftness with which he played foil for another English comedian I hope you may see some day, an amiable fat man named Nigel Bruce.

Came the spring and Mr. Banks also had an engagement with the picture people. Joseph Verner Reed, Denver's good gift to Broadway, who has made good as a producer in the big city, and Kenneth MacGowan, his partner, were ready to lay "Springtime" aside for the summer. The players, who were eager to go on, proposed that they find a substitute for Mr. Banks and go on so long as the going was profitable. They did. Henry Hull took over the job. I, having seen and admired Mr. Banks, think Mr. Hull is pretty bad in the rôle, but the audience I looked in upon, the other night, was suffering just as many side stitches as other audiences had suffered with Mr. Banks.

So it has gone and always will go. Salable personalities in the theater, intelligently selected for parts within their range, will always be able to sell themselves and help sell the plays in which they appear.

A Lobby with a View.

Up on the 50th floor of the Chanin building is a small auditorium, with a stage at one end, seating about 150 people. A gem of a tiny modernistic playhouse, it has been used mostly for pre-views of motion pictures, or for meetings of salesmen who need to have their peppy executives climb up on a stage in front of them and assure them that all this depression talk is silly.

The other day the Chanin auditorium was rented by a Russian actor named David Vardi, who has been doing more or less solo work around the country since he came to America to stage "The Dybbuk" for the Neighborhood playhouse. Mr. Vardi wanted to stage a comedy drama of his own writing called "Lenin's Dowry." It turned out to be probably the worst comedy drama any actor had ever written for himself or any one else.

But the view from the lobby of the Chanin auditorium was something to write about. More lovely, it seemed to me, than that from the Empire State building's eminence, though why it should be I cannot say. And should not try to say, because I saw one at night and the other in the daytime.

A curiously fascinating view to me, it was, because across the river and nine miles out on Long Island I could see the red incandescent lights over a storage warehouse just this side of Forest Hills. The Mantles live in Forest Hills.

At the end of the second act we were in the lobby. Nothing had happened in "Lenin's Dowry" except considerable unintelligible dialog about a five foot soldier who wanted to play a Red Napoleon for the soviet. The manager was trying to be nice.

"That is the East river," said he, indicating a shimmering silver ribbon over to the right. "That is the Queensboro bridge. That strip of lights is Queen's boulevard—and that far red light—I think—that far red light——"

"That far red light is Forest Hills," I said, "and that is where Mantle is going." I went.

Vox Playgoer

To the Dramatic Editor:

EVANSTON, May 16.—I am one of several hundred who subscribed to the Theater Guild for the 1931-'32 season. We were to see five plays. Thus far only three have been here and now I understand the Theater Guild is bankrupt.

Some one advised the other day that a story ran in one of the Chicago papers to the effect that upon presentation of the Theater Guild receipt, tickets for another show running at the present time would be given gratis.

I wonder if any of your readers know of this or if any one knows the proper procedure to follow in the matter. HAWLEY D. ELY.

[The Theater Guild is not bankrupt. It has made no public announcement about its plans for adjusting the rights of its Chicago subscribers, but there is no reason to believe that it will not, in good time, give them complete satisfaction. Questions on this point should be addressed to Warren Munsell, business manager, the Theater Guild, 245 West 52d street, New York.—Dramatic Editor.]

Chicago, May 8.—In Sunday's TRIBUNE I read your article on "Cyrano" and "The Barretts of Wimpole Street." I would like to suggest my opinion, and the opinions of hundreds of others, that when producers finally understand that refined people are sick and tired of vile stories, jokes, and scenes success will again come to the stage.

People who patronize the legitimate stage appreciate talent of the character of Miss Cornell's and Mr. Hampden's. The truck we have had offered to us for years is not what people want. There need be no surprise at the patronage these shows have received. It ought to be an awakening as to what people really want.

Legitimate Theaters Close, but Movie Houses Still Do Business

By Tom Pettey.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—These are sad days for the lovers of the flesh and blood stage. Two-a-day vaudeville made its last stand at the Palace the other night, and now that traditional "heaven of the hoofers" is being operated on a cut-rate grind basis. The magnificent Earl Carroll theater, which has been without a tenant since Mr. Carroll failed to balance a budget, is being swept out in anticipation of a talkie occupant, if reports are to be accepted at face value. Times and amusement values are changing.

But on the same side of the street, on the other side of the street, and all up and down the Longacre district the lights still twinkle as brilliantly as ever in unbroken lines of prosperous talkie theaters. The motion picture industry may be in difficulties, Manhattan's throngs may be suffering from the depression, a lot of people may be unhappy, but the seats in the film shops continue to fill up once every two and one-half hours from ten in the morning until midnight.

With a heigh ho and a hey, nonny, nonny, and possibly a hot cha or two, Times square continues to go to the movies. Some of its pavement strollers go in cracked shoes and threadbare pants and some go in stiff shirts, but the main thing is that they find the 85 cents some place or other and go.

"Scarface" Draws Crowds.

This week a lot of the boys and girls are going to see "Scarface," the Howard Hughes picture filmed to end all gang talkies. Mr. Hughes produced the picture just about the time Will Hays decided that the movie public had suffered long enough from both real gangsters and celluloid gangsters. The picture was made, however, and it had to go to work in order to pay for itself. The New York State Board of Censors took one look at the drama of all public enemies rolled into one, according to the standards of Hollywood, and said "No." The censors said, furthermore, that the picture was too realistic and might be unpleasant even to the jaded eyes of Broadway. I met a man in Cincinnati the other day who said he couldn't sleep after seeing the picture. Maybe it is that exciting.

New York got all keyed up when other towns began talking about the new gang talkie. Things began to happen and something was done either to the picture or to the board of censors, for "Scarface" is in town this week and, what is more, it is running day and night—all night—in order that a lot of people who live in night clubs and such places can drop in and get a 4 a. m. thrill.

The only publicly announced requirement demanded by the censors was that the title be always accompanied by the explanatory line, or subtitle, "The Shame of a Nation." The picture was directed by Howard Hawks from Ben Hecht's adaptation of Armitage Trail's novel. In the cast are Paul Muni, Ann Dvorak, Karen Morley, Osgood Perkins, Boris Karloff, and George Raft. The town is going to see it in droves.

Long Title for Little Fellow.

Jackie Cooper is back in town in "When a Feller Needs a Friend." The title is a bit too long for such a young lad, and, somehow, it does not seem he has been treated quite so well as he was in "Skippy", and "The Champ." The appealing Cooper face, the unerring, finished acting, the fun and the pathos are all there, but the pieces are not fitted so skilfully as in "Skippy," or in that masterpiece of all children's films, "Tom Sawyer."

At the Cameo there is a new soviet film. It is called "Siberian Patrol" and is a rambling, unimpressive bit of work. The soviet pictures were masterful pieces in both acting and photography back in the silent days, but with sound they are neither pleasing to the eye nor the ear. Remember "Potemkin," "Ten Days that Shook the World," "Storm Over Asia," and "The New Babylon"? Lately we

Senator May Be Pompous on the Floor; He's Meek Enough to His Wife.

By Genevieve Forbes Herrick.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—[Special.]—Ah, my friends, how different is private from public life! We look on the statesman in the halls of congress and we behold him pompous and important; we glimpse him at home and he is running errands for his wife. We see the diplomat at the formal party and he is bowing low over a lady's hand; next day we run into him in the bargain basement of a department store.

The other afternoon I chanced to be coming out of a hotel just about the time that Texas Tom Connally, the one senator who looks most like the picture of a senator [tall, large, flowing black tie, Prince Albert coat, and all], was leaving the inn with his wife. Was Texas Tom orating in that big, powerful voice he uses with such force on the senate floor? He was not. In a very meek and mild tone he was saying, just like any other husband, "I'll sit anywhere you want me to, my dear."

A few hours later I was over in front of the Senate Office building and I beheld Senator Neely [Dem., W. Va.] on his way in. Now, ever since the first day of this session, when Senator Neely, the new man, refused to be escorted to the vice presidential platform by Senator Hatfield, senior senator from West Virginia [or maybe it was the other way around, each man has a different version], I have always thought of Mr. Neely as a somewhat crotchety gentleman.

Imagine, therefore, my surprise when this dour looking statesman smiled at something, I couldn't tell what. He stepped off the concrete sidewalk; he walked across the green grass. Lovingly he knelt down beside a budding bush. He counted the leaves, he inhaled the aroma; he smiled; he sighed, and returned to the concrete path of duty.

Understands Fish.

Uncle Sam searched the country over for a man who knew all about fish, sick fish. He found him in Chicago. Within a few weeks Fred G. Orsinger, fresh water curator of the Shedd aquarium down by Lake Michigan, will come here to take over an important job in the basement of the commerce building. He is to run a fish hospital. The post is newly created.

Federal fish which aren't feeling so well will come under his expert care. Sometimes they will be shipped to him from various governmental fisheries and aquariums throughout the United States. In other cases he will diagnose by correspondence.

Speaking of the new commerce building, Chicago's Robert P. Lamont, secretary of commerce, has a fine private dining room in the building, but he never uses it. Every day at 1 o'clock you will see a colored boy start up in the official elevator bearing a tray with two things upon it. Every day the menu is the same—a baked apple and a glass of milk. It is the Lamont luncheon.

Graham crackers and milk is the routine luncheon for the majority of the senators over in the senate dining room. When they're giving a company luncheon it's usually shad roe and bacon.

An Embarrassing Moment.

A newcomer in the senate press gallery got a shock the other day. He had just read up on his Washington celebrities, and so he knew that the apostolic delegate to Washington was the Most Rev. Pietro Fumasoni-Biondi. As he was standing in the anteroom to the gallery one of the

Gotham Keeps Its Notables for the Summer

By Nancy Randolph.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—For the first time in more years than I care to consider New York City is fashionable, and in the summer time. Some may point out that, after all, this is only May, and spring barely well advanced, but judging by both the weather we have been enjoying and the social activity we call it summer, and we refuse to quarrel.

Every one is quoting platitudes nowadays, and therefore we hasten to remark that "What is one man's poison may be another man's meat." In other words, having misquoted, we beg to explain that while the age respected resorts, from Southampton and Newport to Bar Harbor and Lenox, must look for a thin time this year, the metropolis will benefit by it all and town bids fair to be the pleasantest of places all the heated spell, with tons of people in residence, and all sorts of pleasures being enjoyed within and close without its limits.

First of all, Belmont is open just now, and with the sun shining kindly upon that lovely spot, all Gotham has taken to driving out of an afternoon and whiling away the time in the lovely grounds about the track and on the soft lawns of the turf and field club.

Not too much attention has been paid to exotic clothes. Even Mrs. Harrison Williams, noted as the best dressed woman in town, is not displaying unique creations. Society is going in for Belmont as a relaxation and a gathering place rather than as a fashion promenade. Then again, the leaders of the younger set, such as Mrs. John Hay Whitney, Mrs. Robert H. McAdob, Mrs. John V. Bouvier III., Mrs. Harry C. Cushing III., and Mrs. John R. Fell Jr., among others, are more interested in equine and social matters than sartorial ones, and the costuming at Belmont is quiet and discreet.

Beach Club Popular.

A nearby spot that will be the rendezvous of all the notables this summer is the Atlantic Beach club, which opens for the season on Friday. There will be a crush at the Atlantic this summer such as it has never known. More people are forced to remain in town on matters of business and the mid-afternoons and week-ends will see all Manhattan and his wife frisking on the sands bordering the blue Atlantic ocean.

Long Island is certain to be very gay. The famous Montauk Island club is quiescent at present, and where society will do its pleasant bit of gambling is not yet known, but surely the roulette wheels will roll again and not so far away as Montauk either.

Among those who have taken cabanas are the William Ross Proctors Jr., the Morton L. Schwartzes, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Voorhees, Mrs. Chisholm Beach, Mr. and Mrs. William du Pont Jr., Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Chadbourne, Frank Duff Frazier, John W. Van Siclen, and Mr. and Mrs. Waddill Catchings.

High Above the Turmoil.

Another sure sign of the amazing popularity of town is the crowd that frequents the St. Regis roof. That lovely spot is the scene of daily festivities. One this week was a luncheon given by Elizabeth Englar, daughter of the Roger Englars, for Shirley

IN THE SOCIAL LIMELIGHT

Mrs. Louis C. Sudler and Miss Elizabeth Rumsey were two of the six pretty girls who attended Miss Barbara Neff as bridesmaids when she became the bride of Solomon Byron Smith on May 14. The wedding took place at St. Chrysostom's church, where the majority of Chicago's fashionable weddings are solemnized, and this picture of the former Mary Barnes and Miss Rumsey was taken outside the church just before the ceremony. The bridesmaids' gowns were simple but effective ones of pale blue mousseline de soie.

Horse Owned by Rothschild Wins Big Race

By May Birkhead.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Though the Whitsuntide holidays took many Parisians and American residents to the seaside, attendance at the Longchamps Sunday races seemed little affected.

American horse owners and celebrities were much in evidence. Lady Granard, formerly Beatrice Mills, sister of Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills, and having one of the best stables in France, was quite upset on seeing her horse, Blackmoor, fail to come up early enough to win the well known prize, La Coupe, which brought the winner 50,000 francs [$1,970] in addition to art objects worth 25,000 francs [$985].

Blackmoor came second, while Baron Edouard de Rothschild's Taxodium won the race and another American, Ralph B. Strassburger's horse, Metz, was third. This race was also competed in by Mrs. Honore Palmer's Cormoran, making quite an American affair with still another American entry belonging to Lewis Chandler. Excitement was tense when Lady Granard's entry missed the prize by a short nose.

Occupied a Box.

She and Lord Granard occupied their box with a daughter, Lady Moira Forbes, who will soon become the bride of the Marquis de Brissac, son of the Duc de Brissac. The latter is a descendant of the renowned French family whose ancestral château in the town of Brissac is the remarkable 15th century Château du Loir. The Brissac line long stood high in the favor of the kings of France. Louis XIII. raised the De Brissac rank to a duchy.

Lord and Lady Granard have been much in the social news, recently, through the marriage of their younger daughter to Lord Dumfries. The wedding was celebrated three weeks ago at their castle in Ireland and the young couple are passing part of their honeymoon in Paris.

Texas Guinan Present.

Another distinct cynosure at the races was Texas Guinan, who caused as much excitement as the horses, losing a diamond lorgnette and calling a band of workmen to recover it from a crevice of the grandstand boarding.

A Chicago visitor who is spending a fortnight in Paris is LeGrand Burton who is stopping at the Hotel Majestic, going later to Carlsbad. Mrs. Robert J. Thorne has just sailed after several weeks with her daughters, Narcissa and Laura, who are attending a Paris school. Thomas I. Underwood and his Chicago bride, the former Frances Coonley Rawson, are here on their honeymoon.

Michigan Has Charms for the Holiday Guest

Holland and Its Tulips, Lakewood with Mr. Getz's Zoo Points of Interest

By Cousin Eve.

ONE week-ends in the country. The eastern shore of Lake Michigan is divine. We skim on satin roads through opalescent scenes, spring's earliest dress. Trees not yet green, water not yet blue, flowers not quite out. An oriental pearl of a day, cool air, sunshine.

We have several objectives: Holland and its tulips have sold themselves to us, and the Dutch, and all that sort of thing. And even more do we intend seeing the Lakewood zoo, the zoo of George Getz, the intimate, personal zoo where the monkeys shake you by the hand and Sam, the big white Russian bear, rolls out his pink tongue as you pass.

The zoo is on the lake. It is a park. One one side Mr. Getz's big house; nearby a row of cottages for guests. In their midst a casino for movies and dancing. We arrive and, Mr. Getz being in New York, are met by Mr. Peterson, superintendent.

Monkeys in the Sun.

We swing into Monkey avenue. The inmates are all out sunning. Mothers with tiny babes clasped to breast; Sally and Jim, the big, friendly orangs. How they climb to shake hands, to kiss the head keeper, to say good morning!

On to Peacock row, where pheasants, white peacocks and blue are caged together, spreading fanlike tails in the glory of the first bright day. Exquisitely clean is the zoo. Apple trees in full white flower, peach trees delicately pink, distant views of blue lake. Enchanting.

On a corner we find Nancy, the young elephant, with highly polished toe nails and long, drooping eyelashes. She sulks. She wishes to wallow in water like the white bear across the way.

Sam, the bear, is full of laughter. His hausfrau, a small white bear, is dancing the rhumba on a table. She cavorts, kicks, bounces, full of joie de vivre. All the other creatures watch her antics enviously. The hippo begs for bread and gets a whole loaf, which fits neatly in his wide jaw. But Toodles, the rhino, caught by Mr. Getz in Africa as an innocent babe, is in a fury of jealousy—so Mr. Peterson has to bring bread to Miss Toodles.

We inspect Siberian and Bengal tigers, lustrous of coat; very well behaved lions, exotic birds. Everywhere order, shining fur, bright eyed beasts, friendly purrs and furry claws. The porcupine sings a raucous note; the tiger, too, salutes the head keeper.

We pass from apple, peach and cherry orchards along white cement walks to greenhouses. We see melons growing on bushes. Each perfect fruit swings in its own basket, unable to fall. Hothouse Hamburg grapes and large green Malagas are well along. Later in the season lady visitors go forth with delightful loot. Mr. Getz gives souvenirs—small baskets full of melons, grapes, nectarines, what not.

People now pay a slight toll at the zoo. Forty thousand visitors a Sunday was the average in other years.

A Million Tulips.

Back to Holland, where tulips line all the main streets and thoroughfares. During the long winter unemployed men set out the bulbs bought in old Holland, one million five hundred thousand of them. Each curb is lined, each corner planted deep with Mrs. Howard B. Peabody of Lake Forest hurrying from her home to the shop in which she is interested.

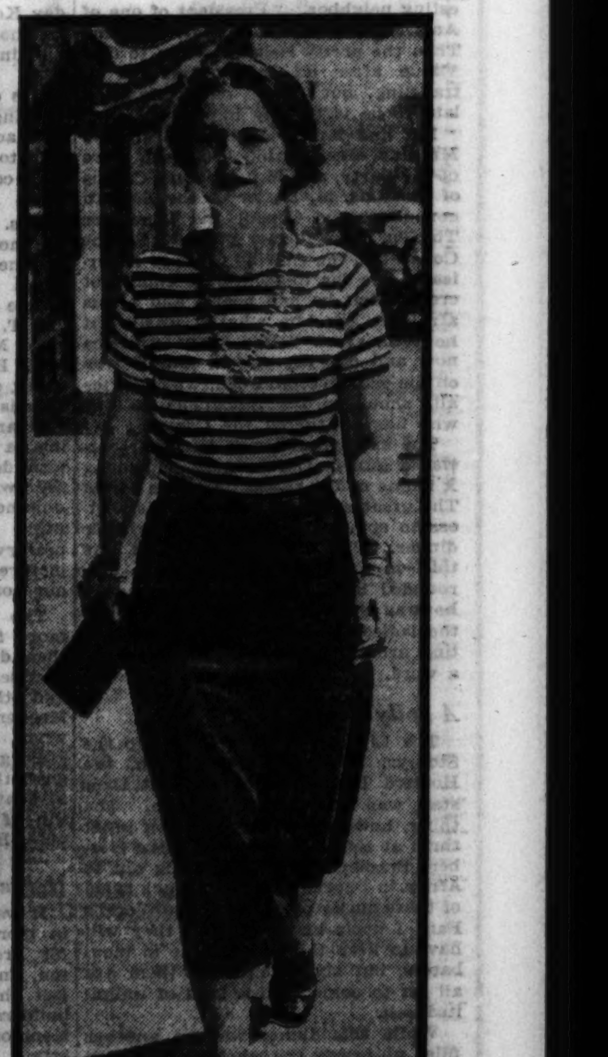
The engagement of this attractive young couple, Miss Ann Elizabeth Walsh and "Jack" Couch, was announced before Christmas, but they do not plan to be married until autumn.

Miss Betty Offield says "No" when asked if she has said "Yes" to Jarvis Hunt Jr., but they both look happy here. She was a flower vendor at the Lighthouse ball.

Miss Barbara Graf (center) was in charge of the cigaret girls at the Lighthouse Volunteer Aids' supper dance on May 14, and Mrs. Schuyler Colt was one of them. Talcott Griswold is the purchaser.



Mrs. David Peck of Lake Forest was hastening to the market when the photographer took this picture.

scarlet and pink, mauve and yellow. Some streets have mixed them all up, adding the glossy black tulip.

Already before noon the roads were thick with cars, and here were children in long Dutch bloomers and there a windmill for local color. The restaurants had waiting lines of hundreds, and the churches, where services last five or six hours, were having devastating sessions of worship. Motors, parked by the score all about the twenty odd churches of Holland, made one think of opera nights at home. And over all the sun was doing its most brilliant stuff, the lake was getting bluer and bluer, and the southwest breeze blowing fair.

It was a truly nice Sunday, cavorting about Holland and seeing all the spotless neatness, decency and order of the pretty town. Outside were the tulip gardens and in some places great plantations of white and purple lilacs just coming along. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meeker made this jaunt two years ago, searching for colonial Dutch designs for their Santa Barbara house. The houses on that side of Lake Michigan are, many of them, unique and quite beautiful.

An Interesting Dinner.

The Herbert Bradleys' dinner at the Casino last Friday night is a foretaste of what we will be having another year. Century of Progress will bring many distinguished guests, thousands of interesting persons, as were these guests of honor from Belgium, former Governor of the Congo Maurice Lippens and Mme. Lippens of Brussels. Mme. Lippens, a pale brunette, arranged with French simplicity in red crêpe de chine, was of a more delicate mold than the usual Belgian lady; and Senator Lippens, for he is now senator in the Belgian parliament, is a tall, grandly built man with some gray in his thick hair and some light in his eye.

To meet them the Bradleys assembled sixteen or eighteen, and the senator asked the privilege of having a list of the guests and their attainments that he might keep record of all the charming Americans he was meeting. This was just as well, for very amusingly at dinner Mme. Lippens was telling her innermost thoughts about American railroad travel to the tall gentleman on her right with the beard à la Henri of Navarre. And they were some thoughts!

After a little she had an idea. She asked her host who was her interesting neighbor. "President of one of America's greatest railroads," said he. Then the pretty Belgian began to find virtue after all in our method of traveling, but I fear me it was too late to be virtuously impressive.

Mr. and Mrs. Carter Harrison and Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Loesch were of the party, and M. and Mme. Camus of Brussels, M. Rosier of the Belgian consulate, and Consul and Mme. der Thielen. The former governor of the Congo told me that he came to America to see for himself. He could not credit what he had heard, and I was afraid to ask him what it was. But he feels much better about America now and our depression, and is well on his way to Hollywood, which, after all, should prove innocuous to one who has weathered the Congo.

The ex-governor says he never carried a gun in the Congo. And today it is one of the safest places on earth. The great man had promised his hostess to spin some African yarns after dinner. But the way he did it was this—in the foyer of the Casino, surrounded by a circle of dinner coats, he was spellbinding for eons, while the ladies [God help them] were sitting around in circles, hearing never a word.

A Jolly Party.

The Lippens brought letters to the Storeys, Mr. and Mrs. Strawn, the Howard Linns and others, but their stay was an abbreviated one. The thing, however, that gave me a great thrill at this dinner was to have Herbert Bradley say he was going out to Africa in December to bring back some of those ducky pygmies for the World's Fair. I don't know whether they will have to keep the little people in incubators, but six or eight of them are all set to come to this land of unlimited salt.

While this dinner was on another filled up nearly the whole Casino with feasting and dancing in honor of the bridal of Barbara Neff and Solomon Smith Jr. The bride's uncles, J. Arnold Scudder and William Scudder, and the Mesdames Scudder, also Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Kirk, were the hosts at the frolic, and the Solomon Smiths, Harold C. Smiths, Walter B. Smith, and their families, and the Alden Swifts were among the forty who sat down at one long, wide table. From this there were snatches of song and the roar of applause over the congratulatory speeches.

Mrs. Arthur Meeker has been sending out a patriotic postcard this spring. With a red and blue striped border it bears the dates 1732-1932 and reminds us that George Washington spent much of his youth in Fredericksburg, Va. Here stands to this day Kenmore, his mother's house and the home of his sister, Betty, in the building of which he took an active part. In this bicentennial year the ladies of the Kenmore association are keeping the grand old mansion open and acting as hostesses for the nation to the thousands of visitors who will come swarming this year and next.

Mrs. Meeker is Illinois regent for Kenmore, and her little card pleads for the gift of one dollar to meet unusual expenses. Her Chicago committee is small and names Mrs. Richard T. Crane, Mrs. Morris L. Johnston, Mrs. Joseph M. Patterson, and Miss Helen Gilbert, William B. McCluer, and Chauncey McCormick. This Illinois group raised $10,000 in the past and rebuilt the kitchen outbuilding, a lovely little architectural bit torn down and now again a part of the whole. Its slanting roof, tall chimneys and gable windows with other outbuildings were well worth preserving and are one of the most picturesque and interesting places in our country.

The women who have saved Kenmore from destruction are many of them descendants of the Washingtons, Lewises, Lees, Marshalls, Emerys, and other old Virginia families. Mrs. Meeker's interest in Kenmore began when, after a trip through the Virginia gardens, she and Arthur Meeker gave the Kenmore association a pair of contemporary portraits by Wollaston of Col. Fielding Lewis and his wife, Betty Washington.

Helped Cause of Liberty.

It was the patriotism of Col. Lewis in mortgaging this house to finance his brother-in-law, George Washington, in the revolutionary war, that lost the lovely place to its original builders and owners. In other words, Kenmore helped us to gain our liberty.

Brave men gathered there during the war to plan and work, and there is a paragraph in an illustrated book that lies before me. After the surrender of Cornwallis, Gen. Washington went to Fredericksburg with his staff and the French officers, and after visiting his mother went on to Kenmore. His sister was out on the plantation.

Gen. Washington, in full regimentals, exhausted, threw himself on his sister's bed, and there she found him on her return asleep. The illustrations are delightful. Here a corner of the salon, beautiful pieces of furniture, pillared porches, a white hall and stairway, unsurpassed.

Fredericksburg, it seems, is a grand old American city, giving even Charleston a run for distinction and picturesqueness. Gari Melchers, one of America's greatest painters, has a studio there and thinks it has more old time charm and local color than any other historic town in the country. The first "Book of Remembrance" at Kenmore, with the names of those who bought it, is closed. And now a second book is started for the names of those who will help to restore and save the dear old dwelling.

Service for French President.

So much going on at the moment, what with club elections, national politics, people rushing through town, summer plans, week-ends in the country—things one does, things one dodges, the serious, the gay, and a nice little party occasionally rearing up its head!

There was the impressive memorial service for the late President Doumer of France at the Holy Name cathedral. The aisle full of Fort Sheridan regulars with shining trench hats. American flag and tricolor intermingled in joint sorrow before the catafalque; candles here and there; shrill chanting voices of a huge choir from the heights of the baroque edifice. Spotlights playing on the marble whiteness of the high altar. Priests in black robes—one hears a distant oremus over the heads of consuls from many lands.

M. Rene Weiller of France, especially grand in uniform and many medals; and the Godfrey Haggards, they who are so soon to become a part of Paris and its pageantry. The Haggards are charming and friendly people, he a nephew of the author, Rider Haggard, who wrote a book called "She" that brought him fame in the grand old days long ago. The consular corps will give a large dinner of farewell to the Haggards one night this month.

Their successors will be Consul General and Mrs. Lewis Bernays. Mrs. Bernays was a Chicago girl, and her husband was formerly commercial attaché.

Spring Sale on Tuesday.

On Tuesday there will be great doings in Lake Forest when the new house of the Joseph M. Cudahys will be seen with all its beauties. Mrs. Cudahy has given it over to the Eli Bates women for their annual spring sale. You all know about this excellent settlement and the work it does among the Italians, etc., so I will not burst with details about the settlement and the shop at 134 East Delaware place.

David Adler designed, built and furnished the Cudahy house, and while I have not yet seen it I would love to. The sale will include linens, vases and garden accessories, and a quite large group of women interested are lunching and taking their friends on afterward. Among these are Mrs. W. McCormick Blair, Mrs. Dexter Cummings, Mrs. Elliott Donnelley, Mrs. James B. Forgan Jr., Mrs. Charles Haffner Jr., Mrs. William McIlvaine Jr., Mrs. Donald McPherson, Mrs. Lawrence Robbins, Miss Maroussa Russell, Mrs. T. Philip Swift, Mrs. Robert Hixon.

Another thing of the future is the matinée of May 27 at the Selwyn where Cissy Loftus will give a recital of impersonations, past and present. Fired by her success at the Drama league Blackstone luncheon a week ago, when she was alternately Ethel Barrymore and Mrs. Fiske, she is going to be a whole gamut of stage notables: Lady Peel, Sarah Bernhardt, Ada Rehan, and many more whose names I have forgotten.

An amusing lunch it was, with Miss Loftus bearing off the honors; Robert Loraine telling a droll story of his earliest job as an actor when a runaway boy, and Mary Nash and Diana Wynyard looking pretty and saying nothing much.

Again tomorrow at four, tea chez Mrs. Augustus Eddy at 1246 N. State street. This in honor of the Cradle and the chapter of thirty new members which Mrs. Eddy has accumulated in Chicago in the last few months. The Cradle, a favorite charity with Chicago and its environs, has its center in Evanston. There, in a row of three sunny houses, tiny babes are assembled and physically guaranteed for adoption. Horace Bridges is to speak to the new members.

Paintings by Mrs. McCormick.

Another thing, on May 31 Chester Johnson is opening his galleries for a one man show which will continue through convention times. This will be a fairly large collection of the recent sketches, studies, quick portraits and more important paintings of Mrs. Robert R. McCormick. Having had a large, airy studio on an upper floor of the Fine Arts building all winter, day by day she has had models and sitters and subjects and has worked without the minor interruptions of life.

Visitors at the McCormick studio at noon sometimes get asked to stay for lunch. Small tables are scattered about, and a "bite" is served by waitresses with large tray loads who proceed upwards from a restaurant with the "bites," setting them forth temptingly.

The hostess in blue line smock, with artistic casualness, gives you a look at this and that—of beautiful workmanship and very great ability, and a courageous attitude toward art. Lots of the sitters are interesting and well known people. The exhibition will be most attractive.

Another show of a similar interesting character has been going on this week in Kroch's galleries. And Mrs. Carter H. Harrison has led me to it almost by the forelock, so great was her enthusiasm over her friend, Pilar Wittelsbach, or perhaps it is a Hapsburg archduchess, and a nice girl. Very great friends of the Carter Harrisons, this family lives in the old Nymphenberg palace at Munich, and Princess Pilar, short of cash like all the rest of us, has taken to making delightful lithographs of Spain. These sell like hot cakes.

Pilar's Spanish income died when Cousin Alfonso left Spain last spring. Recently she has finished a biography of that ex-king.

Mrs. Harrison has been giving these lithographs, signed "Pilar," and framed, for wedding presents this spring, and quite a stir has been created over this hard working young Wittelsbach in far-away Munich. It seems she specializes in ancient Spanish churches, and the only thing wrong with her collection is that it is too small.

A French Tea.

Another thing I enjoyed was the French tea on Monday at the Charles S. Dewey house. M. Allais and M. René Weiller came in about 5 and the news was out that M. Allais had been reëlected president and "Mme. Dewey" was the new chairman of the executive committee of the Alliance Française, while Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, now living in Washington, was elected head of the distinguished guest committee.

With a world's fair coming on, these are all good jobs, pleasant contacts, official status, and all that sort of thing.

The tea table was gay with scarlet and pink sweet peas, goodies of one kind and another, and tea pourers included Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick, Mrs. Thomas Hinde, Mrs. John Senn, and Mrs. Waller Borden. Mrs. Mulford and Mrs. Barney Goodspeed "assisted."

It was a nice reunion, a unique part of it being Mrs. Howard Linn's French monologue, when from a high angle of the stair she was St. Peter up in paradis, in a fantasy of Rostand's. Lovely looking St. Peter and beautiful French, musical and perfect. And I know.

Two thrilled guests at the party, coming in from Lake Forest, were Miles. Villeray. These two French gentlewomen have taught French to Chicago society for forty years and been decorated by the French government for it.

In Congress a Hero; at Home Only a Husband

old time newspaper men brought up a pleasant young Italian journalist and introduced him as one Fumosoni-Biondi.

The newcomer didn't know what to say or do. It only made matters worse when the fellow who was doing the introducing added: "O, I forgot to give the proper title. This is Count Fumosoni-Biondi."

The young Italian protested: "O, please call me plain mister. Let the titles go to my uncle." Then the newcomer knew that he was not talking to the apostolic delegate, but to his reportorial nephew.

The Rumanian minister, Charles Davila, handsome bachelor, is leaving for home and is not expected to return. The legation is to be in charge of its chargé d'affaires, Frederick Nano, the best bridge player in the diplomatic corps.

Rumor has it that this is a clever way of reducing expenses in this time of depression, and one that will be followed by many embassies and legations. That is, not to reduce the status of the mission by formally withdrawing its ambassador or minister, but to reduce salary expenses by leaving the mission in charge of a chargé.

The Cuban ambassador, happy faced Señor Ferrara, left yesterday for Cuba, where he is to be the new secretary of state. That robs Washington society of its most chic fencing rendezvous. All the attachés at the embassy, as well as the ambassador, are expert with the foils.

Gotham Keeps Many Notables for the Summer

Also at the St. Regis, which is cool though the avenue below is hotter than Hades whenever the sun shines, is Mrs. James Brown Potter, who arrived from Richmond, Va., and will leave for Paris on Wednesday night. Mrs. Potter is not the famous Cora Urquhart, but the second Mrs. Potter, born May Handy, and divides her time between Richmond and her villa at Monte Carlo.

Beth Leary, who has an appetite for excitement beyond that of any other girl in society, has departed for Paris, and will be in and out of the Ritz there until she leaves for Biarritz in July. For quite some time now Beth has had the "thumb rite" for the Americans at the famous resort. Beth runs with the gayest set at Biarritz and her approval means a lot to visiting countrymen.

One hears that the daughter of Daniel Leary has turned over her Biarritz cabana to H. R. H., and that the Prince of Wales will make the beach house his headquarters during his visit this summer. Which will be another feather in Beth's cap.

Also leaving for a European stay are the Lawrence Copley Thaws. Larry and the former Peggy Stout have not yet decided where they will have a villa, and will wait until they get to Paris next month before deciding on Biarritz, Dinard, St. Jean de Luz, Pour Ville or Deanville.

Urban League Plans Conference and Concert

Juvenile Negro Misfits Is Topic of Week's Meet

Recital by Mundy Jubilee Singers Is Expected to Remove Deficit.

By Roberta Nangle.

THREE or four times during each club season the Chicago Urban league sends announcements to the club department which contain news of interest not only to club women but to all persons concerned with social problems. The Urban league, as this column has explained before, is a national organization devoted to the study of urban conditions among Negroes. The Chicago branch, which works in coöperation with the University of Chicago, is to hold two important events this week: A conference on Tuesday and a concert on Thursday evening to enlarge the fund which makes such conferences possible.

During the last four years the local community research committee of the university and the Urban league department of research have been engaged in joint research projects which have brought to light many vital facts about conditions among Negroes.

The first study under these auspices, "The Negro Family in Chicago," was developed by Dr. E. Franklin Frazier, who was director of the Urban league research department at the time the study was made and who is at present professor of sociology at Fisk university. The results of Dr. Frazier's research were published in book form recently by the University of Chicago press.

To Hear Result of Study.

This year the joint research committee has taken up "Juvenile Delinquency in the Negro Community" as the problem for study. The outcome of months of investigation will be heard at a luncheon symposium and afternoon conference on Tuesday at the Central branch of the Y. W. C. A. at 53 East Monroe street. Mrs. Wendell E. Green and Dr. Ernest W. Burgess of the department of sociology are co-chairmen of the research committee and Dr. Burgess is to act as chairman of the conference on Tuesday.

The speakers during the luncheon will include Judge C. W. Brooks of the Boys' court, Miss Isabel Dolton of the board of education, Mrs. Irene Kawin, deputy chief probation officer of the Juvenile court; Judge Albert B. George of the board of pardons and paroles; Miss Florence Monahan, director of the Girls' Training school at Geneva, and Dr. Paul Schroeder.

At the afternoon conference Earl R. Moses, director of research for the Urban league, will discuss "Community Background of Negro Delinquency." The topic covers the first branch of a thorough study now being made of juvenile delinquency among Negroes in Chicago. The committee on findings and recommendations, of which Prof. Harrison A. Dobbs is chairman, will report at the conclusion of the conference and it is hoped that plans for checking the rapid increase in Negro delinquency will be made.

Co-operating Organizations.

Among the child welfare organizations coöperating in the conference are the Adult Education council, Chicago Association for Child Study and Parent Education, Chicago Federation of Settlements, Chicago Woman's aid, Council of Social Agencies, Illinois Children's Home and Aid society, Institute for Juvenile Research, Juvenile Protective association, Woman's City club, South Side Boys' foundation, and the City club.

The research department of the Urban league is supported with funds raised by its members under the chairmanship of Mrs. Green. In order to make up a deficit which was carried over from the league's last fiscal year the committee is sponsoring a performance of the Mundy Chorister Jubilee singers on Thursday evening at Mandel hall on the University of Chicago campus. This group of fine singers, under the direction of James A. Mundy, was twice accorded first honors in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE music festival. The chief soloist will be James Burdette, the famous Negro baritone who was first made known to the public at a TRIBUNE festival.

Tickets for the concert may be secured by mail from the concert committee at 3032 South Wabash avenue, or at room 203 of Cobb hall at the university. Miss Roberta Burgess is chairman of the concert committee.

Club Ethics

By Maude Swalm Evans.

THE club editor had spoken about publicity at the morning meeting of the district clubs and some of the publicity chairmen were discussing the talk as they waited for the afternoon meeting to begin.

"It was a joy," said the Parko club chairman, "to have some one tell us, for once, what to do instead of telling us what not to do."

"Don't forget our speaker said it takes a person with ability and discretion, as well as one who is accurate and prompt, to make a good publicity chairman," the Northside club chairman reminded them. "We, of course, are all good publicity chairmen."

"If she knew how we have to hound some of the department and committee chairmen for what we get, she'd credit our work even more," stated the Parko club chairman.

"No matter how carefully we check up, mistakes sometimes creep in," sighed the Tuesday club chairman. "I made one last week, and instead of coming to me a member tried to persuade our president to call up the paper about it."

"There are some members who never do anything but know more than the chairmen," put in the Parko chairman.

"Another thing I've noticed," observed the Sunshine club chairman, "is that every time one club gets some unusual publicity the members of every other club want to know why their club doesn't get more. They don't stop to figure that to get unusual publicity a club has to do something unusual or outstanding."

"Didn't the club editor say that when we had something with real news value we could write or call the city editor?" asked the publicity chairman.

"That's what I do," answered the Civic club chairman.

"I know the club editors will run pictures of officers or chairmen on special occasions, but how about other pictures?" asked the new publicity chairman. "We had a Depression party a while ago and some of the costumes were so clever they should have been in the papers."

"I usually call the picture editor," answered the Civic club chairman. "If my material sounds fresh and catchy, or if the names are important, he'll send a photographer around."

"I know I'm going to love the work," said the new chairman as the gavel sounded and the meeting came to order.

Question.

"Should debate on a question be written in the minutes?

"Secretary."

Reply.

What is done by the club should be recorded, not what is said by the members, or no more than is necessary to explain the action taken by the club.

Art Notes

The tenth annual exhibition of the Chicago No-Jury Society of Artists opened yesterday in the Gallery of Modern Life, Diana Court building, too late for comment in today's column. Next Sunday will see it reviewed.

The Lakeside Press galleries announce an International Poster exhibition, poster art applied to travel advertising, for the months of May, June, and July.

The players of the School of Dramatic Art in the Goodman theater put on a delightful version of "Enchanted April" a few weeks ago. The playing was excellent. This week they are giving "Lady Windermere's Fan," by Oscar Wilde, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights with a matinée Thursday.

As an Art institute associated project the Goodman theater is dear to the hearts of many people. The student players are carrying forward the flag so bravely raised by Thomas Wood Stevens.

The Municipal Art league will have a tea at the Chicago galleries at 220 North Michigan avenue from 3 to 5 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. All members of clubs affiliated with the Munic- the tea and view the fine exhibition ipal Art league are invited to attend now being shown at the galleries.

A painting new to the Art institute galleries is the beautiful "Spanish Woman with Fan," by Juan Baptista del Mazo, loaned to the museum from the Charles Deering collection and hung in room 50.

Historical Keys to City of Marseilles Among the Missing

MARSEILLES, France.—(AP)—Here's a warning to all kings, international bankers, world's heavyweight champions, and Hollywood contest winners: Keep away from Marseilles!

Not but what it isn't a nice town. It is, but the official handshakers are all upset.

Some one has pinched the keys to the city, and leading citizens are running around in circles saying "sut alors," which means, approximately, "heck, and then some."

And to make it worse the keys were historical, made of silver some seventy years ago, and were first presented to Napoleon III. They vanished from the museum of the Parc Borely.

Men Vying with Their Women as Window Shoppers

COLOGNE.—(AP)—Oblivious to the frowns of masculine Germany, students of the Cologne university commercial college shattered a time honored idea that women tarried considerably longer before shop windows than men.

Figures gathered from observing 9,071 cases showed the man gazer but .3 seconds faster than a woman in his window shopping.

The students shadowed their cases and found the average time spent before display windows was 18.7 irrespective of the sex of the window shopper.

Clocked by themselves, men gazed 17.3 seconds on an average against the women's average of 17.6 seconds.

Jewelers' windows held the greatest fascination for the women, the report said, while book store displays generally captured the attention of the men.

From the investigation the following figures were discovered:

A single woman averaged 17.6 seconds peeking, a single man 17.3 seconds, two women 20.0 seconds, man and woman, 20.9.

Men devoted an average of 8.4 seconds to frowning at the Empress Eugenie hats.

Reproductions of Degas' Art in Roto Section

This Famous French Artist Sketched Ballet Girls and Parisian Laundresses

By James O'Donnell Bennett.

"The subtile colorist.

"The miraculous draughtsman.

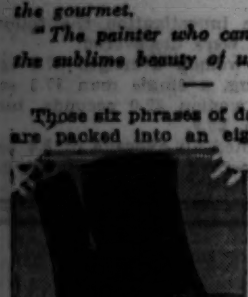
"Bold and original.

"The worst enemy of everything pretty and banal.

"The man whose works are caviare to the general and so refreshing to the gourmet.

"The painter who can find a joy in the sublime beauty of ugliness."

Those six phrases of dazzling tribute are packed into an eight line paragraph on Edgar Degas in Richard Muther's monumental "History of Modern Painting."



DEGAS IN 1885.
[From Manzi's etching.]

Now turn to the rotogravure section of this morning's TRIBUNE and you will see reproductions in color of two characteristic examples of Degas' work—two groups (the upper one in pastel and the lower in oil) of the ballet girls whom, along with race horses and Parisian laundresses, he painted over and over again because he loved movement and had a supreme genius for transferring it to canvas.

Hilaire Germain Edgar Degas, dead these fifteen years, is now a news topic in Chicago owing to the current loan exhibition at the Art institute of Mrs. L. L. Coburn's collection of forty paintings by eleven Frenchmen who made history—remade it in fact—in the 19th and 20th centuries. In the roster of great men represented in the Coburn collection are Cézanne, Daumier, Degas, Forain, Gaugin, Manet, Monet, Picasso, Renoir, Toulouse-Lautrec, and Van Gogh.

A Memorable Exhibition.

The importance of such an exhibition as the one which Mrs. Coburn, with a neighborliness that constitutes true community patriotism, has made accessible to her fellow townsmen from now until early in October can hardly be overestimated. In it Degas is eloquently represented, and today's color prints in this newspaper appropriately herald the exhibition and the neighborly spirit which prompted it.

Daniel C. Rich, the institute's assistant curator of painting, has, like Dr. Harshe, director of our great museum of art, a gift for phrases of description that are at once spacious and specific. Concerning the men whose works cause the Coburn collection to be a point of pilgrimage for connoisseurs, Mr. Rich made this large statement: "They painted the most beautiful pictures that ever were painted."

Then came the saving clauses.

"Today," Mr. Rich continued, "in the midst of constant experiment with new techniques and new forms, the impressionists, and the use of impressionism by a generation that directly followed, may seem almost as distant as Florence in the 13th century or Venice in the 16th. We are apt to forget that, whatever their limitations, these men did that one tremendous, epoch making thing: they painted the most beautiful pictures that ever were painted. Not—with the possible exception of Cézanne—the most profound, or the most moving, or the most intelligent, but, in the direct and joyous handling of paint on canvas, simply the most beautiful.

Mrs. Coburn's Acumen.

"That quality Mrs. Coburn recognized in them and it shines from picture to picture and from wall to wall in this exhibition.

"I well remember how eagerly a Hungarian nobleman—one of the world's important picture buyers—asked whether he might be permitted to see the Coburn Renoirs, and not infrequently New York dealers, pointing to some especially important Cézanne or Degas, have said, 'Mrs. Coburn has just bought that.'"

All his long life—and he lived to be eighty-three—Degas said what he wanted to, painted what he wanted to, and painted it how he wanted to. He detested popularity and his withering tongue was a great aid to him in enforcing his determination to be unpopular and ever more unpopular.

Surveying Whistler when he was preening about in Paris with muff and staff and other accouterments of "publicity," Degas said to him, "You behave as if you had no talent."

Degas' Sole Request.

"Is there anything I can do for you?" a French official asked Degas, not doubting that he shared the passion of his countrymen for ribbons and grand crosses.

"Nothing," the painter replied, "except to give me a life pass to the Opera so that I can study the ballet as I wish to."

His work was Degas' supreme passion. To the scandal of devotees he would paint on Christmas day. "How," he asked, "could I pass the morning otherwise? God will forgive me for neglecting my Christian devotions for my work."

On his work he bestowed all his powers. His whole life fulfilled the precept of that honest German painter, Philipp Runge—"It is far better to make art live than to live by art."

Anything or anybody that intruded upon his work infuriated Degas. Pauline, one of his models, whose reminiscences of him were both vivacious and authentic, said that one morning when the doorbell of his house in the Rue Victor-Massé was persistently rung, the old man surlily answered it despite the fact that all who had the right of access to him were supposed to know that his mornings were never to be disturbed. Pauline heard a voice saying, "How do you do, dear Master!"

"There is no 'dear Master' here," snarled Degas and put a period to the sentence by slamming the door in his visitor's face.

"It was one of those damned art critics!" he confided to Pauline, and resumed work.

Art critics were another of his detestations.

"His hatred," wrote Marie van Vorst, who knew him, "of the journalist, or even man of letters, who try to write about painting is unlimited."

A journalist who is trying to impart a few interesting facts and vivid opinions about Degas may well take warning. Doing that, he will forbear to venture his own opinions, but, going to the authoritative sources, will frankly quote them. With its habitual courtesy toward all seekers after knowledge the Art institute makes such a task easy and delightful. To help me in my Degas quest Miss Abbot and her colleagues in the institute's great Ryerson library had eleven volumes containing extensive biographical and critical material on this painter laid out for me. Among the volumes was an English translation of Meier-Graefe's superb monograph on Degas, which is illustrated with 103 plates in black and white of Degas' most celebrated oils, pastels and drawings. The books, with many a significant passage indicated by slips of paper, fairly fell open at the most revealing pages. The second volume of the invaluable Muther—in his eloquent chapter XXXIII entitled "Fiat Lux"—vouchsafed the following on the charm of a group of Degas ballet dancers such as THE TRIBUNE pictures this morning:

"These dancers are real dancers, vivid every one of them, every one of them individual. The nervous force of the born ballerina is sharply differentiated from the phlegm of the others who merely earn their bread by their legs.

Delicate Discriminations.

"How fine are his novices with tired, faded, pretty faces, when they have to sweep a curtsey and pose so awkwardly in their delightful shyness. How marvelously he has grasped the fleeting charm of this moment. With what a spirited nonchalance he groups his girls enveloped in white muslin and colored sashes.

"Like the Japanese, he claims the right of rendering only what interests him and appears to make a striking effect—'the vivid points,' in Hokusai's phrase—and does not hold himself bound to add a lifeless piece of canvas for the sake of 'rounded composition.'

"In pictures where it is his purpose to show the varied forms of the legs and feet of his dancers he paints only the upper part of the orchestra and the lower part of the stage—that is to say, heads, hands, and instruments below, and dancing legs above. He is equally uncompromising in his street and racing scenes, so that often it is merely the hind quarters of the horses and the back of the jockey that are visible."

After my hours with the books I followed Dr. Harshe and Mr. Rich to Byron L. Smith room, on the south side of the museum. This is one of three rooms containing the Coburn exhibition, which is given under the auspices of the Antiquarian society. Among the score of paintings hanging in gallery 53 are four pictures by Degas in this order:

NORTH WALL—No. 6, "Uncle and Niece." Period, about 1862.

NORTH WALL—No. 7, "At the Races: 'They're Off.'" Period, about 1870.

NORTH WALL—No. 8, "Dancer on the Stage." Period, about 1878-'80.

SOUTH WALL—No. 9, "The Millinery Shop." Period, about 1882.

Dr. Harshe and "the Knockouts."

In spite of his scholarship—perhaps because of it—Dr. Harshe cheerfully drops into the slang of rhapsody when his enthusiasms lay hold of him. "We are going," said he as we entered the room, "to see two perfect knockouts," and with a swinging gesture he indicated "The Millinery Shop" on the south wall and "Uncle and Niece" on the north. "That shop," he continued, "is one of the swellest pieces of design and color you ever saw, and yet the theme is meager—a Parisian milliner and six hats, four of them on standards, one on the counter, and one in her hands. That is all. But see how Degas has given to hats on standards the effect of a bouquet, and note the rhythm he has carried across his picture by means of the circular lines of the hats. Here his feeling for rhythm is always echoing in his lines. See, too, how he has tied the whole composition together with this broad green ribbon, which he has dropped from the most conspicuous of the hats to the one on the counter, thus eliminating any effect of spottiness in the composition as a whole. That ribbon,

Chicago Painter Seeks Historic Places of the State and Perpetuates Them with Canvas, Brushes and Oils

Lane K. Newberry Plans Trip Down Waterways and Art Exhibits in Town

By Eleanor Jewett.

NEW ideas and fresh plans are always an incentive to enthusiastic approval. One of the best projects which has come our way recently is that of Lane K. Newberry, a young Chicago painter, who has exhibited this winter under the auspices of the All-Illinois Society of the Fine Arts. His proposition is in line with what we already know of his painting, another purposeful sally into Illinois to rout out spots of historic interest to be committed to canvas. His recent one man show at the Congress gave us a number of historic houses, trees and sites which put meaning into sections of the state that before we had considered, possibly, of but little significance except to those who lived there.

"ORIGINAL Home of Brigham Young," by Lane K. Newberry, shown in the All-Illinois Society of the Fine Arts exhibit at the Stevens hotel. Mr. Neberry was also given a one-man show of his interesting historical paintings this spring, under the auspices of the society, at the Congress. He is supplying a new note in Illinois painting. His pictures are valuable data on Illinois history, which is fast being forgotten, and commemorate fast-fading landmarks.

Illinois is full of places where things happened. It has had a great history. In the flush of present day circumstance, when highways intersect highways and prosperous farms and towns stretch on either hand as far as eye can see, we forget how short a while has elapsed since Indians roamed our fields and woods, and Marquette, Joliet, La Salle and Tonti showed the way to capture this beauty for the white settler.

A few miles west of Chicago there is a little elevation, so Mr. Newberry points out, which forms a natural waterway to the west. This consists of the Illinois, Des Plaines, Fox and Chicago rivers in the central part of the state, and the Rock river in the north. The history of these waterways is the history of Illinois and in it is found the reason why a great city like Chicago could be built on a swamp.

Will Travel Waterways.

Mr. Newberry is planning to go up and down these waterways and paint near the various towns those places which are of particular historic value. He plans exhibits in these towns along the rivers and he plans exhibits as well in Galesburg, which is the only large city in the vicinity of Nauvoo with its Mormon history, and in Springfield, because Springfield is the capital of Illinois.

A brief survey of this country bounded by the rivers shows us action along the Rock river in the Black Hawk territory, when the Black Hawk war was in full swing. The Illinois river was used by Marquette, Joliet, La Salle and other intrepid pioneers. The Rock river is now connected with the Illinois by the Illinois and Mississippi canal, a marvelous piece of engineering. This canal branches into a "Y," one arm going to Dixon and the other to Moline and Davenport.

Two hundred and fifty years ago Marquette and the others foresaw the commercial value and possibilities of the Illinois waterways. They originated the idea of the canal which was built later, and then forced into idleness by the development of the railroads. However, the canal project lately has been revived on a much larger scale than was originally intended.

Nauvoo, Ill., is a quiet little town of 1,000, which was founded by the Mormons under the leadership of Joseph Smith. Those of us who think of Utah as the only Mormon stronghold will be surprised at the news of that creed's hold on a part of our own state. The town is practically in its original state, scarcely a chimney has been changed, and all the old landmarks are still in evidence. Mr. Newberry writes that he was born in Argyle, Ia., but that that was really a geographical error, for he should have been born in Nauvoo, Ill., the town of his Mormon grandparents.

Rescues Spots from Oblivion.

A few words concerning Mr. Newberry tell us artistic ambitions first stirred in him during his leisure moments while he was a telegraph operator. So he came to Chicago and enrolled in the Academy of Fine Arts and the Art institute school. Since his student days, not so long ago, he has been painting where he could and particularly in Illinois, seeking out those places which should be remembered, but which are in danger of oblivion.

This present plan of his will take him by motor, painting and exhibiting as he goes, through the state, particularly the part included in the chain of waterways. Rockford, Moline, Galesburg, Peoria, Springfield, Joliet, Aurora, Elgin, and Chicago are on his program. It is ambitious, too, in point of time as he hopes to start the exhibits the first of next October and, staying about two weeks in each city, cover the ground by March 10, 1933. The exhibits will be sponsored by the All-Illinois Society of the Fine Arts, for such a project is dear to the hearts and interests of the society.

One other picture which Mr. Newberry hopes to paint is of the meeting between Marquette, Joliet, and the friendly tribe of Illinois Indians in the exact location of this meeting, which spot he believes he can find. This painting will be exhibited in the schools of the various cities where his exhibits are to hang and it will be presented to the student who writes the best essay, of not more than fifty words, describing this important historical event. The essays are to be judged by the All-Illinois society.

This sounds like a splendid summer enterprise of interest to all Illinoisians and we hope it is carried out and meets with approval and coöperation throughout the state.

Open Air Exhibition.

A plan on foot for an open air exhibition by Chicago artists to be held in Grant park, probably north of the Art institute, in June, has the approval of Mr. Kelly of the park board and of Mr. Harshe, director of the Art institute. It is in line with the suggestions found in the following letter from Frederick Doyle, a Chicago citizen, who writes after seeing the recent garden club show at the Navy pier. It is a pertinent letter and timely.

Mr. Doyle writes: Now that the sixth annual flower show is over suggestions may be made for a better show next year, particularly with the aim of increasing the interest and beauty of the displays by garden clubs at the Century of Progress exposition.

It seems that the annual exhibition, though steadily growing in size, is by no means taking on interest. In fact, the displays appear to have become quite monotonous, there being little that is unusual, novel, or likely to renew one's enthusiasm. The visitor who has never seen one of these shows should, of course, be excepted, for to him such masses of flowers and colors are a thrilling sight. But almost anything becomes commonplace with endless repetition.

Art and architecture can supply the perennial interest and new life which the garden shows should have. In Chicago there are a number of sculptors of national reputation producing works suitable for garden ornamentation, such men and women as Leonard Crunelle, Frederick Hibbard, Alphonse Ianelli, Sylvia Shaw Judson, Viola Norman, John Paulding, Alvin Polasek, Emory Seidel, Ruth Sherwood, and Emil Zettler. These artists should be invited to exhibit sculpture harmonious to a garden setting. Sculpture is never so beautiful as when displayed in the park or garden, as those who visited the San Francisco and Philadelphia expositions and enjoyed the outdoor sculpture exhibits will never forget. The sculptors themselves, therefore, will welcome this suggestion.

Fountain Adds Charm.

From the viewpoint of the gardener, sculpture, particularly in the form of a fountain, lends a touch of romantic beauty which flowers, shrubs, and trees alone can never give. It adds distinction, charm, enchantment to the scene. Strange how few of the wealthy garden makers of America realize this! The great gardens of the world are those which have been made famous, not by nature, but by their architectural and sculptural adornment, particularly the latter.

Sculpture in the exhibitions of the Garden Club of Illinois would instantly raise these shows to an incomparably higher plane, make them fascinating to lovers of art of whom there are hundreds of thousands in Chicago and, no doubt, prove a practical way of increasing attendance.

At the exhibition just closed there were only two statues that could be dignified by the name of sculpture—a piece by Milles, which was shown in two gardens and two sizes, and a small statue by Sylvia Shaw Judson. The so-called sculpture in the large Italian garden would make any artist laugh or cry, depending upon his attitude; laughter for the pieces so seriously exhibited as important sculpture, weeping that a garden so pretentious and finely designed in itself should be marred by statues of so little artistic value.

Other pieces in the show were the ever present terra cotta gnomes, little boys and girls with umbrellas, iron dogs, fish, turtles, china mermaids, and other reminders of the sculpture of the gay nineties, all the way down to the five and ten cent store level of art.

Sculpture Remembered.

Contrast with this the "Garden of Enchantment" of the Oak Park and River Forest Garden club in the show of last year, containing a fountain by Emory Seidel. This garden, which otherwise soon would have been forgotten, was by this sculpture made forever memorable. What a show the garden clubs might have if there were many displays of this kind, each an individual and outstanding thing of beauty. Such a show at the Century of Progress exposition would be the most entrancing and, no doubt, most popular thing the fair could possibly offer its millions of visitors.

It may be recalled that outdoor sculpture was one of the chief charms of the Chicago World's Fair. The MacMonnies Columbian fountain is still remembered as a great masterpiece of American art and many were the reputations founded on the sculpture of the fair. Why not let the Century of Progress do as much for the Chicago sculptors of today and particularly for the young sculptors whose feet are on the threshold of fame, as in 1893 were those of Lorado Taft, Leonard Crunelle, Daniel Chester French, Frederick MacMonnies, Edward Kemeys, Phimister Proctor, and others?

The garden clubs are in a position to do as much for our architects and sculptors of today. No elaborate organization or program is necessary. Each individual Chicago or suburban garden club may beautify its own particular exhibit and the total effect, if this suggestion is heeded, will give the Century of Progress the most beautiful garden the world has ever seen.

An Opportunity.

The last sentence, of course, takes for granted that the garden show will be continued next spring and inspires hope that it may be connected in some way with the Century of Progress effects on the lake front. One can only print the letter [heartily approving and seconding every word of it] and wish that its suggestions may bear fruit and that there will be, somehow and somewhere, a garden beautified by sculpture from the hands of our Chicago sculptors for the exposition guests to delight in.

The garden clubs are many and, united, could bring great pressure to bear upon the officials of the fair before it is too late. Artificial trees, such as we have been told are to be erected on the grounds, would have to look to their laurels faced by the competition in beauty which could be given them were Chicago's "I Will" spirit sufficiently aroused in the garden club members to make them refuse to take "No" as an answer to the plan they might put forward, bearing Mr. Doyle's words in mind.

Degas Reproduced in Roto

I suspect, was an afterthought, and it was a stroke of genius.

Degas' Supreme Attributes.

"To me Degas' supreme attributes are, first, his astonishing sense of design; second, his invention of novel and unheard of linear compositions, and, third, his profound feeling for linear as well as circular rhythms—his passionate interest in the beauty of line itself.

"In every bit of painting before Degas the artist was directly in front of his subject and his eye generally on a level with the heads of the persons in the picture, but Degas looked up to or down on them or from one side, thereby getting the most amusing and interesting angles. He seldom was interested in textures, but in line and movement. Manet did both. Hence his supremacy. To catch a gesture and to keep it fluent when he had transferred it to canvas was Degas' joy and his triumph."

The director's comment on Degas' joy in movement recalled to me Mme. Van Vorst's pithy sentences on that phase of Degas which I had read an hour before. Later I went back to the library and copied them for you:

"He has passed all his life," she wrote, "in transfixing a gesture or a pose. . . . A motion o' the arm alone suffices to constitute for him a creation. . . . He is a painter of the senses. His art is not to be comprehended, but to be felt. . . . It is the instantaneous, the sudden, the transient, the otherwise lost impression which he causes to be caught and forever fixed."

We turned to the north wall.

"Always Drawing Your Eye."

The director lingered fondly before No. 7—the jockeys—because it illustrates, as he put it, "Degas' interest in a linear scheme that is always drawing your eye." The sky, he granted, is no sky at all, and that concession to my bewilderment was a comfort because to me the sky seemed lead.

No. 8—"Dancer on the Stage"—Dr. Harshe passed with a shrug, saying, "It is unfinished. I am not proud of it."

But before "Uncle and Niece" we lingered long, the director musing over its spontaneous quality. "Its spirit," he said, "is all spontaneity, and behold how, by the placing of light on each side of the picture, it strikes twice. Degas always avoided an effect that would frame in a picture."

Mr. Rich caught up the theme, saying: "The whole composition has a snapshot effect. The uncle was reading his newspaper and smoking his cigar, while his niece looked over his shoulder. Suddenly the painter cried, 'Look this way!' and they obeyed. And forthwith this wizard caught and forever fixed what Mme. Van Vorst called 'the otherwise lost impression.'"

And the eyes of uncle and his niece! "Eyes," said a lady whom I escorted later to view the picture, "that look as if they truly were seeing."

Treasures Upon Treasures.

Thus ended my long lesson in Degas. The reader who would go further will have the opportunity at the institute, for in gallery 26—the Potter Palmer room—which is a little to the west and south of the Byron L. Smith room—he will find on the north wall two Degas pastels, "Ballet Girls on the Stage"—"how wonderfully the vastness of the stage is suggested!" exclaimed Mr. Rich—and "The Morning Bath." Toward the west end of the long south corridor on the second floor of the museum is a little bronze by Degas of a nude dancer which illustrates movement and modeling in the round, and on the west wall at the south end of the nearby corridor 33 are four drawings by him of women, jockeys, and horses.

Spanish Prince Finds Work in Paris Factory

Duties of Blue Bloused Mechanic Lightened by Dream of America.

PARIS.—(AP)—The Infante Alfonso d'Orleans, first cousin of the former king of Spain, has gained the job he wanted in the suburban Ford automobile factory here.

Starting recently as a clerk, he now is a blue bloused mechanic.

Until the fall of the Bourbon dynasty in April, 1931, he was chief of the Spanish royal air squadron. He went aloft with American pilots several times when he visited the United States a few years ago.

Time for Hand Work.

While his wealth dwindled with the establishment of the Spanish republic and the brilliant court at Madrid scattered, his thoughts turned to America, because he regards the mechanical field there as "the most progressive in the world."

The prince went from Madrid to Zurich, Switzerland, where his two sons, formerly betrothed to daughters of Alfonso XIII., are working for engineering degrees. He wrote to Henry Ford asking for a job and was offered a place in the Paris factory. He hopes it will eventuate in a place in Detroit. Besides, he thinks:

"This is a time when everybody should be doing something with his hands."

Busy Assembling Motors.

So the infante, lean, bronzed and 45, has plunged happily into the task of assembling motors.

He begins work at eight, lunches on beef stew in the mechanics' canteen, and dines every night with his mother, the Infanta Eulalia, in her convent pension.

The infanta, who is the aunt of the ex-king of Spain, has been his greatest ally in his determination to go to America. She bought his work blouse and she cancels social engagements so that she will be home when he comes from work.

His wife, Princess Beatrice of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, who is a sister of Queen Mother Marie of Rumania, expects to join him here later.

Science Work Won Princess Highest Honors in Germany

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN.—How science helped a Russian woman to highest honors in Germany, gave her a beautiful rococo castle among lovely rolling hills and forests at Hohenheim near Stuttgart as a setting for her work is revealed in the life story of Princess Margarethe Andronikow. She died at Hohenheim near Stuttgart at the age of 52, bemoaned by Germany's world of science and her numerous friends.

She was the first woman given a professorship in Germany. Hers was a life full of work, adventures, and hardships. Once the princess was sentenced to die before a firing squad. She was rescued only in the nick of time.

The princess, née Baroness von Wrangel, was of German-Balt extraction. She studied at Tuebingen and took her doctor's degree at Leipzig university. Then she proceeded to Paris, where she became the assistant of Mme. Curie. Already at that early stage of her career she made herself a name as a chemical expert for the research work she conducted at the Radium institute in Paris. Sir William Ramsay, famous British scientist, invited her to London, where she acted as his assistant.

In 1912, the princess received a call from the Institute of Agriculture in Reval, the present capital of Estonia. As chief of the agricultural research department of this institute she remained at her job when the Russian revolution broke out. The bolsheviks seized her as a hostage and she was sentenced to death by a revolutionary tribunal. Before the sentence could be executed she was rescued by German troops.

The princess returned to Germany, where she earned her living lecturing on science. In 1920 she was appointed assistant of Dr. Areboe at the College of Agriculture in Hohenheim near Stuttgart. Two years later she was given a professorship, the first professorship ever to be bestowed on a woman in Germany. She was made head of the department for plant nutrition.

Five years before her death she married Prince Wladimir Andronikow, a former Russian guards officer who had been forced to flee to Germany after he had distinguished himself in the White army fighting against bolshevism.

Ban Concerts at Spas.

LINZ, Austria.—(AP)—The Association of Austrian Resorts has decided that business at the various "cures" will not permit payment of composers' royalties this year and has voted to abandon free concerts at the spas.

No Coffee in Turkey.

SMYRNA.—(AP)—This city is "dry." There is plenty of raki, the Turkish version of "white mule," but not one drop of coffee, the national drink, because the city exhausted its quota under the new import restrictions of the Turkish government.

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark.

Chicago, May 25, 1880.

DEAR JULIA:

Do you think you could come out to spend a week with me during the Republican convention, which meets June 2? I believe it would be a most interesting time to come, what with so many notables here. I suppose Grant will be nominated, in spite of the opposition of many to a third term. Will says the odds are in favor of Grant in all the betting going on. Of course, there is Blaine, who is quite strong, too. So there is enough uncertainty to make it exciting. Let me know as soon as possible, and do say yes.

We attended a beautiful musicale last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick on Rush street. They are our near neighbors and Mrs. McCormick is one of my most admired friends. She is very unworldly—"other-worldly," as some one calls it—and it is a blessing to talk over with her the higher things of life. Wealth has not spoiled her, and I really believe her chief interests are those pertaining to her church or, as she often calls it, "the Kingdom of Heaven." She is especially interested in missionary work at home and abroad.

The occasion of the McCormick party was the 21st birthday of their eldest son, Cyrus H. McCormick Jr., and it was a lovely evening, one we shall long remember. The McCormick house is one of the most elegant in Chicago—built of brown stone and massive. A great hall sweeps through the center of the house almost to the rear, a hall noticeable for its great size and its handsome woodwork, which is of satinwood and maple. On the left as one enters is the music room, finished in beautiful hardwoods and with walls hung with fine paintings. Back of this is the drawing room, where the woodwork is of rosewood, maple, and satinwood. On the right of the hall is the parlor, while back of that is the library, finished in ebony and having an inlaid ceiling with mahogany beams. The dining room is very handsome, done in Flemish style, having a lovely frescoed ceiling and walls hung with Gobelin tapestries.

The dining room last night had remarkable table decorations, done by a florist, of course. Nowadays the set pieces the florist makes for such a great occasion look almost like statuary. On the table in the center was a floral horseshoe supported by two cornucopias and surmounted by a lyre, all of flowers. The entire piece was about two and a half feet high.

We went up to the third floor for the concert, and found our host and hostess waiting there to welcome us. The concert hall, as it is called, occupies the front of the house on the third floor, and is a fine place in which to entertain a large group. Mrs. McCormick looked too lovely for words, I thought, as she stood at the entrance to the concert room. She wore a white silk gown, made with a demi-train which was trimmed with double rows of satin plaiting, headed by a flounce of rich black lace. She has such dignity one feels as if in the presence of a queen in addressing her, though she is not in the least arrogant.

Cyrus Hall McCormick, second of the name in Chicago, has a winter home at 20 East Burton place. His summer residence is Walden, Lake Forest. "Martha Esmond" tells of his 21st birthday celebration. This picture was taken in the 80's.

I inclose a program of the concert, so you may see what a treat we had. Isn't the rose colored satin on which it is printed elegant? You'll notice that Miss Fanny Kellogg, the well known soprano, was the star of the occasion. Julius Fuchs, the musical director, had provided a fine orchestra and an excellent double quartet of men's voices. I always enjoy a male quartet. This one sounded like a great organ in some of the selections.

The Handel aria, which Miss Kellogg sang, was very well done. I liked that the best of anything, but Will preferred "By the Blue Alsatian Mountains" and "Tender and True," which he said were more in his line.

After the concert we adjourned to the dining room, where a delicious supper was served. All the old guard was present at the party—Judge and Mrs. Mark Skinner, the Hon. and Mrs. Isaac N. Arnold, Mr. and Mrs. Perry H. Smith and their daughter, Emma; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Medill, Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Isham, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. King [all of these being near neighbors]. Then there were the Henry H. Dibblees [Mrs. Dibblee is a sister of Marshall Field], the R. W. Pattersons, the Potter Palmers, Gen. and Mrs. A. C. McClurg, "Long John" Wentworth and his daughter, Roxanna; Arthur Ryerson, the Elisha Whiteheads and the George H. Laflins; Col. and Mrs. W. S. Johnston [the latter one of the lovely brides of this spring, the exquisite Judith Waller]; Mr. and Mrs. Otto Matz, the T. B. Blackstones, the Williams girls, the Jesse Spaldings, the Keeps, and the Kerfoots.

There was a group of young men—the Keep brothers, Chauncey and Watson Blair and their cousin, Edward Blair, and Thomas D. Jones. Young Martha had a grand time with all these agreeable young people. Sandy, too, took a little time off from his medical studies to be gay, for he didn't forget, he said, that it was Cyrus McCormick who had introduced him to Martha. Young Cyrus is a very handsome, likable fellow.

Weren't you interested to read of the ovation Gladstone received when he came back to the house of commons last week? I do admire him so much, fine Christian gentleman that he is. I read a few words he said the other day about his return to political life: "Looking calmly on this course of experience, I do believe the Almighty has employed me for his purpose in a manner larger and more special than before and has strengthened me and led me on."

It is beautiful to read of the devotion of Mrs. Gladstone to her great husband. Did you see the pretty story about her recently? The Gladstones were spending a few days at the country place of a friend. Mrs. Gladstone and the hostess were seated at tea on the terrace, while above Mr. Gladstone and the host were looking out from a balcony on the grounds. Below, Mrs. Gladstone and Lady Blank were discussing some vexed problem, perhaps the Irish question.

Said Lady Blank, finally: "Well, it is a difficult problem, but it is a comfort to know that there is One above who understands it all and who will one day make it plain."

"Yes," responded Mrs. Gladstone, "Mr. Gladstone will be down very soon, and he will explain the matter to us." To her he was "the one above who could explain it all." Naive and very sweet.

Will complains that I never seem to mistake him for the Almighty, but I tell him that I shouldn't want to marry a Gladstone. I prefer a Will Esmond, fine Chicago lawyer—dear, good husband and father—to the pillar of fire that seems to me to symbolize the great Gladstone.

I must close and go to call on Mrs. Herrick Johnson, wife of the new pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian church. Every one is so delighted that this great church is to have so gifted a minister. He comes from Auburn Theological seminary and is about 43 years old, I hear. They say he always draws large audiences whenever he speaks and is popular with his ministerial brethren.

I heard such a pleasant story about him the other day, which showed his tact, humor, and gentleness, even as a young minister. He was attending his first general assembly [the Presbyterian annual gathering], and made a motion which one of the older delegates thought quite radical. He rose and put the young Mr. Johnson in his place, giving him quite a scolding for his rashness.

Dr. Johnson took the reproof in good part, recognizing, perhaps, that his motion had not been quite wise, and quoted a scripture verse, which quite disarmed his antagonist. In his fine voice, and with a whimsical look on his face, he said: "Let the righteous smite me; it shall be a kindness; and let him reprove me; it shall be an excellent oil, which shall not break my head." The whole assembly broke into applause, they say, at the gentle way in which he had received a reproof which, even though deserved, many young ministers would have resented bitterly.

Now, I really must run along.

Lovingly yours,

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

Footnotes.

Cyrus Hall McCormick of 20 Burton place and Lake Forest is the "young Cyrus H. McCormick Jr." whose 21st birthday party "Martha" and "Will" helped celebrate in 1880. The house at which this celebration took place still stands at 675 Rush street, and is looking lovely just now, with spring flowers and shrubbery in the large yard. It is one of the homes of Harold F. McCormick.

Dr. Herrick Johnson, once pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian church, later became a professor in McCormick Theological seminary. He is still remembered for his influence over the Presbyterian ministers of the northwest.

"Thou, too, sail on, O Ship of State!
Sail on, O Union, strong and great;
Humanity, with all its fears,
With all its hopes of future years,
Is hanging breathless on thy fate!"

So far, in epitaphs sent in, the odd and curious have predominated. Can any reader furnish an epitaph which has more than this to commend it? We will offer Ben Jonson's:

EPITAPH ON THE COUNTESS OF PEMBROKE.

"Underneath this sable hearse
Lies the subject of all verse—
Sidney's sister, Pembroke's mother.
Death, ere thou hast slain another,
Learn'd and fair and good as she,
Time shall throw a dart at thee."

Send epitaphs, Longfellow quotations, Beloved Little Home Town offerings, and Jumble Jar contributions to Herma Clark, care of THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE.

New Type of Air Coolers Installed in Railroad Diners

CONSOLIDATING their plans for the comfort of passenger travel, American railroads have announced inauguration of a new type of air conditioned and air cooled dining cars. This is a method of supplying wholesome air at correct relative humidity and comfortable temperatures.

Dr. W. M. Barr, assistant to the vice president in charge of operation of the Union Pacific system, relates that the air cooling features may be compared with one's household refrigerator or the cooling systems in theaters and office buildings, although the installation of such a system on a car, which must move long distances at high speeds, involves some difficult problems. Obviously, the weight of the equipment cannot be disregarded, as in the case of stationary plants, and this equipment is still heavier than the railroads would like to make it on account of the necessary increase in the load carried by the car.

Most of the refrigerating gases used for cooling are either so disagreeable when released to the atmosphere or so toxic that leakage into the car would be dangerous to the passengers. This condition the railroads avoid. Chemical research laboratories and refrigeration engineers have worked for a long time on this problem. In 1931 the Du Pont Research laboratories developed a gas which is readily compressible and which boils at so low a temperature that it makes an excellent refrigerant. This gas has been given the name of "Freon," first known as "F-12." The chemical name is Dichlorodifluoromethane. The gas has been tested by the United States bureau of mines and found to be virtually nontoxic. This permits the use of the gas in cooling coils, over which the air passes without danger in case of leaks.

Maine Season Opened.

AUGUSTA, Me.—The opening of hundreds of summer cottages at scores of resorts along the coast and among the inland lakes and mountains has inaugurated the vacation season in Maine this year, several weeks earlier than in other years. Public utility companies' records show an unexpected early influx of vacationists, as indicated by applications for electric light and power service.

Geneva Committee Finds Improvement in World Outlook

GENEVA.—(AP)—Improvement in the international economic outlook is reported by the unclaimed wealth utilization committee of Geneva, which finds these four grounds for optimism:

The attitude of statesmen upon the problem of reparations is more logical and more conciliatory.

British sterling has become stronger on the foreign exchange market.

The United States "is attempting to tackle the deflation menace" through the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

"The wintry weather has passed, and in the spring almost anything will bloom, from primroses to reconstruction finance corporations."

The legislative remedies introduced in America, however, are far from adequate, the committee says, because they do nothing to promote buying.

"Governments, instead of cutting down expenditures," says this authority, "should come out as fearless buyers of goods and services."

Poster Campaign Started to Direct Tourists to Mexico

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MEXICO CITY.—The tourist office of the Bank of Mexico has begun a campaign to direct the tourist movement toward Mexico. Seventy thousand posters carrying legends descriptive of the beauties of Mexico for the tourist and visitor are to be distributed throughout the United States and Mexico and radio stations will broadcast nightly similar legends.

The posters will be handled by the railroads, steamship companies, hotels, and other concerns interested in directing people to Mexico. This is but the beginning of this advertising campaign by the bank, which indirectly represents the Mexican government in its tourist activities.

Part of the tourist radio advertising program is to be directed to hotel proprietors and capitalists interested in them with a view to having some of them come here and build modern hotels at the numerous points that are sure to become stopping places for tourists as soon as the six or seven great national highways now under construction are open to traffic.

Croats Eager to Be Freed of Serbian Rule

Seek Political Autonomy and Chance to Preserve Native Culture.

By William Shirer.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ZAGREB, Jugo-Slavia.—After over two years of dictatorship, during which King Alexander promulgated no less than 1,620 laws in a probably sincere but certainly desperate attempt to consolidate his heterogeneous kingdom, the Croats and Slovenes remain more bitter against Belgrade than at any other time since they were induced to unite in the kingdom of Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes after the war.

If the parliamentary régime which culminated in the shooting of Stephan Raditch and four of his Croat deputies in the skupshtina on June 24, 1928, did nothing to bring the various minorities together, the dictatorship has definitely driven them farther apart.

Here in Zagreb you find the Croat separatism stronger and more determined than ever before. Many of the Croat leaders may be dying slow deaths in prison cells; the rest of the leaders, not yet jailed, may be hounded to death by spies and detectives; Croat newspapers may be suppressed, Croat public meetings prohibited, Croat universities carefully watched and spoon fed with Serbian propaganda. Yet the fire of separatism smolders and burns. All of the brutality and terrorism of the Serbian gendarmerie cannot stamp it out. After all, why should the Serbians succeed where the Austrians and Hungarians failed after a thousand years?

No Deference to History.

To understand the difficult minority problem in Jugo-Slavia you must remember that, though the Serbs Croats, and Slovenes are similar as regards race and language, they differ in everything else. For this only history can be blamed, but in Belgrade they do not take their history very seriously, if at all.

Originally these three peoples were three branches of the same Slavic tribe which drifted into the south Danube valley in the seventh century. The Slovenes, in the northwest of what is now Jugo-Slavia, came under German domination. The Croats, to the south, became attached to the Hungarians, who ruled them from 1102 until 1918, with some breaks, but always allowing them a certain amount of autonomy, including a parliament of their own. The Serbs settled to the east and, after establishing a considerable civilization of their own, were finally overwhelmed by the Turks on the Field of the Blackbirds on June 28, 1389—for five centuries a day of mourning in Serbia and now the national holiday.

The Serbs became orientalized, adopting the manners, culture, and point of view of the Turks, though maintaining many of their own sturdy racial qualities. The Croats became westernized and took quickly to the culture of western Europe. Serbia looked to Constantinople, Croatia and Slovenia to Budapest and Vienna. The Serbs were Christianized from the east and became Greek Orthodox. The Croats and Slovenes received their Christianity from Rome. They became fervent Roman Catholics. The Serbs employed the Cyrillic alphabet from the east. The Croats and Slovenes wrote in Latin characters.

Contrast in Cities.

Zagreb, the Croatian capital, grew into a small Vienna, a beautiful little town with baroque buildings, with clean boulevards, exquisite hotels, good restaurants, a great university, and one of the best theaters in Europe.

Belgrade remained a mudhole, its buildings little more than shacks, its streets either muddy lanes or paved with rough cobblestones, its inns shabby and filthy for visitors accustomed to the luxury of western hotels. Now, of course, as the capital of one of the largest eastern European states, it is picking up. But the airs and the odors of the orient remain. The good burghers from Zagreb look down on it with contempt and resent being under its sway.

When the Croats and Slovenes decided to unite with the Serbs in a union of the south Slavs it was on the understanding that they were to retain a considerable autonomy. But since June 28, 1921, when the constituent assembly proclaimed the constitutional, parliamentary monarchy, the Serbs have been in the saddle. Their main aim has been to Serbianize the whole country.

The cabinet positions, diplomatic appointments, and other high government posts have gone mostly to Serbs The army has been completely Serbianized. Not a Croat has been able to become more than a colonel. The generals are all Serbs, though the troops, of course, are more than half non-Serb.

Ruled by Serbians.

Croatia itself is mostly ruled by Serbians appointed to their provincial posts by Belgrade. Croatian towns are garrisoned by troops from southeast Serbia, rude fellows who hardly speak the language and whose personal habits the westernized Croats sometimes find a bit filthy.

What Croatia wants, according to its leaders, Dr. Macek and Dr. Trumbith, is an opportunity for self-expression. It wants to maintain its own culture, which it believes superior to that of the Serbs, or at least more to its own liking. To achieve this it wants some form of political autonomy. And as long as it remains within Jugo-Slavia it wants to have a voice in the direction of state affairs. At present, its leaders point out, it has neither.

Nor does the future hold out much for it. The new constitution forbids the formation of political parties, associations, or even athletic or social clubs "on a racial, regional, or confessional basis." The king, having learned nothing from the experience of the Hapsburgs, who in their last days were finally brought to admit that racial unity cannot be imposed from above, is determined that he can establish a new people, the Jugo-Slavs.

Whether he can succeed where the emperors of Austria-Hungary failed remains to be seen. So far he has met defeat at every turn of the road.

TIRANA.—(AP)—The American Near East foundation will build here, on a site donated by King Zog's government, an agricultural school to teach young Albanians, accustomed to highly primitive rural life, the latest quirks in modern farming.

Yellowstone Park to Be Opened to Public Saturday

YELLOWSTONE PARK, Wyo., May 21.—A number of warm days have aided greatly in the disappearance of snow from the roads in Yellowstone National park, and with the help of a snow plow rented from Idaho it will not be long before travel will be permitted over some of the highways. This was announced by Supt. Roger W. Toll.

With the exception of the sections from Gardiner to Mammoth and Tower Falls, no travel will be permitted in the park until May 28, but on that date the north and west gates will be opened to the public. The opening has been advanced a few days this year in order that early visitors may avail themselves of the three days' holiday in connection with Memorial day. It will probably be a week or two after June 1 before travel will be possible over the east or south roads, due to the abundance of snow in those areas.

So that followers of Izaak Walton may wet their lines, the fishing season will be opened also on May 28 and many a big trout, after the long lull of the winter, will be ready to snap at anything which might appear on the water.

Hapsburgs Seek Home.

PRAGUE.—(AP)—The ministry of the interior has received applications from two members of the Hapsburg family for permission to reside in Czechoslovakia. One came from Archduke Josef Ferdinand and the other from Duke Max Hohenberg, son of the Austrian archduke assassinated at Sarajevo in 1914.

Adams on Official Contract

Entries from One Hand to the Other Most Important in Play of Contract Bridge.

By Charles True Adams.

THIS article might very well be called "How to Get What You Apparently Haven't Got When You Have to Get It." In the Sunday article of April 10 we discussed the finesse from several different angles. We spoke there of the great advantage of leading toward certain high card combinations from the weaker hand. This knowledge, however, is of little avail if the player is unable to benefit by it when the hand from which he wishes to lead does not contain a card that can take a trick.

Manifestly, if you cannot place the lead in the weak hand you surely cannot lead from that hand toward the stronger hand. For simplicity's sake we will assume in this article that the weaker hand is always the dummy, and that we are always wishing to lead from the dummy toward our own or closed hand. Now, if the dummy contains an ace, or a king of a suit and we hold the ace, it is a simple matter to lead over to the dummy hand in order to get a lead back in another suit.

While it is usually a simple matter to get over at least once to the dummy hand there are times when it is necessary to lead two or three or perhaps even four cards from the dummy in order to produce the result desired. Now, in addition to the obvious entries there are often so-called hidden entries in the dummy. These so-called hidden entries which you must make serve the purpose are sometimes high cards and sometimes low cards. Let us take a few examples:

Suppose dummy holds in any suit, let us say clubs, the A-Q and 10 and we hold the K-J-9. Here we can get three leads from the dummy if we wish, provided that we are careful in overtaking the king from our own hand with the ace in dummy and after the lead back of the other suit we are careful to overtake the lead of our jack with dummy's queen and the lead of our 9 with the 10 in dummy. All these entries are fairly obvious. Almost too much so to deserve the word hidden entries. Let us, however, take another example. Suppose we hold this hand:

DUMMY.	CLOSED HAND.
♠—4,3,2	♠—A,Q,J
♥—4,3,2	♥—A,K,J
♦—A,K,Q,3	♦—J,10,9,2
♣—4,3,2	♣—K,Q,5

Now let us suppose that the opponent on our left leads a heart. We, of course, play a small one from the dummy and regardless of what the third hand plays we take the trick. If the third hand plays the queen we take it with the king. If they play anything smaller than the queen we take it with the jack. Now it is obvious that we want to finesse the spades and the clubs. If we find the ♠ K on our right well guarded we will have to finesse that suit twice to make both our queen and jack. If we find the ♣ A on our right, again well guarded, we will have to finesse the club suit twice unless the ace is played on the first finesse, which is unlikely. That means then that we wish to get into our dummy hand four times in order to lead that number of times from the other side of the board. We have three obvious entries, the ♦ A-K-Q. We also have, unless we get a poor adverse distribution [poor from our standpoint], a fourth or hidden entry in that diamond suit. We will therefore take great care to save our little ♦ 2 and instead lead the ♦ J to dummy's A. We now lead a small spade back from dummy and if the king does not come up in the hand on our right we play the queen of spades. We now lead our ♦ 10 to our ♦ K and again lead a small spade from dummy, and this time, if the king does not appear on our right, we play our jack. Now, if both opponents followed to both of our diamond leads it means that there is only one diamond left in the hands of the opponents. Therefore all of our diamonds are going to be good. We therefore lead the ♦ 9 to dummy's ♦ Q and lead back from dummy a small club, and if the ace does not come up on our right we play the king. Now for our least lead. We can lead back our ♦ 2 to dummy's ♦ 3, making a hidden entry, for our fourth lead from the dummy. We now can lead from dummy a small club and if the ace doesn't come up we play our queen.

Here is another example of taking care of the entry situation. Suppose these cards:

DUMMY.	CLOSED HAND.
♠—K,2	♠—A,J
♣—K,Q,10,9,8	♣—J

Assuming there is no entry in dummy in either the diamond or heart suit, then in order to make use of dummy's clubs declarer must take great care when a spade is led by West. In the first place, if declarer carelessly wins with king in dummy he is lost. Instead he should play low from the dummy and win with the ace—not the jack. Even though the queen does not come up do not win with the jack but with the ace in the closed hand. Now the ♣ J should be led and overtaken with the K or Q in dummy and the suit continued until the opponent's ♣ A appears.

Then it will be a simple matter the next time closed hand gets in the lead to lead the ♠ J to dummy's ♠ K and run the club suit. Should declarer, when leading the ♣ J, have played a low club from dummy the opponent's would hold up their ace and then he would have had to use the only entry in dummy in order to lead the clubs again, and once the opponent's ace was played the dummy's clubs would be useless.

There is no other element of the play as important as this knowledge of entry making.

Happy Jobless on Dole Present New Australian Problem

CANBERRA.—(AP)—Workless men and women in Australia are contentedly "nesting down on the dole."

The problem of this workless army, apparently content to be unemployed for life, is causing such concern in political circles that Joseph Lyons, prime minister, summoned a conference of the heads of all Australian states.

Large numbers of professional men are now "on the dole," and it is reported that they make ends meet and find the absence of worry an agreeable experience.

Avignon Town Council Mars Old Ramparts

Beauty, Dignity of City Count for Little with Provincial French.

By Alex Small.

PARIS—[Special.]—In a recent number of Illustration there is a page of text and photographs which must have given a jolt to lovers of the beauties of France.

The subject—in this case one might say the patient—is Avignon. It is one city of which no one, I imagine, forgets his first glimpse—that mass of domes and red roofs and, towering above them, the white majesty of the Palace of the Popes. Among the great small cities of the world Avignon has a place, along with Florence, Oxford, and Heidelberg.

Some of its inhabitants are apparently tired of so much beauty and renown. As the photographs in Illustration show, they have taken a good step toward destroying it. For years there stood along the ramparts at the gates a number of ramshackle wooden wine shops. They were not objects of beauty but neither were they conspicuous and one had the consolation of reflecting that they could not last forever.

Job Speeded Up.

The municipal council of Avignon authorized their replacement by hideous little cement buildings. Lovers of the old city did their best to stop this business, but in vain. The ministry of fine arts telegraphed to the prefect of the department of Vaucluse to forbid the construction. He sent an official paper by a bailiff to the mayor of Avignon, whose only answer was to tell the contractors to speed up the job.

For good measure, the same authorities have recently built huge sheds along another section of the ramparts to serve as a municipal market. Their activity seems tireless. The same article informs us that they were with difficulty prevented from tearing down a lovely old chapel for no reason at all. They wanted completely to destroy the quarter of Balance, with its fine and dignified mansions of the eighteenth century. Presumably they will never be happy till they have demolished the Palace of the Popes.

Preference for Ugliness.

This story suggests some comments: First, French people of culture and taste, if they do not want to see their artistic patrimony entirely destroyed, cannot intrust its safeguard to local authorities. The latter are naturally average men with small town minds. As such they not only have no sense for beauty; they have an active preference for ugliness. The case is worse in south France, where almost all men in politics are smitten with a rage for a notion they call "progress."

Next, here is a glaring example of the apparent helplessness of French officialdom. A minister of a prefect issues orders, which a subordinate official, the mayor of Avignon, calmly disregards. And, as we say, he will get away with it. Their administrative methods are, of course, the business of the French people, and I have no intention of offering them unneeded and unwanted advice. But any one has the right to notice what the results are in a case like this.

The conclusion is that the leagues and societies for the preservation of French historical monuments will have to find a method whereby the usual good natured haphazard system is suspended in cases which interest them. Here argument and back chat are fatal; local officials simply have to be coerced by the inflexible hand of higher authority.

Turning Away Tourists.

The work of preservation cannot be done by scholars and esthetes alone. Men of wealth and of influence have to join them. That makes me wonder where, in this Avignon business, was the tourist trade. Its heads may be insensitive to their own interests. Had they no way of bringing pressure to bear on the municipal council of Avignon?

Perhaps they think this a small matter and that it will not hurt them. They may be right, but in the long run a constant succession of such incidents will have an effect. And they are happening constantly. One day it is the port of Cassis which is in danger; another it is the magnificent avenues of sycamore at Mirepoix which are destroyed; another it is the local newspaper of the Roussillon coolly talking of demolishing the Fort Saint-Elme which crowns the heights above Collioure.

To such things a good part of the customers of the tourist trade may be indifferent, and that part is likely the more profitable one. It includes the big spenders who go to fashionable resorts where people amuse themselves by being rich together. But there is the other kind of tourist, the serious one, who has come "to see ruins and curiosities." Those customers count by their number, if by nothing else, and their importance is bound to increase with the years.

Yankee Explorer Is Protected by Chinese Bandits

TO have been protected and actually aided by bandits on his travels through the "big sticks" of China and in the hinterland of Mongolia in the course of his hunt for antiquities was the experience of H. Leo Gould of New York City, who arrived in Seattle last week on the President Taft.

Mr. Gould, alone except for the companionship of these reputed desperadoes, pursued his search beyond Kalgan and far northward of the Khingan mountains. He lived with them in their khans, or native inns, ate their great slabs of sheep meat, and drank their brick tea, eking out meals from a modest supply of cheese, canned fruits, and vegetables which he carried with him.

"The objects of my search," he said, "were the stone carvings and bronze utensils of Chinese dynasties which were in power long before the Christian era. I was successful, and have brought back many rare pieces, including some ancient pottery.

"Peking, these days, is quiet. Yet the old city, while passing through a period of quiescence, is active in a modern sense. The city's administrators, including Chang Hsueh-liang, are repairing various temples and buildings in the old Forbidden city and out at the summer palace.

"I came down through inner China, passed through the province of Shansi, and visited Hankow before reaching Shanghai. Nowhere in my wanderings did I suffer any hardship or any mishap. Instead, I was helped at every turn by government officials, high military officers, and by my bandit friends of the north."

Villager in India Attacks and Kills Panther with Ax

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LAHORE.—A villager near Hoshiarpur recently attacked a full grown panther without firearms, drove him from the human prey he had begun to devour, and killed him. The story has just been learned here.

The incident is the most recent of a sort that arise frequently to refute the allegation that the British ban on firearms for long generations has made the Indian soft and timid.

The panther entered the village of Ambota, near Hoshiarpur, at dusk, attacked a carpenter named Sanhta, and began to chew his arm. But Gaudhri Gopala, hearing Sanhta's screams, picked up an ax and rushed on the beast. In the course of a fierce fight he hacked the animal to death.

The panther's hide has been brought to Hoshiarpur to the district magistrate, and it is expected that the hero will be rewarded by the government. Gopala is a member of the Rajputs, a breed with an ancient reputation for valor.

Englishman Heads Attempt to Scale Kashmir Mountain

JAMMU, Kashmir.—An attempt will be made this summer to climb Nanga Parbat — Naked mountain—26,669 feet high, and the fourth highest peak in the world. The leader of the expedition will be F. S. Smythe, young British mountain climber, who holds the present record, having reached the top of Mount Kamet last year. Kamet is 25,431 feet, the highest mountain ever to be conquered by man.

Smythe has a fine record of Himalayan climbing. He was a member of the Dyrenfurth expedition which in 1930 attempted the mighty Kangchenjunga, second highest in the world and only some 800 feet lower than Mount Everest. He was one of the members of the Dyrenfurth party to scale Jonsong peak, 24,344 feet; also Ramthang peak.

Nanga Parbat—Everest, Kanchenjunga, and K2 exceed it—is in the western Himalayas, about 85 miles north of Gulmarg and one of the sights in the northern part of the Kashmir valley.

This is the lowest rate ever offered on the 22,424 ton "Monarch of Bermuda," the only ship afloat that provides a private bath with every room. With her two swimming pools, three cafes, $250,000 dance deck plus the new low rate, she is seeking the title of the "most popular vacation ship on the Atlantic."
